"The Racket"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

Editor of the Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

HOLLYWOOD, June 9.—One of the best stage plays of the season just closing comes to the screen in "The Racket." Thomas Meighan is its star, and he hasn't had as good a picture in many a long day. Lewis Milestone directed for the Caddo Company, which with young Howard Hughes at the helm, looks like one of the coming producing organizations in the field. Paramount is releasing.

For once Meighan is provided with a bang-up cast throughout. Louis Wolheim, famed for his "Two Arabian Knights" rookie, plays the king of the bootlegging gang, Scarsi. Marie Prevost is the little cabaret singer, who turns to the cause of right out of motives of revenge. Richard "Skeets" Gallagher does the lackadaisical reporter, with a bottle in one overcoat pocket, and a copy of the American Mercury in the other. Lee Moran is the other reporter, Sam De Grasse the slippery State's Attorney, and Dan Wolheim is responsible for an excellent bit as the detective sergeant who finishes off Scarsi. They also secured G. Pat Collins from the stage version to play the officer who is shot by Scarsi, and he gives a capital performance. John Darrow is the cub reporter, and George E. Stone, Scarsi's brother. They are all very well cast.

you have your best picture since "Manslaughter" in your latest—"THE RACKET"

¶ Your performance as fighting "Captain McQuigg" ranks with the finest of your career. In Louis Wolheim, Marie Prevost and the others you have virtually an all-star supporting cast—and class tells. ¶ Lewis Milestone, your director, did a great job. Howard Hughes and The Caddo Company lavished freely upon this production—and you have come through nobly. ¶ Paramount is proud to distribute "The Racket" because we know it will make big money for the Exhibitors of America!

GOOD PICTURES

Today more than ever before Good Pictures are the foundation on which this business must rely.

No business of any kind can be any greater than the quality of its product.

Good Pictures must be produced up to an ideal and not down to a destructive budget.

Last year the stars and producers of United Artists pledged themselves to produce Good Pictures—the best that talent, energy and money could make.

That promise was more than fulfilled.

For 1928-29 each United Artist again subscribes to our ideal—to produce the finest attractions that each can create.

With knowledge of their sincerity I confidently endorse their personal pledge and heartily commend to you this season's United Artists Pictures in testimony of our faith in the business-building value of Good Pictures.

Diversified product offering a world of exploitation possibilities

A Pathé production unit is now at Annapolis, making a big special with the colorful background of the Naval Academy. Watch for "Annapolis" with Jeanette Loff and John Mack Brown. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Original story by F. McGrew Willis.

PATHE is selling more than pictures. Pathe is selling box-office results. In its great program for the new season, Pathe has dramatized factors in the public eye—and always with an eye to the box-office. Think of what the public's interest centers around—Nicaragua, aviation, the Far East, the aftermath of war, royalty, show folks, the prize ring, romance of the business world, the struggle for law and order. These and a score of other factors of this snappy, modern age that are talked about and written about are the background for Pathe's showmanship product. These pictures are timely. They bring to a focal point tons of ready-made publicity. They ring true to box-office demands. They give the showman a running start with his campaign—something to say, something to talk about, something to exploit—and it won't fall on strange ears. The keynote of Pathe's program is showmanship—pictures plus.

Four great Pathe specials with the indelible stamp of S. R. O.

They are ready for screening and in their screening is the proof that they are showman's product — big names, striking background, up-to-the-minute themes, melodramatic action.

Variety Reveals a Secret—

Pathe's Floating Lab

A new apparatus called a "floating laboratory" has been perfected by Pathe to hasten the development and printing of shots taken at big events by news reel cameramen. It consists of four trunks, about the size of the sample cases used by traveling men. Two men, a developer and printer, take the film from the camera boys and rush it to a hotel. The trunks have been set up in a room, where the film is at once put through the process necessary for developing and printing. It is quickly dried and prepared for a projecting machine.

The pl n is adopted whenever shots of big events are taken in places any distance from the regular labratories. The time element is the one responsible for the innovation.

YEARS of experience, years of slow building, years of studying the wants of the public, years of team work, years of thought and labor, aggressiveness and sincere endeavor combined with the instinct of the showman, have made possible today's mighty accomplishments of Pathe News. When the public thinks of a news reel, it invariably thinks of Pathe News. And the reason is that Pathe News is delivering the goods. There are news reels and there is THE NEWS REEL. That's PATHE NEWS.

For 17 Years PATHE NEWS Has Been

is a sure winner as the box-office candidate.

It's a race now between Pathe News and the printing presses. Other newsreels are left at the post. Pathe News pushes on, utilizing every modern factor for speed and progress. The balloting for Hoover starts at the Republican Convention. Before it is completed, Pathe News flashes the message on the screen of the Main Street Theatre. (Pathe News has moved on Kansas City with its own secret portable laboratory.) An hour after the convention opened, Pathe News released prints for the immediate territory. The entire country was covered in 24 hours. Millions of theatre patrons, through Pathe News efficiency, sat in on the pictorial story almost simultaneous with the newspaper pictures. At Houston, it was the same achievement—a nation-wide beat for Pathe News. No wonder the Rooster is as well known as the elephant or the donkey. No wonder a Pathe News camera is the symbol of the cinema. Pathe News yesterday—today—tomorrow, the keynote of your program, the people's choice, the showman's choice.

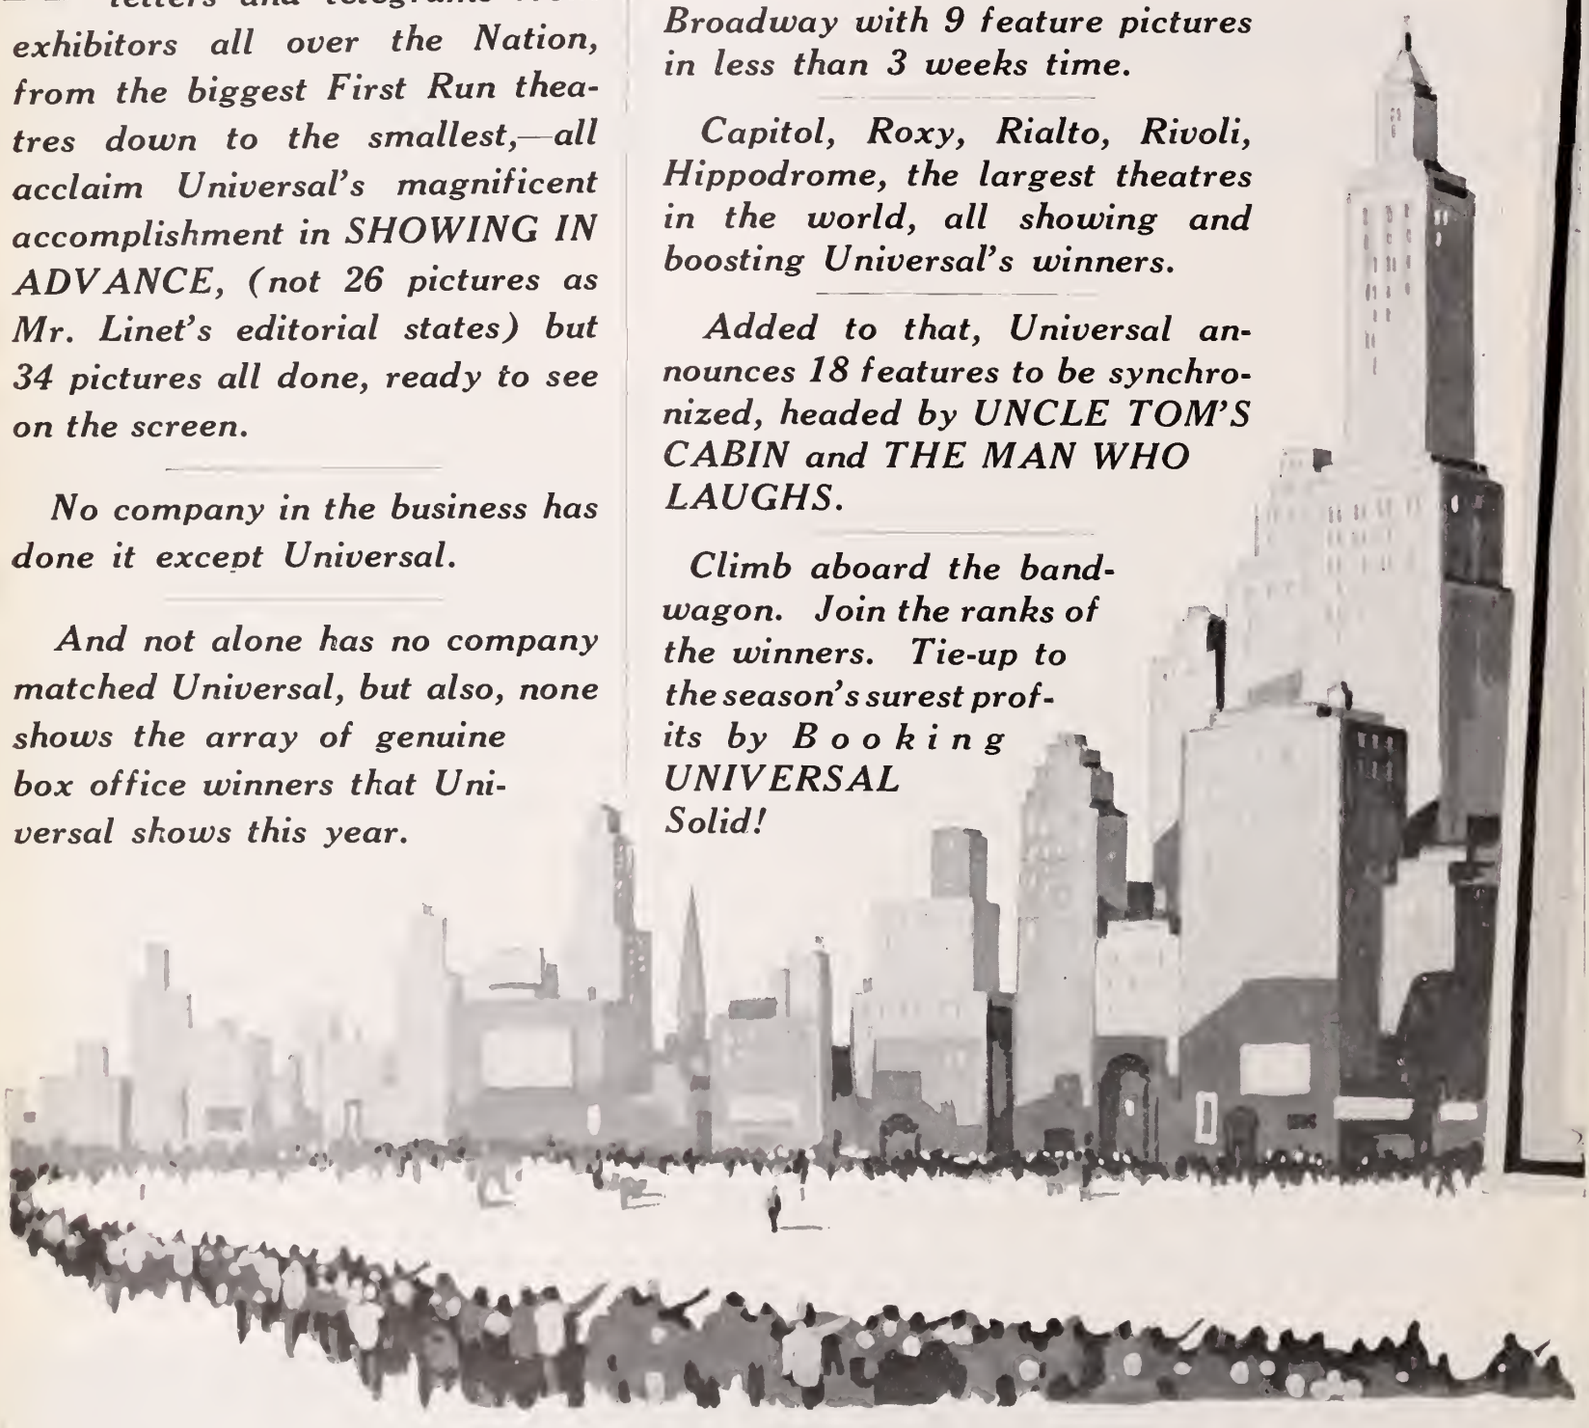
HUNDREDS of congratulatory letters and telegrams from exhibitors all over the Nation, from the biggest First Run theatres down to the smallest,—all acclaim Universal's magnificent accomplishment in SHOWING IN ADVANCE, (not 26 pictures as Mr. Linet's editorial states) but 34 pictures all done, ready to see on the screen.

No company in the business has done it except Universal.



And not alone has no company matched Universal, but also, none shows the array of genuine box office winners that Universal shows this year.

On top of that wonderful accomplishment Universal crashes Broadway with 9 feature pictures in less than 3 weeks time.

Capitol, Roxy, Rialto, Rivoli, Hippodrome, the largest theatres in the world, all showing and boosting Universal's winners.

Added to that, Universal announces 18 features to be synchronized, headed by UNCLE TOM'S CABIN and THE MAN WHO LAUGHS.

For Doubting Thomases

When Universal announced a few weeks ago that 26 of the pictures scheduled for the year were completed and ready for showing, the Doubting Thomases remarked that even if Universal did have these 26, they probably weren't any good.

Universal has made its answer, and a most convincing one. For three weeks straight, Broadway is to have three Universal pictures showing simultaneously.

Three in a row to appear at the Roxy. The Capitol takes one, and the Rivoli takes one, and the Rialto and the Hippodrome.

Nice representation in competitive theatres. It talks well for the kind of pictures that Universal has ready for the year.

Vol. XXXVIII NEW YORK CITY, JULY 7, 1928 No. 1

Editorial Highlights

An Unofficial Exhibitors' Convention on the Sound Movie

By William A. Johnston

NEW YORK, last week, held an unofficial convention of exhibitors. The sound-movie problem brought them in from all quarters of the compass. In 'most any hotel or restaurant in the center of the city, you were pretty sure to find a knot of showmen, argumentative, but eagerly inquiring. A trade paper editor, as a source of possible information, was unduly popular.

Here are the queries, fired point blank:

Which is the best method—disc or film?

Which is the best machine?

What attractions will be available with each?

Just what are the producers doing? What can they do this year?

What about prices—for the picture, for the synchronization, etc.?

What about music rights?

How about protection for the big theatres?

Should a theatre install now or wait for developments?

And, finally, will the sensation last beyond the novelty craze?

* * * *

SOUND AND NEW PATRONS.—On the latter point there are few dissenters. There is a quite firm almost solemn belief that the sound movie is here to stay, and that it has come in the nick of time to save a box-office situation that was anything but healthy and hopeful.

In this connection there are some important things to say:

The speaking picture has within it the power to bring to the picture house that very large portion of the public which the silent picture heretofore has only occasionally attracted. The success of the George Bernard Shaw specialty, its eager reception by the press critics, is proof enough of this.

There is a vast box-office possibility here which the wise producers will constantly recognize. They will not, of course, cater overmuch to the so-called "highbrow" public. But it does now seem as if the picture could hold its own and still greatly increase its public interest. Its new found voice embraces the spoken drama, musical comedy, vaudeville, songs, stage novelties—the entire show world, in fact, and all its classes of devotees.

* * * *

The sound movie will shorten—as it vitalizes—the picture. In fact, it would appear that at last we have ourselves lifted out of the fallacy that length makes a feature production. The features of this new era of the picture business will be the attractions that put the show over, regardless of their length; maybe the words of a world celebrity, or a song hit, or an eight minute act of most any nature just so its cleverness gets the audience. Shorts, as we have called them, will now find a foremost place in the producer's schedule, and in the exhibitors' advertising.

Of course, this year is going to be a good deal of a hodge-podge. There is now genuine confusion. The new development has come along so fast that, except for those who pioneered, the industry finds itself unprepared—producers and exhibitors alike.

As I say, all are agreed that the business has turned sound movie. But that's the only point of agreement. You can start an argument on any incidental question whatever—a heated one. There is regrettably a lack of specific information. More, from all important sources, would seem in order.

One exhibitor, who is just finishing a new theatre, said: "Well, I've got my electrical conduits in, anyway. I've done that much. But I don't know where to go from there."

* * * *

WHAT ABOUT PROTECTION?—R. B. Wilby, of the Saenger forces, brings up one of the immediate questions and a most practical one. What about the sound movie in the big, first run theatre? And what about the sound movie in the later run neighborhood house? And how are the interests of each to be safeguarded?

You reply, of course, that the first run must have reasonable protection, just as it now has feature pictures. How, in fact, will the sound movie situation differ from the present one?

That's just the point, he retorts. It does differ. The music from the film will be just as good in one house as another. The sound movie levels your musical entertainment, thus far so important a factor in the first run's favor. The first run, with all its expense, its present contracts, its higher admission, must be protected. True. But also the secondary theatre must be protected. And how?

So here's a knotty problem.

All we can say from the editor's chair is this: that these trade problems will be ironed out—somehow. They were just as troublesome when the feature picture butted into the nicely oiled machinery of short reel program service. The public wants the new kind of movie, and the trade will give it, even if it means a brand new trade structure.

One thing we are quite sure of is that the new show will prove the salvation of those many houses whose audiences have been motoring in, some distance, to the larger theatre with its pretentious bill.

* * * *

PUBLIC WANTS SOMETHING NEW.—An important director, just before he entrained for Hollywood, growled gloomily over the sound movie. He was not alone, we told him, in his frame of mind. Sales managers are also having headaches. They, too, would like to kick the damn thing over in another yard.

We suggested, however—as we started doing twelve or more years ago—that directors ought to travel elsewhere than straight between Hollywood and New York. It would be a grand thing if they even tried selling film. They would find out, for instance, that the public is not buying the standard Hollywood product; even the high cost, satin finish stuff is stale to the palate. The people want something new.

* * * *

A BIG FIELD.—Will the novelty of the screen's voice last? Yes, undoubtedly. But quality had best come quickly to the front; and new stunts, too.

In all probability they will. There is such a wide range of material, of adaptation. Then there will be mechanical improvements upon the flat, black and white picture. Now that the screen people have human voices they must have human figures. Where are our third dimension effects? What of the Widescope? Why don't the color people talk about their stuff?

* * * *

PICTURE AND SONG.—A preview of "Warming Up," the new Richard Dix baseball picture, was given at Yonkers the other night. Also it was shown to Jesse Lasky, who got a great kick out of its new sound effects. There's a love song and a baseball song, and the yelling from the bleachers, etc. Won't it be interesting to have a picture give birth to a nation-wide song hit! And to have a song hit put over a million dollar picture!

* * * *

PROSPEROUS.—It's great to meet an exhibitor with a smile, these days. Abe Blank says that conditions in the corn belt are better than they have been since 1922. And his theatres are benefiting, as are also those of Finkelstein and Rubin.

Inside Slants on the Industry — PICTURES AND PEOPLE — The Mirrors of Filmdom

EXHIBITORS abroad are watching with great interest the development of the sound picture in America. We get many direct inquiries and reactions because of the superior circulation of Motion Picture News in foreign countries. This week, for example, Duncan Campbell, of the Mosspark Picture House, Glasgow, Scotland, writes us:

"I value your publication more than the other trade organs which I get. I was much interested in your articles on talking films."

* * * *

MR. CAMPBELL goes on to discuss the attitude in his country: "The feeling among cinema people here is not to rush in for this novelty as the interest may not be a permanent one. The prices of the installations are much too high for this country. I see something like £1300 is mentioned as the price for a house like mine which holds 700 people. The admission prices in my case are roughly 18 and 24 cents and on Saturdays 24 and 30 cents, and the prices in the bigger houses range from 24 cents to half a dollar. We have one house in Glasgow that holds 4,000, two that hold 2,000, and quite a number with over 1,000 seats.

"In most houses in this city the program consists of two features, comedy, Gazette and a short feature. Very few houses go in for vaudeville, which is expensive and not very good. The cost of talking installations and, I expect, the consequent increase of the cost of films would put many small houses out of business, for there is little chance of getting higher admission prices from the public."

ALL the rumors in the film industry are not confined to New York. Cleveland has a few rumors of its own. One is that the Statler Hotel will take over the Stillman theatre property and convert the space into rooms. Another is that the Hippodrome will have Vitaphone and Movietone installed during the summer and in the fall will play extended run engagements of the big pictures.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's theatres in Cleveland, was out of town and could not be reached for a statement on the Stillman situation. The Stillman adjoins the Statler Hotel, and it is understood that when the theatre was built twelve years ago, there was an arrangement whereby it would revert to the Statler properties after a certain number of years. The Stillman has always been a first run house. For the past few seasons it has been Cleveland's only extended-run picture house.

THE many friends of M. and Mme. Rene Batigne in the industry will be interested in this item from a recent issue of the Paris edition of The New York Herald:

"The infant daughter of M. and Mme. Rene Batigne will be baptized Marguerite Henriette Emilie this afternoon at Notre-Dame des Victoires. The godmother will be the baby's great-aunt, Mme. Maurice Rouvier, wife of the former Premier of France, and acting as godfather will be M. Emile Moreau, Governor of the Bank of France. Mme. Batigne was formerly Miss Clara Voight, of South Carolina."

A LOWER court in Pennsylvania has decided that the censor board of that state has the right to pass on spoken words in sound pictures in the same manner as silent titles. The case will be appealed by Vitaphone, and, it would seem, will have to go to the highest courts before it will be finally decided.

There are several interesting questions raised by this situation. In the first place, the right of free speech is guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, and the Constitutions of the several states, including Pennsylvania. Provision is, of course, made for the abuse of the right to freedom of speech, but the punishment, if any, comes after the public utterance, not before it.

If it be argued that speech as given on the screen does not come within these constitutional guarantees for the reason that it is only part of an entertainment, then we might inquire: what about the talking news reels, which are actually reports of events just as the newspapers are?

In some states, of course, news reels are not subject to censorship. This is clearly an admission that they cannot be censored, justifiably, without working an injustice on them as publications.

In any event, it is clear that the industry must know to what extent censorship is to figure in sound movies.

"Talkies" Will Revolutionize Stage, Says Brady

Picture People Will Take Legitimate Producers' Thunder, He Declares; Broadway Managers Holding Meetings on "Sound" Situation

By CHESTER J. SMITH

WILLIAM A. BRADY, one of the foremost of the legitimate stage producers on Broadway, is authority for the statement that sound pictures will not only revolutionize the motion picture industry, but the legitimate stage as well. Mr. Brady is well qualified to discuss the subject as the former president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and at one time one of the leading picture producers.

The legitimate producers are much concerned over the sound picture, according to Mr. Brady, and have already held a number of meetings to discuss the situation. More are to follow and what the ultimate result will be is problematical. "But," says Mr. Brady, "only a few of the legitimate producers have foresight enough to see just what is going to happen and the result will be that all but a few of them will be in the same position with the big motion picture producer as the independent picture producer is today.

"The motion picture producer is surely going to step in and take all of the legitimate producer's thunder. It will be the same as it was when motion pictures were first introduced. At that time, the film producers entering upon a new business, sought the aid of the legitimate producer. They made propositions to many of them, but the Broadway producer was too smart. The latter had more vision behind than before him. He foresaw in the picture industry only a flurry that would have its run and die out.

"Well, there are Broadway producers today who feel the same way about the sound picture. They consider them a fad that will die out after the novelty has worn off and that meantime they will capitalize themselves on the present uprising in the disposal of their stage productions.

William A. Brady

"However, there will be more money for the picture producer and more money for the legitimate producer for some time to come than has ever before materialized in either industry. What some of us are trying to do out of these meetings of the legitimate Broadway producers is to get them to enter upon equitable terms with the big picture producer on a partnership basis and there will be plenty of revenue for all of us. They need us as badly in the picture industry as we need them; in fact, they need us worse than we need them, for these sound pictures are just as different from what has been produced in the past as was the feature production to the old two reel comedy or western.

Legit. Stars to Talkies

"Largely as a result of the sound pictures, and, too, because of an overseating in the legitimate Broadway houses, you will see more empty houses along Broadway the first of the coming October than you have ever seen before. That is not necessarily because of the popularity of the sound picture (and reports I have from all over the country attest to its popularity) but rather because of the fact that the motion picture producer is just about going to deplete the ranks of the Broadway legitimate stars.

"There is hardly a star on Broadway who has not already been approached by a number of motion picture companies, and many of them have already been signed up. Why, you can't talk $750 or a $1,000 a week to a star or good dramatic player on Broadway at present. They won't listen to you. And you can't blame them, for they are getting about anything they demand from the motion picture producer.

"I'll give you an instance of how good players are being gobbled up by the picture producers. Only a few days ago a very celebrated old actor came into my office.

Sound Films in Color Coming

Also, Latest Developments Permit Three as Well as Two Color Forms of Printing; New System Boon to Projection

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

Los Angeles, July 2.

WITH the announcement of a feature-length production to be made by the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, new impetus is to be given to this color process, which has shown an almost revolutionary development in the past few months. This feature is titled "The Thrall of Leif Lucky," a tale of the Viking days of the sea, and will be produced on an elaborate scale. The Technicolor organization, which is headed by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, has a staff including Theodore Reed, in charge of production; R. William Neill, as director, and Jack Cunningham as scenarist, who have already been engaged in the production of short subjects.

I talked with Dr. Kalmus today regarding the newer possibilities of color photography, which has already been attracting a wide interest among the producing companies. It is known that they have been watching closely the improvement. Attention was drawn to this fact by statements of Jesse L. Lasky and S. R. Kent at the recent Paramount convention, in which they emphasized the fascination that color holds for the public, whether this be disclosed in the varied hues of automobiles and furniture, or even such lesser items as fountain pens and typewriters.

The improvements in the color photography process have all tended to simplify its use, as well as to better the quality upon the screen. As outlined by Dr. Kalmus the process not only permits a two-color form of printing such as was used in "Wanderer of the Wasteland," "The Black Pirate" and other full length features, but also a three-color reproduction.

The old form was entirely photographic—two different impressions, the one red, the other green, being printed on opposite sides of the film, which was of greater thickness than the normal celluloid strip.

The new system entirely eliminates this. Color is printed in somewhat the same fashion as on a newspaper or magazine press. All the images are on the one side of the film, which is of normal thickness.

Cooney Bros. in Receivership; Stock Holders Hope to Regain Control

THE National Theatres Corporation of which Cooney Brothers were the promoters and executives and which operates ten theatres on Chicago's south side, including such important theatres as the Capitol, Avalon, Stratford, Grove, Chatham and Jeffery, was, last week, thrown into the hands of a receiver by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York City, trustee for the bond issues aggregating $2,500,000 Attorney John D. Black, representing the trust company told Federal Judge Carpenter, before whom the action was brought, that the corporation had failed to make interest payments due on the bond issue. Judge Carpenter appointed the Chicago Title & Trust Company, receiver and James Coston, who has been in charge of the houses for the creditors the last few weeks, will continue as general manager of the circuit.

The Cooney brothers will have no further voice in the management of the corporation, although Ben Cooney has been put in as manager of the Capitol. The stockholders were unable to raise $250,000 before July 1st, which was required by the bankers to keep the properties out of receivership. According to the stockholders committee, however, $75,000 has been raised and $75,000 more pledged and it is understood that the creditors committee will make further efforts, including legal moves, to have the property turned over to the stockholders, who charged that the bankers in making the loan of $2,500,000 deducted 17 per cent or about $425,000 as commission, and also secured a bonus for making the loan, of fifty thousand shares of A stock, having the part value of $1,250,000. The stockholders also alleged that through certain transactions with Cooney Brothers, the bankers secured two hundred thousand shares of B stock and about $77,000 in first mortgage Capitol Theatre bonds, which were forfeited to the bankers when Cooneys failed to meet their subscription for stock. All of this, according to the committee, was done without the consent or approval of the stockholders, although their stock was greatly depreciated in value by the transactions.

Charles Casanave of Associated Theatres, Inc., is reported to have been called in as advisor of the stockholders committee and should the stockholders succeed in gaining control of the theatres, will be placed in charge of the ten houses.

Seattle Policy Changes

U. A. House Re-Opens at Reduced Rate; Orpheum Goes Back to "Two-a-day" After Third Attempt

TWO Seattle theatres recently underwent a change in policy because of lack of patronage and unsuccessful competition with "presentation" film houses. One is the United Artists theatre which has been closed down of late and the other, the Orpheum, a vaudeville theatre which has gone back on a two-a-day basis.

After having been closed for three weeks because of lack of patronage and a weekly loss in operation during the last season, the United Artists Theatre in Seattle, Washington, was reopened by the West Coast Theatres, Inc., on a new 25c straight admission policy at any time, announced as "reduced summer prices." The former scale of prices was 25c, 35c, 50c and 60c, with loge seats at 75c. This is the largest house in the Pacific Northwest ever to attempt a 25c general policy having 1600 seats.

In place of the former 20-piece United Artists Symphony Orchestra, the house now has an eight-piece orchestra. This is a concession on the part of the musicians union, which at first demanded a minimum of 16 pieces, but later acceded to the demand for eight when West Coast officials announced that they would not reopen the house under any other conditions. The present policy calls for weekly presentation of the program films from Paramount, First National and other companies. Billy Hartford, former manager of some suburban Seattle theatres for Universal, has been appointed house manager of the United Artists.

After several months of unsuccessful trying to compete with the two leading "presentation" film houses in Seattle, Washington, on an unreserved seat, 50c admission policy, the Orpheum Vaudeville Theatre in the Pacific Northwest city was scheduled to return to its old two-a-day policy with reserved seats at $1.00 top on July 1. This marks the third policy change since the opening of the new theatre last year, as opposed to the score and more of years previously maintained by one reserved seat policy.

When the house first opened with its reserved seats at 75c and the addition of the picture, the shows were so mediocre that patronage soon fell off and the three-a-day, unreserved policy at 50c top was tried as a remedy. The poor shows were again responsible for the dismal showing of this policy, and so the coming $1.00 shows will be the third and final attempt. The Eastern booking offices promise stronger shows and better films for the new policy, according to local Seattle officials. It is a noteworthy fact that the Seattle Theatre, Publix presentation house, has been paying more per week for its stage shows than the Orpheum has for a complete vaudeville program.

John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings" and other Paramount aviation stories, was married to Fay Wray, new Paramount actress, recently in Easton, Md., where Miss Wray was making "The First Kiss." The newlyweds honeymooned in Washington, D. C., where they stayed for about ten days before visiting New York.

Gary Cooper, co-starring with Miss Wray, with Rowland V. Lee, the director, Leslie Fenton and Lane Chandler, were in New York recently, leaving shortly afterwards for Hollywood.

Walter E. Yeager comes to the sales force of National's Kansas City Branch, with a long record of experience in the theatre supply business.

Pathe to Open Exchange in Jacksonville, Fla.

Definite announcement that Pathe plans to open an exchange in Jacksonville within the next few months was made last week by Southern Division Manager Dan Michalove on his return from Dallas, where he joined Vice-President John C. Flinn, of the Pathe home office, for a regional convention which assembled branch managers and salesmen from the Dallas, New Orleans, Memphis, and Oklahoma City exchanges.

Pathe has long had under advisement the question of an exchange in Jacksonville to facilitate service to Florida theatres. Shipping out of Jacksonville will shorten the jumps and materially lessen transportation charges on film shipments.

Gotham Opens Three New Canadian Exchanges

New exchanges in Montreal, Toronto and St. John have been opened by Gotham Productions as initial steps in a campaign of expansion in Canada. Another will soon be opened in Winnipeg.

Rembusch Appeals to Unaffiliated

THROUGH Frank Rembusch, W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest exhibitor exhibitors association, has sounded an appeal for unaffiliated exhibitors to attend the July 12 convention to be held aboard a like steamer en route from Duluth to Port Arthur, Ontario.

Mr. Steffes asked that aid be given to bring at least two unaffiliated exhibitors from each state; that the importance of a national gathering be made known to them and that the Northwest is giving the independent exhibitor one of the greatest opportunities in the history of the industry to get together while he yet has time. Mr. Rembusch further states that without this national cooperation the independents will never receive the privileges which should be theirs.

Zoning Plan Opposed by Kansas-Missouri

Resolution Adopted Holds Protection Would Be Unequal; Biechele Re-elected President

FOR the fifth consecutive year R. R. Biechele, owner of the Osage theatre, Kansas City, Kas., was elected president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri at the tenth annual convention of that organization Tuesday and Wednesday at the Broadview hotel, Wichita, Kas. A resolution, expressing a vote of confidence and approval of Mr. Biechele's policies, was adopted unanimously. With Mr. Biechele was re-elected his entire board of directors.

The convention was not all harmony, however, as the meeting had not been in progress long before a resolution was adopted, opposing the newly inaugurated protection zoning plan of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade. Theatre owners had looked forward to the convention as a factor which would determine the attitude of exhibitors towards the zoning plan. The convention of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri delegates was that no zoning plan could be arranged to have equal bearing upon all exhibitors. The resolution made it plain that no zoning plan at all was desired by exhibitors.

"No plan for zoning protection can be arranged, based upon the admission prices, seating capacity or anything else," Mr. Biechele said. "Although the plan adopted by the Kansas City Film Board of Trade was not presumably based upon admission prices, it amounted to that, nothing more or less. For instance, I know of a theatre in a certain neighborhood which charges ten cents admission. Another theatre about blocks from that theatres charges fifteen cents. Under the zoning plan adopted, the 15-cent house gets prior rights over the 10-cent house, but the 10-cent house pays more for films, advertising more in newspapers and, as a matter of fact, is entitled to priority over the 15-cent theatre. There is only one way the protection situation can be handled. That is by allowing exhibitor and distributor to continue to barter for terms. No theatre which pays more for films than another house, regardless of admission price, should be made to concede an advantage to a competitor which is unfair. It is not what an exhibitor charges at the box office, but the net profit he is able to make and the amount he is able to pay for pictures."

Non-theatrical enterprises also were pulled upon the carpet for inspection, but, after lengthy discussion, it was decided to leave action on that matter to the M. P. T. O. K-M directors.

Then there was the golf tournament in which Lawrence Bruenninger of the Cozy theatre, Topeka, Kas., won first prize. The convention, in most respects, was among the best arranged meetings of the organization, there being no delay in the program whatever. Various legislative problems were discussed, but those matters, also, were left for the disposition of the legislative committee.

Ameranglo Will Roadshow "Battles of Coronel"

"The Battles of Coronel and Falkland Islands," the British Instructional Films, Ltd., production made with the cooperation of the British Admiralty and the Navy League, will be released in the United States by the Ameranglo Corporation as a roadshow.

100 Upstate Theatres Incorporate Mutual Association

MORE than 100 theatres in New York state, located outside of New York city, and operating independently of chain groups or producer distributor organizations, are behind the incorporation of the Mutual Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. Papers incorporating the organization were filed last week with the department of state at Albany, by J. Myer Schine and John A. May, of the Schine chain of about 120 houses in New York state and Ohio, and A. Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls, who has been prominently identified for many years with exhibitor organizations in New York state.

According to S. B. Pfeifer, of Buffalo, an attorney interested in the incorporation, the organization represents an actual buying power of more than a million dollars, and also said that within a month or so the membership in the association would pass the 200 mark.

According to the papers as filed with the Department of State, the association is incorporated to study, treat and handle the problems of the motion picture industry and the exhibitor: to promote, maintain and extend friendly association among those engaged in the industry: to accomplish reforms and abuses and to handle all problems of exhibitors and to reduce and minimize speculations and losses in the business. Further purposes are outlined as being the control of first run pictures and to systematize distribution and credit.

West Coast to be Given Extensive Protection

Clearance Will Range Up to Nine Months as Means of Combating Ten Cent House Competition

AS a result of what is characterized the ruinous competition of ten and fifteen cent houses it is likely that extensive protection will be given first run houses along the Pacific Coast. This protection will extend up to a period of nine months for the larger chains operating in the big cities along the coast.

This protection is said already to have been acceded to by Paramount, M-G-M and Fox, and will be granted in the near future by other leading distributing organizations, it is said. It comes as the result of a comprehensive zoning plan drawn up by West Coast Theatres, Inc., which for a long time past has seen trouble from the ten and fifteen cent houses that have been showing pictures too soon after the first run houses.

The plan as drawn up by West Coast would give generous clearance over wide territories for all first runs out of the four coast key cities, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland. Out of San Francisco protection of nine months is sought over all theatres charging twenty cents or less.

Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, Inc., has for the past year been advocating more extended protection for the larger theatres. He has repeatedly expressed alarm over conditions existing around Los Angeles, where many exhibitors were cutting their price scales to fifteen cents.

Franklin's first plea came at about the same time that B & K outlined its protection demands for Chicago and other Illinois cities, when the so-called menace of the ten and fifteen centers became serious. At that time protection of one year was broached over all ten cent theatres no matter in what section of the country they be located.

It is now thought that the demands of West Coast and other large coast chains will be met generally by all of the leading producers as long as Paramount, M-G-M and Fox are ready to meet the conditions.

It is thought that improved exhibition conditions will prevail on the coast if the leading distributors yield to the request, and that the results will be more than satisfactory to the distributors. Pictures, it is argued, will move faster, coast cities will pick up product sooner and with more regularity, and thus the distributor will be assured immediate play dates, which in turn will release film for second and subsequent runs at an earlier date even with the extended clearance.

As a part of the plan, as an instance, West Coast would secure the extensive protection it seeks, for its San Francisco first runs only if the theatres in question pick up and play each picture within three weeks of its national release dates. If the product is not picked up in the specified time clearance is forfeited.

James Flinn Resigns Post With Pathe

James Flinn, manager of advertising accessories who tendered his resignation a few weeks ago, left the Pathe organization last Saturday, June 30. Hereafter he will be connected with a large interior decorating firm with headquarters at Evanston, Ill. He and his wife are driving to Glencoe, Ill., where they will make their home. Mr. Flinn was with Pathe for the last three years, and with P. D. C. for the previous three years.

Julius Lewis Starts His Own Printing Company

Julius Lewis, for the past ten years connected with the Prospect Press, has organized a new printing concern especially equipped and outfitted to take care of the printing needs of the motion picture industry. The name of the company is Ellray Printing Company, Inc., located at 40 West 22nd St. Mr. Lewis is president.

Lewis is a veteran film man, having been in the moving picture industry for the last twenty years. He started with the old Sales Company and went with Universal when it evolved from this original combination.

The new concern, centrally located, is fully equipped with its own composing room, bindery and presses of all kinds for rapid printing as well as for the finest color work. The Ellray Printing Co., Inc., opens for business on Monday, July 2.

5 Salesmen Added to U. A. Field Sales Staff

Following a sales conference in New York, at which a policy of nationally selling the United Artists program of 19 pictures was adopted, the following additions to the field sales organization of United Artists were named:

William Trong, sales manager at Kansas City, effective July 2nd; Harry Dodge, assistant district sales manager in Cleveland, effective July 9th; Henry Rosefield, salesman at Washington, D. C., effective July 2nd; Matthew Sullivan, salesman at Toronto, effective July 9th; William Chernoff, salesman at Pittsburgh, effective July 2nd.

In attendance at the sales meeting held in the New York office at which Al Lichtman, vice-president and general manager of distribution, presided, were Cresson E. Smith, assistant general sales manager; Paul Burger, assistant to Mr. Lichtman; Paul Lazarus, sales promotion manager; Moxley Hill, manager of contract department, and others.

Bob White Sells Holdings in Portland, Ore., Chain

Reports received last week from the Oregon territory indicate that Bob White, Portland exhibitor, has sold his entire holdings in the Multnomah Theatres Chain in the City of Roses, and plans to leave the film business. G. T. Woodlaw, of the Circle theatre in Portland; H. C. Phillips, of The Dalles, and Stephen Parker, of the Granada theatre in Portland, are the new owners of Mr. White's stock. The Multnomah Chain, formed by Mr. White, now includes the Bagdad, Bob White, Egyptian, Gay, Granada, Lincoln, Moreland and Venetian theatres in Portland. They are controlled by a group headed by Edward Fantz, and including Hugh McCredie, Jr., William Cutts, F. W. Hamburger, Bert Levy and Russell Brown.

Westwood, N. J., Forbids Sunday Movies

Members of the city council of Westwood, New Jersey, unanimously passed an ordinance last week which forbids Sunday amusements. Protests were numerous from citizens and the only voice raised in favor of the ordinance was that of the Rev. R. A. Westgate, pastor of the Westwood Baptist Church.

Declare Against Block Booking, Percentage

The Northwest Independent Exhibitors' Association at their monthly meeting June 20th went on record as strictly opposed to block booking and percentage. The entire membership numbering some 130 members were present at the headquarters in Portland, Oregon.

Trial of Government Film Case Will Be Delayed Until Fall

OWING to the congested calendars of Federal courts in the New York district, it is anticipated that the Government case against the Hays organization, the Film Boards of Trade and a number of the large distributors will not be brought to trial until Fall.

Some of the cases now on the calendar are of such importance, it is pointed out, that officials are reluctant to take any steps which might result in their postponement. Further, while many of the defendants in these cases might, by postponement, succeed in escaping punishment, it is pointed out that the defendants in the film equity cases are all responsible people who have been engaged in legitimate business for years and give every indication of continuing in business for some time to come, regardless of the pending suit, so that there will be no difficulty in finding them when the case is brought to trial.

Netoco Obtains Houses in Boston and Dorchester

Samuel Pinanski's organization, the New England Theatres Operating Corporation, Boston, has acquired control of two theatres in the New England section, the Central Square in East Boston and the Liberty in Dorchester.

The Central Square, seating 1,800, is located in the heart of the East Boston district. An entire renovation of the house and the installation of Vitaphone and Movietone has been ordered. Samuel Soul, is to have charge of the entire East Boston area. He will be assisted in a managerial capacity by James Wall and James F. Ray.

Netoco leased the Liberty in Dorchester from the Liberty Realty Corporation. The house is to be closed immediately for renovation and redecorating. The date of opening will be announced later.

Territories Sold for "The Last Moment"

The North Carolina, South Carolina, Washington, Ohio and Kentucky rights to Paul Fejos' titleless "The Last Moment," have been disposed of by the Zakoro Film Corporation, of which William H. Horne is sales manager. Previously he had sold the New England and Philadelphia territories.

Nat Royster, secretary of the N. C. T. O. A., has formed the Carolina Film Co. to handle the picture in the Carolinas and Tennessee. Fisher Film Company will distribute it in Ohio and Kentucky, and the Masterpiece Film Company in Washington, Maryland and Virginia.

Royster Suggests Plan

Decries Lack of Interest in Exhibitor Bodies and Would Organize on New Lines

N. L. ROYSTER, secretary-treasurer of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina decries the lack of interest on the part of exhibitors in their state and national organizations, and suggests a zoning plan as a stimulant that would react to the benefit of all theatre owners.

Royster says:

"Some years ago, I advocated the establishing of zone organizations for theatre men, to wit; Say that Charlotte, N. C., exchanges are serving as they do, North and South Carolina territories, then there should be the Theatre Owners' Association of the Carolinas. If Atlanta, Ga., serves four states as it does, comprising Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Tennessee, then there should be a zone organization for theatre owners taking in those four states. These theatre owners' associations should be divided into what we will call 'zones.' Each zone organization would enlist as members those theatres located in those states served by the exchanges in each zone. Each zone organization should have a President, First and Second Vice-President, a Secretary-Treasurer and a board of directors as they now have.

"This zoning plan of theatre owners' organizations would give us in the United States twenty-six zone organizations of theatre owners. Each zone should pay into its treasury a fixed percentage of dues, which should go to the upkeep of a National organization. The officers of the National organization should be elected by the majority of votes cast by the members of each individual zone organization, and the delegates are so instructed to vote when they attend the National organization convention.

"In this manner and along this line, there could be organized and projected, a positive and thorough organization, and each individual zone organization would constitute a solid, live, active body which would work hand in hand with the various film boards of trade for the best interests of every one. If each individual territory were organized into zones, each state and zone organization would then have a voice that would be heard in all formulating of all rules governing arbitration, as well as the drafting of new contracts, should the occasion arise, and other matters which affect the exhibitors of every state, who now have but very little voice in these matters, all things to the contrary."

Blank Sale to Publix?

Mid-Western Theatre Executive Reportd Disposing of Fifty Per cent Interest in Chain

ACCORDING to reports this week, negotiations were about to be closed by A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, for the sale of his theatre holdings to Publix. Mr. Blank was in New York for several days in connection with the deal, but no official statement was issued.

Twenty theatres are included in the proposed deal, under which Mr. Blank would sell his 50 per cent interest in the Blank-Publix circuit in Iowa, Illinois and Nebraska. This would not mean his retirement from the industry, as he is head of the Central States Theatre Co., a chain in Iowa, and is also a trustee and member of the executive council of First Nationl. He recently joined the stock pool which assured the identity of First National, regardless of any sale of theatres by franchise holders.

The theatres which would be included in his deal with Publix are: the Des Moines, Capitol, Strand, Palace and Garden, in Des Moines; the Riviera, Rialto and Strand in Omaha; the Broadway in Council Bluffs; the Capitol and Princes at Sioux City; Capitol and Rialto at Newton; the Riviera at Waterloo; a new theatre in Cedar Rapids which will be opened about September 1; the Columbia, Garden and Family at Davenport, and the Fort Armstrong and Spencer Square at Rock Island.

Harry David, now district manag r of the Publix circuit, acting under Mr. Blank, would be the next general manager of the Iowa-Nebraska-Illinois chain if the Blank interests are sold, it is reported.

Before leaving Des Moines for New York, Mr. Blank admitted that he had discussed such a transfer in January.

"U" Curtailing Theatre Activity in South

Original Sparks Circuit Goes Back to Former Owner; Atlanta Deal With Loew Reported

CURTAILMENT of its theatre activities by Universal in the Southeast is seen in recent developments in that territory.

The Universal circuit of Florida houses passed to the control of E. J. Sparks on July 1, but the deal does not involve the theatres in Leesburg and Lake City, where Earle Fain is a half partner, nor the Capitol in Miami, which is jointly owned by Universal and Wolfson and Meyer.

According to reports from Atlanta, a partnership deal between Universal and the Loew circuit for the Capitol, "U" de luxe house there, is under way. It is said only final details remain to be closed.

It is also reported that Universal is dickering to dispose of its three Atlanta suburban houses, the Ponce de Leon, the Madison and the Fairfax.

The group of houses involved in the deal with Sparks are in Orlando, Plant City, DeLand, St. Augustine, Bradenton, Sarasota, Arcadia, Kissimme and Fort Meyers. They form what was formerly known as the original Sparks circuit which was purchased from Mr. Sparks by Universal about three years ago.

It is not unlikely that these theatres will become a part of the Publix-Saenger-Sparks chain, because of the affiliations now existing between Mr. Sparks and the Saengers and Publix.

It is understood that the Universal Theatres district office in Atlanta, which has been maintained in the Norris building, will be abolished immediately as a result of the Sparks deal.

UNIVERSAL has a large line-up of serials under way for next season, with "Tarzan the Mighty," a lead-off serial, now almost half way through production. "Tarzan," being made from the Edgar Rice Burroughs adventure stories, will, it is said, be produced on a scale and with a production value that tops "Blake of Scotland Yard." Next will come "Pirate of Panama," on the script of which Arthur Henry Goodin and George Morgan are now working. Players are to be announced soon.

Then will come "The Mystery Rider," from the pen of George Morgan. William Desmond is now on his way to Universal City to assume the leading role. Douglas Fairbanks said in London that sound effects would be used in his next production, "The Man With the Iron Mask."

St. Louis Theatres Want Union Wage Cuts

Seek to Reduce Scale Paid to Musicians and Projectionists; Refusal Likely

WITH the most unseasonable summer weather since 1873 and April showers in June; unemployment very widespread and box office receipts far from what they should be theatre owners of St. Louis have taken the initiative in requesting substantial reductions in wages from the musicians and projectionists. The wage contracts with both organizations expire Aug. 31.

In the preliminary discussions with the officials of the local union of the musician's relief has been sought for the small theatres, employing from one to three musicians.

The present scale provides that where but one musician is employed he shall be paid $63 a week for three hours of playing. In two-men orchestras the leader is now paid $63 and the second musician $48 and in three-men orchestras the leader is also paid $63 and the other two players $48 a week each. In the scale proposed by theatre owners the one-man house would pay only $53, in two-men houses the leaders' salary would be reduced to $55.50, and in three-men houses the leader would be paid $58. The wages of the other players would continue at $48. Proposed reductions for musicians would be continued to smaller houses.

The projectionists have been requested to accept a straight ten per cent reduction.

It is possible that both musicians and projectionists will flatly reject the wage reduction proposal. Under the leadership of Stephen Butler, business agent, the St. Louis musicians' local was perhaps the first in the United States to take a firm stand against any movement to discontinue orchestras in theatres where synchronized pictures are installed. When Vitaphone was first installed at the Capitol by Warner Bros. the St. Louis musicians insisted that the theatre employ a regular orchestra. There were numerous conferences on the subject, but when the Vitaphone opened the regular orchestra was on hand and was paid in full notwithstanding the Vitaphone furnished all of the music needed.

Similary when Skouras Bros. installed the Vitaphone at the Grand Central the musicians insisted that a regular orchestra be employed and these musicians are now paid the full union scale for playing but two minutes at each performance.

The St. Louis musicians have also opened a determined drive against all picture theatres that use mechanical organs, phonographs and other substitutes for human orchestras. Pickets have been placed in front of these places and in addition, automobile trucks have been operated throughout the city advising the public of such substitutions.

Butler was the first union leader to utilize the radio to work up public sentiment against Vitaphone, Movietone and mechanical organs, and regularly he takes the air via WIL, one of the St. Louis broadcasting stations, and tells listeners between Denver and Pittsburgh, Canada and the Gulf that the theatre owners who are making such substitutions are pocketing the money saved by cutting musicians off the payroll without making any reduction in admission prices.

The St. Louis musicians also were among the first to raise a special fund to combat mechanical organs and one per cent of wages are contributed by members of the union. The national body will raise a similar fund.

New Incandescent Lamps to Be Used for Jolson Film

As a result of the test of incandescent lighting conducted at the Warner Bros. studio in California, this type of lighting will be used exclusively in the filming of Al Jolson's new Vitaphone vehicle, "The Singing Fool." This decision followed a series of tests made with Jolson last week in which the incandescent equipment and the new panchromatic were used.

T. O. C. C. and Sapiro Ask Delay in Buying

A DELAY in film buying, pending further recommendations from them, is the advice of the T. O. C. C. and the co-operation of exhibitors headed by Aaron Sapiro to independent exhibitors in the greater New York territory. At a meeting of the two associations held last Tuesday the action was unanimously adopted, the conference agreeing that the new contract contains provisions requiring added study. Business conditions require analysis on which to base rentals, the two associations agreed. It is understood that more conferences are planned.

"Man With Iron Mask" New Fairbanks Vehicle

"Douglas Fairbanks next picture will be "The Man With the Iron Mask," a sequel of "The Three Musketeers," based on the further exploits of D'Artignan, Fairbanks' role in the former picture.

As nearly as possible, Fairbanks will reassemble the east of his original picture. Leon Baray, the Freneh aetor who played the role of Athos, has arrived in Hollywood to play the part again. Marguerite de la Motte will again be seen as Constance, the heroine. At the present time, it is not known how many players of the original "Three Musketeers" will be seen in the new picture. George Siegmann, the original Porthos, has already passed on.

Mauriee Leloir has been engaged by Fairbanks to aet as art advisor on the production. The artist, who is 75 years old, arrived in New York last week from Paris and after a few days in the city he departed for Hollywood.

Fairfield Exhibitor Will Fight City Blue Law

Although the trial of W. F. Walsh, manager of Fairfield's only moving picture theatre, who was arrested for operating his theatre on a Sunday, has been postponed to July 7th, a fight against the recently adopted city ordinanee will be carried on by him.

Walsh declares he will plead not guilty when called before Mayor Pratt. Through his attorney he will charge that the ordinance, under which he was arrested, is illegal. Under the new city ordinanee, he is liable to a fine of from $25 to $100 and 30 days in jail. If he is fined in Mayor Pratt's court, he will appeal to the higher court, Walsh says.

Originally Birmingham decided against Sunday shows. When Walsh opened his theatre the week following the eleetion a fight was begun against him by churehmen, but Mayor Pratt declined to adopt a blue law ordinance. A straw vote held also determined against Sunday shows. The city counеil then adopted the ordinanee prohibiting them. The mayor neither signed nor vetoed the bill.

Three Projectionists in St. Louis Houses

THE St. Louis projectionists have applied drastic rules for houses using sound pictures. In the Grand Central Theatre three projectionists are used on each shift instead of one man as with regular pictures, and all theatres in this territory that install the Vitaphone will have to use three projectionists.

The stagehands' union has also insisted on the employment of a member of that union if a phonograph or other mechanical musical instrument is used on the stage of a theatre. Recently one theatre that used some Al Jolson records in connection with a picture paid a stage hand for being present.

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

William A. Brady Discusses Sound Films

Veteran Legitimate Producer Sees Many Changes for Future

He has starred in some of Broadway's biggest productions, but his popularity has been on the wane for some time and he wanted to borrow some money. Immediately I thought that sound pictures were just the spot for him and I mentioned it to him. 'But how can I get to the producers,' he said. I gave him a letter to four of them and within twenty-four hours every one of them wanted him and he is now signed to a year's contract.

"The motion picture industry has been a mighty fortunate one, but I think this innovation of the sound picture is the luckiest break it ever had. It dropped right out of heaven, as it were, just at a time when things looked anything but bright. Four times now the industry has had a break and there have been brains enough in it to seize upon the breaks. The first was in the production of shorts, whose novelty at the time would carry them over. Then came the advent of Zukor, Lasky and Fox and others and the introduction of the feature film. The feature film brought a new era of prosperity and it continued to prosper until it made too great demands on the literary markets of the world. Good stories could not be manufactured at the terrific rate they were being consumed. There came a weakening in the stories and a corresponding falling off of audiences. So-called presentations, vaudeville acts, burlesque, bands and other things saved the situation.

Not a Mere Flurry

"Interest was again on the decline, when suddenly out of nowhere came Vitaphone, Movietone, Photophone and other sound recording and reproducing devices and as a result there is greater interest in pictures today than there ever was before. This is not just a flurry. Sound pictures are here to stay. They don't know much about them now, as they didn't know much about anything in the industry when they first started the production of short subjects, but there will be developments, and perhaps greater developments than ever before. Meantime the novelty of the sound pictures will get them over in healthy fashion and by the time the public starts tiring a bit of the crudeness that is now displayed, there will be revolutionary measures that will again revive interest to the peak.

"And while all this is going on the legitimate stage is going to suffer and only the smartest of the legitimate producers are going to be able to keep up interest in their playhouses. What is the legitimate stage going to do in the absence of its established stars? The smart legitimate producer is going to develop stars overnight. That can be done, but it takes a smart producer to do it. Never in the history of entertainment has there been such a chance for new talent. You will see names by the score in electric lights on Broadway in another year or two that you have not heard of to date. That will be just as necessary as it is for the motion picture industry to supplant present-day screen stars who cannot read lines or act with players of the legitimate stage.

"I have hear it said that screen stars who have attained popularity will be instructed in voice culture and the tricks of the legitimate stage and that they will not be at a disadvantage when they are heard on the screen. Don't let anybody fool you into thinking that is so. Some of them will get by largely because they have had legitimate stage experience, but the great majority of them will require long, hard training before they become proficient in all of the little tricks, if they ever do. Why, that has been our greatest trouble on the speaking stage. You will see actors and actresses who have had years of experience and they don't know how to enunciate or read lines yet. Their defects will be accentuated on the screen.

Long Training Needed

"Can you imagine how some of these stars will sound by contrast when they appear in a picture with a Barrymore, Ruth Chatterton, Mrs. Fiske or dozens of other stage stars I could name? It is not a question of days or weeks, but of years to acquire all that is necessary to meet the requirements of these sound reproducing devices. Hear Lionel Barrymore in 'The Lion and the Mouse' and you hear absolute perfection. Who but the greatest stars can enunciate so clearly and put the right inflection into every line. Why, his line in that picture, "Now I'll give you another tip,' is an absolute classic. Barrymore will be about as big a star as pictures ever had as a result of these sound pictures. You can't develop Barrymores in a day, and as I see it it means a complete revolutionizing of the ranks of motion picture stars if the full value is to be had from talking pictures.

"It will be just as necessary too to have competent direction from the angle of the stage as it will be to have stage talent on the screen. The motion picture director who has had no experience in stage direction will hardly be qualified to produce the new type of motion picture. To my way of thinking it will be much more necessary for

Talkie Highlights

WM. A. BRADY, veteran Broadway legitimate producer declares sound pictures will revolutionize both pictures and stage; that picture interests will sign all stage stars and a new crop of the latter must be developed over night.

Union problems are showing a marked increase with new ones arising daily as the result of the many installations of sound devices being made in theatres.

Hollywood production plans are rapidly taking shape, with many sound pictures already in production and others being prepared to go into work in the immediate future.

Joseph M. Schenck warns against hysteria over sound devices and points out that intelligent production of films will remain the sustaining force in entertainment.

Harold B. Franklin, presdent of West Coast Theatres, Inc., writes entertainingly and instructively on sound showmanship.

Pennsylvania jurist rules censor board has same right to censor dialogue in pictures as the pictures themselves.

Exhibitor urges careful handling of film as a big factor in the success of sound pictures.

Sennett Ready to Make Short Comedies with Photophone

MACK SENNETT, producer of comedies for Pathe, after months of preparation, will soon begin production of two reel comedies with RCA Photophone talking and sound effects. The man who produced the first one reel comedy, the first two reel comedy, the first six reel farce comedy; who orginiated the Keystone Cops and the bathing beauties, is taking another step which is destined to have a vast influence on the short subject of the future.

When Sennett began the construction of his new studios at Studio City, California, he had already begun to plan for the application of sound to his comedies. In consequence, sound proof rooms were included in the new plant. Now he is ready to begin production, and the first of the Pathe comedies with talking and sound effects will probably be ready in early autumn.

The way in which Sennett makes use of the Photophone will not be along conventional and obvious lines, it is said. He promises a surprise to the trade and the public alike. What will be the nature of this he cannot divulge at this time.

The reason for the producer's long stay of over two months in New York is directly connected with these new production plans, as was also the putting of Johnny Burke and other vaudeville favorites under long term contracts.

"I consider that talking and sound will be the greatest advance in short subjects since I made the first two reel comedy," said Mr. Sennett. "Here is a new science that lends itself marvelously to screen comedy. We are going to give new interest to the steady patrons and we are also going to attract myriads of new patrons to the motion picture theatre. Presentations have imposed a heavy burden upon many exhibitors. If there ever has been a real need for them in motion picture theatres, which I personally doubt, these new two reel comedies will answer it. The short comedy is about to enter a period of great expansion and the widest influence."

Hollywood Production Plans Shaping Up for Talkies

HOLLYWOOD, July 2.—Production activities are assuming more definite shape daily in conection with sound pictures at the Hollywood studios. Work is already under way on several of them in the studios where equipment has been installed, while in other studios casts are being assembled and all plans perfected for launching production at the earliest possible moment.

According to a reliable report current in Hollywood, Reginald Denny's next picture may be a "talkie." It is known that Carl Laemmle, ever on the alert to pioneer anything that will tend to further advancement of pictures, has been flirting with Fox' synchronizing device and the fact that several of his chief coast executives have been experimenting with Movietone during the past few weks, lends truth to the Denny report.

The selection of Denny to mark the advent of Universal into the talking picture field was due to the fact that he possesses a particularly well placed stage voice. At one time Universal's comedy star appeared as leading man opposite several of New York's most prominent stage favorites.

Charles R. Condon, who wrote the scenario for the first Vitaphone picture to be made in England, Ben Heeht's "The Florentine Dagger," has been rewarded by a second Vitaphone assignment. This will be also made in England and as yet has not been titled.

Howard Bretherton has just completed the direction of Condon's story, "Caught in the Fog," which was made with Vitaphone interpolations.

William de Mille is to have the interesting experience of making a play of this writing into his own talking movie. This is to be a picturization of "The Man Higher Pp," a playlet in which Theodore Roberts has apeared in vaudeville during the past five years.

De Mille has signed Roberts to star in the "talking movie" in the role "the grand old man" created on the stage. The production is to be made as a two-reeler, and will be started immediately after William De Mille completes the direction of "Craig's Wife," a picture he is working on at the present time.

Following close on the heels of the announcement that all of the new season's Christie Comedies released by Paramount will be made with sound effects and musical synchronization, comes the statement that the Douglas MacLean picture "The Carnation Kid" will be synchronized with sound. Not only will Douglas and his supporting players talk, but sound effects of a vivid nature are planned.

North West Resumes Arbitration

RESUMPTION of arbitration in the Northwest came about last week through the efforts of non-members of the Northwest exhibitor unit. Deliberations in the locality had been at a standstill for several weeks following the move of the board of the firm's action in serving non-theatrical accounts.

The body of Northwest exhibitors has announced that injunction proceedings would be begun if attempts were made to arbitrate with a board on which the Northwest exhibitor is not represented.

Sennett Special to Have Sound Effects

"The Good-Bye Kiss," the Mack Sennett special feature production being distributed by First National Pictures, will be the second of the specials handled by this company to be accompanied by sound effects, according to an announcement just made by Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager.

The first picture with sound synchronization will be "Lilac Time," a special with Colleen Moore as the star, which opens for a run at the Carthay Circle, Los Angeles, July 12th.

Musical Comedy in Color Suggested

The ultimate value of talking motion pictures will never be completely tested until talking pictures are staged with the same care and attention to detail as is now the case with stage productions, according to Director Robert Z. Leonard.

Leonard, prior to coming to motion pictures had a long and varied career on the stage. He was both actor and producer. In the latter capacity he produced 140 musical shows.

"I have an idea in my own mind that I would like to try out in my next production," said Leonard. "An idea that is now practicable and would constitute a real test of talking motion pictures.

"What I have in mind, is, briefly, to produce a full length musical comedy in color with talking motion pictures.

"Such a production, will of course, require a combination of the technique of the stage and screen. It will require an original book, original songs, and original lines. It could be better staged than the usual musical shows, since the motion picture would permit us to choose locations wherever we pleased, exterior or interior, and at the same time to have many more locations than stage facilities will permit.

"Personally, I can see no reason why in the future stage productions could not be adapted from talking motion picture productions instead of vice-versa, as is now the case. It would even be possible to have simultaneous release dates."

Fox Buys "Behind That Curtain" for Movietone

Fox Film Corporation has bought "Behind That Curtain," a mystery novel by Earl Derr Biggers. It will be done in Movietone.

Raoul Walsh has been assigned by Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager, to produce this picture. He left Hollywood Saturday, for New York in quest of suitable talent.

Marshall Neilan Scheduled to Direct Bebe Daniels

Marshall Neilan will direct Bebe Daniels' next Paramount picture as yet untitled. He also was signed a few days ago to direct Douglas MacLean's next Paramount-Christie picture.

First National Buys Story For Charlie Murray

The purchase of an original story by Adele Comandini called "The Milkman" has been effected by First National. Charlie Murray, now in the east vacationing, will be the stellar player.

Franklin on "Sound" Showmanship

Expert Handling by Exhibitors Is Prime Necessity

By HAROLD B. FRANKLIN
President of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Franklin's views on the latest developments in the industry, which are printed below, are from an editorial written by him in "Now," the West Coast Theatre magazine.

THERE can be no question that the motion picture industry is going "talkie." The leading producers have definitely committed themselves to a recognition of the synchronization and amplification devices that have been perfected. The devices now being installed in many theatres are the product of the Electrical Research Products, a subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and the most important producers are now making productions with these devices under the trade name of Movietone or Vitaphone. Within a few months the RCA-Photophone, fostered by the Radio Corporation and General Electric, will be marketed.

A Prime Necessity

It can readily be seen that sound synchronization has become a prime necessity to every progressive motion picture theatre. That motion pictures are being made with sound synchronization, however, does not in itself insure a continued public support. If it is not to be a fad, quality must be the dominant objective of the producers. Sound synchronization offers a new mode of expression which will progress only to the extent that producers take advantage of the opportunities before them; they must realize that here is a new art that requires sympathetic understanding. Mistakes will be made in the beginning, and those companies that have or are willing to gain experience will naturally make the greatest progress. That the interest of the public has been aroused is an undoubted fact, to which the recent success of certain motion pictures with sound synchronization bear witness.

The industry has within it power to bring to the motion picture an added impetus . . . a new dimension, if you please . . . that will attract an increased patronage, if "quality" is the watchword of this new effort. Producers who are devoting themselves to the development of sound synchronization can prove to be a force for great progress to the entire industry. New interest will be shown by many who have been satisfied with their activities, and new talent will be attracted to this new art. A technique will be created that will blend motion picture action with voice and sound. Such technique will be entirely different from the methods of the spoken drama or the motion picture . . . it will blend the best points of the stage and screen. In the expression of such a technique students of the highest ideals and intelligence will be attracted to the industry, and progressive producers will encourage the development of such manpower. Some of our screen favorites will enhance their value if they keep pace with the new requirements, while others will be found lacking, and new personalities will be developed for the spoken screen.

Has Its Rights

In musical interpretation and accompaniment, sound synchronization has established its right to compete with most theatre orchestras. The Movietone News, because of sound synchronization, brings to current news subjects a decided added interest . . . to see and hear the Prince of Wales, George Bernard Shaw, Mussolini, Lloyd George, Marshall Foch and others of international interest, makes great men and events live before our very eyes. Such living records stimulate the interest of the public in motion picture theatres everywhere.

It is not enough to show sound motion pictures; theatres that devote themselves to sound synchronization must give to this new showmanship understanding and sympathy. It is not sufficient to merely install a synchronizing device; it is quite important to insure for its operation enterprise and expert handling. Projectionists should not alone understand the mechanism, but are in a great measure responsible for its successful operation. Management must be sure that amplification is just right—not too loud nor too soft. There must be a close co-operation between the management and projectionists in maintaining just the proper degree of amplification at all times. The instruments require different adjustments in a crowded auditorium as compared to those periods in the day when patronage is lighter. This makes necessary carefully worked out schedules, as well as constant supervision to insure uniform tone quality.

In advertising sound synchronization, misrepresentation must never be resorted to. The public should not be allowed to expect talking motion pictures when only synchronized scores are presented; yet, when talking motion pictures or effects are given, clear definite advertising in this respect should guide the publicity and announcements, and short talking or singing subjects should be advertised as such.

Short subjects should be programmed so that they blend into a smooth running entertainment. Two singing or dancing acts following one another would indicate the same poor judgment in sound motion pictures as it would be in stage entertainment. The tendency to give lengthy programs brings to mind that quality is of greater value than quantity.

Sound synchronization is another milestone in the progress of the motion picture. The same progressive spirit that has built our industry into one of the greatest, is now necessary to bring this new art to its fullest expression. Those who appreciate its possibilities are destined to gain distinction and prestige.

Vitaphone Signs Additional Stars for Playlets and Operatic Numbers

SEVERAL stars of the stage and screen have been signed to appear in Vitaphone presentations and the majority of them have already started work. They will be seen in playlets, sketches and operatic numbers.

Ethel Grey Terry, screen star, and William Davidson, Edwin Sturgis and Carl Gerard, all of the legitimate stage, will be seen in the Willard Mack playlet, "Sharp Tools." Kenneth Harlan, Robert Elliott and John St. Pois will have the leading roles in "The Alibi," by Murray Roth and Addison Burkhart.

Sarah Padden, noted emotional actress, will make her third Vitaphone appearance in "Across the Border," by Colin Clements. Madame Schuman Heink has been signed to make two Vitaphone presentations, in which she will select the most popular numbers from her wide operatic repertoire.

Canadian Theatres to Install Equipment

CANADIAN theatres of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation will be equipped with sound reproducing devices by the Fall, according to announcement made in Regina, Saskatchewan, by N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the corporation. There are 140 theatres under control of Famous Canadian and the contract has been signed for Movietone and Vitaphone equipment.

M-G-M Players Equipped for Sound Pictures

Introduction of "talking films" into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production program will have very little effect upon the personnel of the studio stock company. Seventy-five per cent of the players under contract by that organization have had considerable stage experience and are suitably equipped for the sound device innovation for the screen features.

The twenty-five per cent lacking stage training are to be coached in a studio elocution school and their response to the voice culture instruction probably will measure their future usefulness to the company.

John Gilbert, Lionel Barrymore, Lew Cody, Conrad Nagel, Lon Chaney and Ralph Forbes are some of the male players who came into films from the stage. Marion Davies, Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo and Aileen Pringle also were on the stage.

Sound Picture Reviews

"The Book Worm"

HARRY J. CONLEY, another star of the Broadway stage comes to the speaking screen in this Vitaphone playlet. He was among the luminaries of "Lemaire's Affairs" and he injects a lot of comedy into a very talkie talkie. The story is by Willard Mack, who seems to be giving a lot of his attention to these screen playlets.

Conley's pantomime is good and his voice registers well on the screen. It is a typical old silent two-reel comedy done with dialogue and it is much more attractive in its new form. The dialogue and stage play of Conley liven the old silent comedy considerably and are bound to extract more laughs from an audience.

The story is rather crude and unlike others of the late ones seen, in that it is not as skillfully constructed, but depends more upon the lines than the situations to get it over. Conley asks the privilege of delivering a book from the bookstore to a beautiful young lady whom he has fallen hard for. He arrives at her house and she immediately falls in love with him. In fact her advances are so marked as to embarrass him, but he gets over that and is doing well when he is awakened by a subway conductor telling him he has reached the end of the line.—Chester J. Smith.

"Celeste Aida"

Giovanni Martinelli is seen and heard in the aria from Verdi's opera, "Aida." This operatic star, who was among the first to be recorded by Vitaphone in connection with the initial presentation of "Don Juan" is even more splendid in this number than he was in the original record. His voice seems perfectly pitched for recording and his notes are as clear in the reproduction as though he was on the stage in person. Martinelli will undoubtedly be among the most popular of the many stars that have been signed by Vitaphone.—Chester J. Smith.

Union Problems Increase With Sound Installations

UNION problems with theatre managers threaten to become more complicated daily with the installation of sound equipment multiplying rapidly. From both the projection and the music angles difficulties are arising that eventually will have to be straightened out.

From the coast comes word that houses having sound pictures devices face the prospect of union demands that will practically double their projection overhead. The unions, it is said, will demand a number of synchronization apparatus operators equal to the number of regular projection machine operators. Exhibitors contend that the regular machine operators will have no trouble running the sound picture devices and that it means little or no extra labor. If they are compelled to put on the extra labor they feel that the extra revenue from the sound films will not offset the additional expense of operation. It will be necessary in some houses, it is contended, to enlarge the projection room if more help is to be accommodated.

As the first step in its campaign against the general installation of mechanical music in theatres, a national survey is being conducted by the American Federation of Musicians to determine public reaction to sound pictures.

Just what action will be taken by the musicians is problematical, but the federation has voted an annual defense fund of $1,500,000 to prevent the general introduction of mechanical sound devices into theatres. Joseph N. Weber, president of the federation, sees no trouble in the immediate future with theatres, but he has issued the following statement on the general conditions:

"We are not opposed to talking movies because we realize that synchronization of words with action on the screen is a scientific accomplishment of value. But if machines are used as a substitute for vocal and orchestral music in the nation's theatres they will become a serious menace to our cultural growth. And that just at a time when America has achieved rank as the undoubted world center of music.

"Music at best reflects the mood of the artist. You cannot mechanize an art. If synthetic harmony comes to supercede the services of musicians, the public will be the loser. The gain, if any, will be that of the theatrical enterpriser who will be offering cheaper and inferior music for the old price of admission. This would be especially unfortunate in view of the fact that the motion picture theatre has been a great factor in promoting appreciation of fine orchestral music."

Noted French Comic Signed by Lasky

WITH the return from abroad of Jesse Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of Paramount, announcement is made that included in the foreign talent signed by him is Maurice Chevalier, favorite comedian of the Paris music halls, who will be seen and heard in sound pictures.

As a feature of the first picture in which Chevalier will appear, he will sing in both French and English. The story is being prepared by a distinguished French dramatist with Chevalier collaborating, Mr. Lasky said. The comedian is to appear in both sound and silent pictures. He speaks not only French, but fluent and colloquial English.

Philly, Dallas Get Vitaphone Branches

Two additional Vitaphone branch offices, one in Philadelphia and one in Dallas are to be opened at once. This was announced this week by Paul Swift, general sales manager of the Vitaphone Corporation. The number of Vitaphone exchanges will then be six, the other offices being New York, Chicago, San Francisco and the recently established Atlanta branch.

A marked increase in the number of Vitaphone installations in the Philadelphia and Dallas territories is given as the reason for the establishment of the new offices. More than 100 Vitaphone exhibitors in the Philadelphia territory are now serviced by the New York branch it is said. The rapidly increasing number of Vitaphone installations both in the New York and Philadelphia territories has made a division of the territory necessary.

Locations for the two new branches are now being selected and it is expected that both offices will be equipped and ready to service accounts within the next three or four weeks.

The service department of the New York branch hitherto located at the old Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn, will be moved within the next week to the new building now occupied by the Vitaphone and Warner Bros. home offices at 321 West 44th Street. One entire floor of this building will be taken over by the Vitaphone New York branch.

Warners Purchase "Home Towners" for Vitaphone

Warner Bros. have purchased from George M. Cohan the screen rights to "The Home Towners," which was produced on Broadway and had a run at George M. Cohan's Theatre there. Robert McWade, who played the leading role in the Broadway production has been engaged for the same part in the picture.

"The Home Towners" will be one of Vitaphone's specials for the coming season and will be an all-talking picture. The cast, apart from Mr. McWade, is in process of selection by J. L. Warner.

25 Vitaphone Theatres in Philadelphia

Two more theatres in Philadelphia join the list in that city showing Vitaphone attractions. The Cross Keys theatre begins its Vitaphone career this week and the Kent starts the week following. Both are Stanley circuit houses.

With the installation of Vitaphone in the Cross Keys and Kent, the number of Vitaphone equipped theatres in Philadelphia is raised to twenty-five.

Condition of Film Will Be Big Factor

Improvement Becomes Prime Necessity Now, Exhibitor Declares

SPEAKING of the smaller house, which is to be a very important factor in the new sound movie era, William H. McLaughlin, of the Stoneham Theatre Co., Stoneham, Mass., has some practical and pertinent things to say:

"Mr. William A. Johnston,
"Motion Picture News,
"New York City, N. Y.
"Dear Sir:

"I have been reading with interest your editorials of late in which the talking movies have been the paramount subject. We might say that they are a reality, but it will be six months to a year before they will be operating in a majority of theatres.

"My suggestion at the present time is, 'Why not get a firm foundation on which to build for them in the coming months?'

"The talk the exhibitor hears from a big percentage of his patrons in the suburban and smaller theatres is, 'If we wait until the picture comes here we won't see the whole of it, because they cut them when the smaller theatres get them.' In these days when ninety per cent of the public are travelling in autos they don't wait, but go to the cities.

"As I have explained to my patrons many times in editorials, it is not the story cut, but sometimes we get film in poor condition after it has been run through many other picture machines. You cannot continually make excuses to your patrons. If this is the case now, what will it be after the smaller theatres have invested $4,000 to $18,000 in equipment for the talking movies? The public will then claim that they don't get all the talking and musical end of the program as well as the picture, with the result that it will be hard to get the investment back.

Care of Film Necessary

"As I suggested, now is the time to build a foundation, and I do not wish to criticise without making it constructive. The one big fault lies with the exhibitor. It is just human nature not to respect the other fellow's property as much as you would your own. It is the same the world over. A man who hires a tenement does not take the same care of it as he would if he owned a house. Too many exhibitors feel that as long as the film is not their property, they should not be over zealous in its care. The result is that the person they hurt the most is the small exhibitor that follows after them in the use of the film. If the exhibitors outside the key cities, would put as much effort into helping the other exhibitors in maintaining a good condition of film, as they do against block booking, etc., the evil would be stopped to a certain extent.

"The distributors are wrong also. It is true in their inspection departments they look for scratches, holes and patches, but how many ever look for the continuity of the story which is more essential than the other things, when today the public is comparing the pictures seen in the palaces and cathedrals, with what the suburban houses offer. There should be some man in this industry smart enough to invent a meter attachment for the rewind machines in the inspection department, that could tell how many feet of film were sent to an exhibitor and how many returned, and eventually we would not be having the continuity of the story shot to pieces.

"By this method the exhibitor who has to cut poor film out of a picture, would be more apt to put it back in the case instead of in the waste barrel. The distributor then could tell what part of the story was cut, and either fix up that footage or substitute new. If that did not improve matters, a charge for the missing amount of film after being measured would help.

Must Help Small Exhibitor

"From a small exhibitor's standpoint, there must be something done to improve the condition of film before an exhibitor of this class is warranted to spend a big amount of money for talking movie equipment. Our film should be just as good as the $1,000,000 house receives. Our investment is as much in proportion to the inhabitants in our communities and the seats in our theatres as the big fellows. They get the picture preference, and are in the days of easy travel by auto, getting a big proportion of our patrons which is not figured when the price of pictures is made to them. Therefore it is very essential both to the existence of the smaller exhibitor and the revenue of the large producers, that they start now to build for a better condition of film, so that when the talking movies are installed the public will have the confidence that in their own community they are getting all for their money it is possible to give.

"Yours sincerely,
(Signed) William H. McLaughlin."

Schenck Warns Against Hysteria Over Scientific Devices

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, president of United Artists, warns against hysteria over scientific motion picture devices and points out that good story-telling pictures, well produced and intelligently made, will continue to be the sustaining force in film entertainment. He says he does not underestimate the importance of scientific aids, but that "good pictures are the things that count."

Regarding the present-day stars and their ability to successfully meet the new conditions, Mr. Schenck says:

"People will continue to go to see them; they will continue to be the great magnet for box-offices. Patrons will be drawn by personalities and not by any device that simply enhances the mode of expression of their art. United Artists will continue to devote itself to distribution of big, ambitious screen productions aimed at entertainment of masses of people.

"I believe that people go to a moving picture theatre to be entertained by good moving pictures. Music, effects, the fine art of presentation—these things help like the setting of a jewel to place the audience in a receptive frame of mind so that they will view the picture itself properly. Extraneous presentations are like preliminaries to a championship prize fight in that they prepare the way for a climactic event. They are not and never have been the show itself; they will not become the show now."

Court Ruling Upholds Penn. Board's Right to Censor "Talkies"

THE words to accompany "talking movies" must be submitted to the State Board of Censors before they can be exhibited in Pennsylvania, according to a decision handed down by Judge Martin in Common Pleas Court No. 2 on June 30th. This ruling was made by Judge Martin in denying an appeal of Vitagraph, Inc., distributing corporation for Vitaphone, from the State Board's order that a record of spoken words to be reproduced during the showing of a film must be submitted to the censors. Vitagraph contended that the censors' powers applied only to pictures and not to spoken words. Upon the refusal of Vitagraph to submit the disc accompanying the film to the Board of Censors they refused to allow the picture to be shown.

Judge Martin held that the Board has as much right to rule on the spoken words as on the wording of the film titles used and in commenting on the obvious intention of the law, said: "To construe the Act as vesting the Board of Censors with power to prevent the exhibition of films which corrupt public morals when exhibited with printed titles, and to hold the Board powerless to prevent the exhibition of films when the same debasing features as published as part of the picture by a machine would result in neutralizing and destroying the Act of Assembly. . . . A construction which would permit so palpable an evasion of the law would result in an absurdity." An appeal is to be taken.

Three Harrisburg Theatres in Race to Install Talking Picture Device

SO rapidly is the demand growing for motion pictures with talking and musical accompaniments, that three Harrisburg theatres are in an apparent race to get them installed first in that city. Several weeks ago the Colonial and Victoria theatres, leading downtown first run picture houses of the Wilmer & Vincent chain, announced plans to install the Vitaphone and Movietone devices in both houses, and at that time it was stated they would be ready about Labor Day.

Almost immediately afterward, however, John P. McCarthy, manager of Loew's Regent theatre, the Wilmer & Vincent Company's chief rival in Harrisburg, announced plans for installing the "talkies" in his house "at the earliest possible date."

This was followed by a revision of the plans of the Colonial and Victoria, whose manager, Lee Levy, said he would speed up installation so that it was probable his theatres would be equipped with the "talkies" before the end of July.

Harrisburg movie fans, on the sidelines, are keenly interested to see which of the rivals will be the first to have the "talkies" in operation.

Brady Discusses Sound Films

the director to have had experience in stage direction than in picture directing if he is to get full value out of his situations.

"The question of road shows has been much discussed by both legitimate and picture producers, but that would involve a great expense in equipping houses with the necessary apparatus. I would be more in favor of having the pictures of Broadway productions shown in straight motion picture houses, where you can keep the prices within reach of all and thereby derive a much greater revenue. The only drawback to that on the part of the legitimate producer is that he would not want a picture of his big hit shown in a large city before he has played the city himself. For instance, Ziegfeld would never permit his 'Follies' to be shown in such cities as Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and three or four others, before his company has played there. And when you reduce profits by later showing in such cities as those you are cutting in materially to the gross a picture can do.

For Partnership Basis

"The question of arrangements to be made between legitimate and picture producers is one that will have to be given a lot of consideration. I would like to see it put on a straight partnership basis that could be made agreeable to all parties. I think this would be fairer to all than the payment of a set price for picture rights to a stage hit. Both parties should be willing to gamble on the attractiveness of a stage hit as a motion picture.

"Here's an angle that is going to mean a lot to the legitimate producer, the resale for sound accompaniment of stage plays that have already been produced on the screen. I sold 'Way Down East' to Griffith and now it should be more valuable even with sound effects and dialogue. It will undoubtedly be done over and will mean the signing of an equitable contract for the spoken picture rights. The fact that picture rights to a stage production were once sold to a producer does not mean that that producer by the purchase of those rights can now make the picture with sound effects or dialogue. He bought the rights only for the purpose of the one picture. I have twenty-four plays made by the old World Film Company and all of them will make good pictures with sound.

"There is one thing that the motion picture industry cannot be warned too strongly against, and that is the question of overseating. Maybe these sound pictures will prove so popular that new houses will be springing up everywhere. That will be a great mistake. It is the mistake legitimate producers have made along Broadway and it will surely bring disaster."

One of the distinct benefits is in the realm of motion picture projection. The color film can now be handled practically as the black and white film is handled. If it buckles or bulges it is in exactly the same way.

Under the old system, unless the operator was continually on watch, the film was likely to go slightly out of focus, because of eccentricities it might develop while in the projection machine—eccentricities, at least, from his viewpoint.

Blending Sound and Color

Dr. Kalmus believes that the ultimate development in motion picture entertainment will be a blending of sound an color photography, which will bring the fullest and most complete satisfaction to the spectator. Naturally this development will be very gradual, as the company's capacity would not permit of any sudden or widespread use of the color system. There will undoubtedly be a steady expansion of their facilities, however, regulated by the demand, which has suddenly grown to decided proportions.

It is a question that can be only determined by time whether the two- or the three-color process will come into the greatest favor, although the latter is naturally by far the better. Of course, it is also more costly. It would be possible under the new system to have a four-color reproduction, but this is hardly necessary or practical.

Pictures which now have or will have the new color type of inserts include "Revenge," directed by Edwin Carewe, and starring Dolores Del Rio; Dorothy Arzner's film, "The Follies;" "The Water Hole," which Richard Jones is to direct, and "Redskin" (all color), with Richard Dix. All of these are Paramount productions. The Dix film is to be started early in August. Other films, which include color in their scope, are "The Play Must Go On" (Universal), and "None But the Brave" (Fox); also an independently made Buck Jones film. Technicolor itself has made six two-reel subjects now being released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as a means of demonstrating the advantages of the newer innovations in the process. Another series is following this. "The Thrall of Leif the Lucky" will be their biggest independent undertaking.

Certain colors that were thought completely beyond the range of Technicolor in the past, or exceedingly difficult to photograph, have now been brought within its sphere. There is a softer blending, and clearer definition of objects. The results for the eye will be so immensely more satisfying that there is no comparison. The company has spent fully $150,000 on the improvement, and this does not include all the money invested over a period of years.

Sound Picture For Use in Army

The first sound picture especially designed for military instruction purposes has been completed and privately shown in Washington before a selected group of military officials. The film was made at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., through the joint efforts of Electrical Research Products, Inc., subsidiary of the Western Electric Company, and the Fox Case Corporation, producers of Movietone features, with the co-operation of the War Department.

The film as shown to the officials, who included nearly 100 representatives of the Army, Navy, Coast Guard, National Guard, and Army Reserves, depicts three training units. Members of the 29th Infantry, U. S. A. at Fort Benning were the participants in the scenes photographed. The opening portions of the film were given over to excerpts showing the organization of medical and other units and to the use of sound pictures in describing the assembly and disassembly of weapons.

The latter portion shows an infantry battalion on the defense, with a lecture describing the various troop movements given in conjunction with the film. Troops are shown in action under simulated war conditions.

"Tenderloin" Closes Big Run in Oklahoma City

"Tenderloin," featuring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel has just closed a most successful two-weeks run at the Capitol Theatre in Oklahoma City. This is the second synchronized picture the Capitol has run since the installation of its new Vitaphone.

"Schubert's Songs" First for Paramount

The first Paramount sound picture will be "Schubert's Songs." The recording has been completed under the supervision of James A. FitzPatrick, who pioneered with his "Famous Music Masters" series. The record is by the Victor sound on disc method.

In discussing the picture, FitzPatrick said: "For the past four years I have been obliged to limit my 'Famous Music Masters' to the large presentation theatres in the key cities because of the smaller theatre's inability to present pictures that called for a particular treatment in presentation. Now the advent of the sound picture makes it possible to control music, voice and presentation and thereby automatically broadens my field to any and all theatres equipped with the necessary apparatus for sound pictures."

All St. Louis Houses to Equip for Sound

With the Vitaphone playing the Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, Mo., and building up a bigger following for sound pictures daily it is reported along the Picture Rialto in St. Louis that every first run picture palace in St. Louis and its immediate vicinity will install the equipment needed for the presentation of the most modern motion pictures.

5 Features from FBO in Month of August

During August, FBO exchanges will distribute five full-length productions. In the order of their release they are as follows:

On August 19th, "The Bantam Cowboy," starring Buzz Barton; on August 19th, "The Perfect Crime," co-starring Clive Brook and Irene Rich; also on August 19th, "Terror Mountain," starring Tom Tyler; on August 26th, "Danger Street," with Warner Baxter and Martha Sleeper; also on August 26th, "Lightning Speed," the first of the adventure films, starring Bob Steele.

Chesterfield Closes for Canadian Distribution

Chesterfield Motion Picture Corporation and Film de Luxe Ltd. of Toronto and Montreal last week signed contracts whereby the Canadian corporation will distribute the Chesterfield program of ten pictures throughout the Dominion. George R. Batcheller, president of Chesterfield, represented his company, while H. E. Feldstein signed for Film de Luxe. An advance selling and advertising campaign is planned by the Canadian company.

Burr Completes Filming of New Hines Vehicle

C. C. Burr has completed actual camera work on "The Wright Idea," his new comedy production, starring Johnny Hines, which First National will soon release. The picture is now undergoing cutting and editing. Paul Perez is writing the titles.

Exhibitor Installs Own Sound Reproducing Device

SOUND reproducing devices are becoming so popular and so numerous that exhibitors are bound to have them under almost any conditions, even if they have to manufacture them themselves. Ed. Crane, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Jacksonville, Florida, wanted one, so he devised an original method of providing a synchronized score for his feature picture. He calls it the "Filmtone."

As the feature picture starts, music swells forth from the orchestra pit and the various scores follow closely the action of the feature. First it is a symphony orchestra followed by a jazz band, popular music, classical music and many of the old favorites of yesterday.

The equipment used by Manager Crane is a loud speaker in the orchestra pit. This equipment is wired to a special booth in the rear of the theatre, just off the projection room. Here the enterprising manager has utilized two discarded portable phonographs, making a double turntable. Ordinary steel needles are used, soft or loud as the picture action demands. The double turntable assures no break in the music.

The picture is carefully cued from the usual cue sheet sent with each feature and, if there is difficulty in getting the selection designated, a substitution is made. A preview of the picture is run and necessary changes made before its opening. "The Country Doctor" was synchronized in this way and patrons personally went to Manager Crane and told him the musical effects added fifty per cent to the picture.

Another novelty of the equipment is in the use of a "microphone" installed in the projection room and by use of the same equipment, a voice from the pit is heard: "Hello, Everybody," Crane speaking.

And timely bits of important news are given to the theatre patrons. The voice holds their attention and it is seldom a patron leaves after the main picture without hearing what is to be said. They are afraid they are going to miss something and are curious to find out what it is all about. The management is able to make talks to the audience about the coming attractions and any changes in policy that might come up. This is effective in paging doctors and in announcing national and local events of unusual importance.

Cortellaphone Latest Device for Sound Synchronization

CORTELLA SYNCHRONIC PICTURES CORPORATION of New York is ready to market a new sound device, which is a combination of the disc and sound-on-film methods. It is interchangeable in the reproduction of sound only with the disc methods. The new device is known as the Cortellaphone and equipment will be installed in theatres at a price under $500.

The new company claims to be in a position now to synchronize sound pictures already made and to equip theatres ordering now within the next ninety days. The equipment is leased to theatres, and in addition to the installation charge there is a small weekly fee for service. The company is also preparing to furnish at least two standard short subject presentations weekly that will be released through a national distributing organization not yet decided upon.

The basic patents under which Cortellaphone operates were applied for in 1913 and were granted in 1917, according to Ed. D. Turner, distribution manager. They were recorded in the name of Alphonso Cortella, the inventor of the process. W. J. Heffernan, New England manufacturer and capitalist is head of the Cortella Synchronic Pictures Corporation.

Under this new system of sound recording the sound is done by incision and is projected by an attachment to the projector, which it is claimed can be installed within a few hours. The incision scoring is done by hairline on the film between the picture and sprocket holes and it is claimed does not reduce the size of the picture. It is said the process is so simple it can be handled without trouble by any projectionist using any standard projection machine.

The disc method employed is similar to other disc methods in that phonograph synchronization is obtained through the use of a universal joint attached to the projector and phonograph. An automatic change-over prevents any stop, it is claimed. Non-synchronous music, it is said may be reproduced from any standard make of records.

Sound Devices for All Stanley Houses

THE talking picture will unquestionably be the vogue in the new season. Irving D. Rossheim, president of the Stanley Company of America, is among those who predict great things for the new development of the motion picture. He said:

"Stanley theatres are rapidly installing necessary apparatus and in the Fall practically every Stanley house will be equipped to give some form of picture with accompaniment synchronized speech or music. Inventors have perfected their devices so that Vitaphone and Photophone, and similar mediums are giving marvelous results. Stanley arrangements are such that the very latest devices will be put into operation and all that is newest in the field of the talking picture will be presented at our company's theatres."

Studios Launch Summer Production Schedules

Stars, Players and Directors Begin Work on Programs For New Film Season

HOLLYWOOD, June 30, 1928.—With many of the stars and featured players home after vacation tours to Europe and wooded regions of United States, an unusually heavy production schedule has been announced by executives of the Paramount Studios in Hollywood.

Marshall Neilan will direct Bebe Daniels in "Take Me Home" and "The Docks of New York," starring George Bancroft, is being launched by director Josef von Sternberg. Four others are under way and a fifth, "Just Married," has been sent to the editing rooms. Those now in production are "Beggars of Life," "The Fleet's In" and "The Water Hole." Technicolor work is now being done on several sequences of the latter.

Esther Ralston, Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor are soon to start their new vehicles. "The Case of Lena Smith" is now in preparation for Miss Ralston, "Divorce Bound" for Miss Vidor and Menjou's latest has been written by Ernest Vajda.

Besides these, five more new pictures, all about ready for production, include "Interference," which will star Evelyn Brent; Richard Dix in "Moran of the Marines"; Emil Jannings "latest"; the next Bancroft, "The Wolf of Wall Street," and "The Canary Murder Case."

Bebe Daniels who was taken seriously ill on the set at Paramount studios and rushed to Hollywood Hospital last Friday, is out of danger and recovering from intestinal influenza. Dr. Phillip Ayer is attending the star.

Cornerstone Laying

With impressive ceremonies the corner stone of the Fox Film Corporation's new laboratory was laid last Friday at noon. Among the speakers were: Milton Sills, Dr. Rufus B. Von Kleinsmid, John P. Coneybear, Henry Lehrman, Fred Beetson, Mr. Beetson acted as master of ceremonies. A luncheon was served following the cornerstone laying.

Schrock Leaves T-S

Raymond L. Schrock, prominent film executive, following an association with Tiffany-Stahl, over a period of six months, has severed connections with the company, effective immediately. According to this executive himself, his dissolving of association with the T-S organization was on the friendliest basis and while he has no definite announcement to make as to his next affiliation, he expects to issue an announcement upon return from a vacation which he plans to extend for about a month.

G. C. Duffy, Writer, Dies Suddenly

FUNERAL services were held last Thursday for Gerald C. Duffy, 32, magazine and scenario writer, who died suddenly in his home in Rockledge Road, June 25. Duffy had been suffering from heart trouble for many months. He was preparing a story for First National at the time of his death. He was the author of many plays produced by the various film companies.

Delaney Cast

Charles Delaney has been selected by director Alfred Santell for the juvenile lead in the screen version of "Show Girl," First National.

Loaned

Howard Estabrook has been loaned to Inspiration Pictures, Inc., by Paramount. He will confine his efforts to the adaptation and continuity of Rupert Hughes' "She Goes to War."

"The Wrecking Boss"

Eddie Cline is directing Milton Sills' current First National starring vehicle, "The Wrecking Boss." Much of his work will be done in the High Sierras on the railroad and wreck scenes will furnish new thrills in the story about a show girl who marries the wrecking boss and attempts to settle down to a quiet, small-town existence.

Paramount Notes

Emil Jannings' next Paramount feature will be "The Sins of the Father." Story is by Norman Burnstine, E. Lloyd Sheldon is working on the adaptation and continuity. . . . Clarence Badger has left for a New York vacation. . . . Esther Ralston, after a vacation spent in Hawaii, is back again at the Paramount plant. . . . Douglas MacLean and Al Christie are searching for a leading woman for "The Carnation Kid."

Buck on-the-Go

Buck Jones, who is working on "The Big Hop," his first independent production at Universal City, established a precedent right at the jump when he shot a big Technicolor sequence with three hundred persons. The scenes depict happenings at an elaborate banquet and it is said that this is the first time that a picture has been made in color for the State Rights market. James Horn is directing.

Attractive Sue Carrol

Sue Carrol, one of the screen's most flaming flappers, will again be featured in an important role in a Lew Cody-Aileen Pringle production. She will play the gold-digging ingenue in "The Single Man," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Newmeyer Retained

Fred Newmeyer, borrowed from Harold Lloyd by Universal to direct Reginald Denny in "The Man Disturber," has been asked by the Carl Laemmle company to remain to direct Glenn Tryon in a feature picture.

The Browning-Chaney Team

Tod Browning is to direct Lon Chaney's next starring vehicle, "West of Zanzibar." Mary Nolan has been selected by Browning for the leading feminine role, and the support includes Lionel Barrymore, Warner Baxter and Kalla Pasha.

Technicolor and Pulchritude

One of the most eye-appealing sequences to be shot on the Fox lot in many moons took place when Albert Ray put into Technicolor film a bathing beauty pageant as a highlight in "None but the Brave," his latest Fox production. Numerous beauties who have won contests throughout the world took part.

Silver King Recovering

Silver King, one of the best-known equine stars in pictures, is recovering from an attack of pleurisy at Flaggstaff, Arizona, where he has had every care possible from a veterinarian and the constant attention of his pal and owner, Fred Thomson.

Location

Thomas Meighan, star and James Cruze, director, of "The Mating Call," with Renee Adoree, Gardner James and Evelyn Brent, are in San Diego, on location and will also go to Fall Brook, where sequences of the picture will be filmed.

Audrey Ferris

Audrey Ferris, who recently attained stardom at the Warner Bros. studio, is about to work on the initial scenes of "The Little Wildcat."

When Elsie Janis visited the Paramount Hollywood studio, her escorts were Malcolm St. Clair and Richard Dix, Paramount star and director who are soon to start work on a new picture

Finis

J. G. Blystone's picturization of Edna Ferber's famous story "Mother Knows Best" is completed. Louise Dresser and Madge Bellamy played the two most important roles.

On the Radio

Al Boasberg, who is collaborating with Carey Wilson and Sam Wood on a new M-G-M vehicle, is now broadcasting his comical quibs for an hour each week over KFWB. Al gets so many radio fan letters he has to have two secretaries to open the darn things.

Completes Picture

Bruce Mitchel has completed "The Danger Line," one of Universal's Forest Ranger series starring Edmund Cobb. Lola D. Moore wrote the story and continuity.

Speedy Service

First National studios has inaugurated a daily airplane service between Burbank and San Francisco during the filming of "Waterfront," to enable Director William Seiter to view the "rushes" within 48 hours after being recorded by the camera.

Prival in Two Roles

Lucien Prival has been expounding his versatility by playing two distinctly different types of roles at the same time. In "Hell's Angels," Prival played the heavy role, that of the Prussian General, and in "The Racket," he delineated the part of an underworld crook, both Caddo productions with which company Prival is under contract.

"Cohen-Kelly" Sequel

"The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," will be directed by William James Craft, and the assignment of this Universal special is in the nature of a reward to Craft for his exceptional direction of the Glenn Tryon starring vehicles, including "Painting the Town," which scored a marked success.

"The River Pirate"

William K. Howard, Fox Films director, is putting finishing touches to his first production for Fox since his recent return to the scene of his earlier endeavors as a director. This picture is "The River Pirate."

Lloyd's Best Work

From all indications Frank Lloyd's production, "The Divine Lady," First National, promises to be his most important contribution to the screen. Corinne Griffith appears in the stellar role of Lady Hamilton. It is said, also, to be her most spectacular production.

A Futuristic Theme

"The World Tomorrow," a romance based on time one hundred years hence, is to be produced by Universal. The aeroplane, which is playing so prominent a part in the whirl of the world today, is to be conceived in its perfected and advanced stage. We wonder if the progress of "talkies" will be depicted — that would be a thrill.

Tryon and Craft to Separate

With the Glenn Tryon comedy, "The Kid's Clever," the star-director combination of Tryon and William Craft will be no more, at least for a while. The principal reason for this is "The Cohens and the Kellys in Atlantic City," which Universal wants Craft to direct. Tryon's next, "It Can Be Done," will be handled by Fred Newmeyer.

Shallenberger Producing

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, former independent distributor, has turned producer. His first picture, now in production, will be "South of Heaven."

Titling

Paul Perez is now busy titling "The Grain of Dust," a Tiffany-Stahl production. This is his fourth assignment in titling Tiffany-Stahl pictures.

Educational Comedies

Anita Garvin and Estelle Bradley are the featured leading ladies in current Educational comedies. Anita appears with Lupino Lane in "Roaming Romeo" and Estelle with George Davis and Monty Collins in "Leaping Luck."

Gotham Finishes

"The Man Higher Up" and "The River Woman" are two productions that were finished the other day on the Gotham lot. Scott Dunlap directed the former and Joseph Henabery the latter.

William Boyd

When the male lead in "The Flying Fool" has been completed by William Boyd, that actor will be loaned to Feature Productions by De Mille to appear opposite Lupe Velez in "The Love Song." In recent roles, Boyd has appeared as cadet, railway fireman, riveter, police officer and dam rigger. In "The Love Song" he will again be a "he-man" toiler.

Sennett Producing

Production has started on each of the three series to be produced by Mack Sennett for Pathe "Taxi Scandal" is the first subject in the Taxicab Series in which Jack Cooper will be starred. Johnny Burke is starring in "A Dumb Waiter," of the Handy Andy series. Billy Bevan is working in "Caught in the Kitchen," the initial comedy of the Tired Businessmen Series.

Lois Wilson Unhurt

A narrow escape from injury was Lois Wilson's luck in an automobile accident recently. This star has been very busy of late. She is starring in F B O's "Sally's Shoulders" and is playing the feminine lead in a comedy drama in a Los Angeles legitimate theatre.

"Redskin" Postponed

"Redskin," listed as Richard Dix' next vehicle for Paramount, has been postponed; a revised production schedule at the studio replaces it with "Moran of the Mounted," for which Ruth Elder has been announced as the feminine lead. Meanwhile, Elizabeth Pickett, who wrote the original story of "Redskin," has been engaged to do the continuity.

"Smitty" Unit at Tec-Art

Amedee J. Van Beuren, president of the Van Beuren Enterprises, has appointed Harry Weber his general production manager. He is now at Hollywood and has established offices at the Tec-Art studios where he has engaged as director of "Smitty" comedies George E. Marshall, former supervising director of Fox comedies and James Meehan as camera man and James Tynan as story man.

Denny's Next Opus

"Red Hot Speed," an original by Gladys Lehman and Faith Thomas, has been definitely chosen by Edward J. Montagne, scenario editor-in-chief of Universal, as Reginald Denny's next starring vehicle. Current gossip has it that Nick Barrows, former director associated with Edward Everett Horton is being seriously considered as Denny's next megaphonist.

Fox Begins 2 Features

Two new features on the Fox Films Program—"The River" and "Dry Martini" —were begun the other week at the Fox studio. The first, based on the Tristam Tupper story which is winning favorable notices from literary critics, will have Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan. Frank Borzage is directing. "Dry Martini," from the novel by John Thomas, will have Albert Gran, Matt Moore and Jocelyn Lee.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
THE CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

Managing Director, Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., and Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Danger of Having No Competition

There are today theatres in many parts of the country without any opposition and they are permitting a condition to exist which, unless they watch their step and their business, is going to give them many a bad night's sleep with the coming of opposition.

We were dismayed to find many such exhibitors so nicely situated without other theatres close by and they seemed to be closing their eyes to the way their theatres are being run and the dissatisfaction very evident among their patrons. These men are neglecting their theatres in appearance, in maintenance and entertainment. They make very little or no effort at all to cater to their public, and the only apparent reason for their present success is because there is no place else for their patronage to go.

Opposition Is the Answer

It is our humble opinion that these men are making a terrible mistake since it is conceded that every progressive town or community will, sooner or later, have opposition; and such opposition is rather invited by reason of poor management, etc. New theatres generally bring more modern buildings, better equipment, new and up-to-date exploitation and advertising methods, big city operating tactics and general all-around better showmanship; in fact, everything that the average theatre-goer looks for today.

The writer spent a little time with a friend who was connected with a circuit and who was on his way to visit two towns with a view of building theatres for his circuit. The first town we visited was about 15,000 population and had a fine theatre, as modern and up-to-date as one could expect in a town of this size, and running on a par with the bigger city theatres. My friend, after spending the better part of the afternoon and evening in the theatre and around the town, decided that we would move on. He passed the remark that this town with a theatre so well managed and presenting shows as we had seen could not stand opposition.

Conditions Just the Reverse

The next town we visited was about 25 miles away and perhaps a little larger in population than the other. Here we found a condition just the reverse of the one described above. The theatre in this town was not quite as old as the other, but was badly run down and showed neglect wherever we looked. We found the owner-manager lounging around the lobby with a big, black cigar in his mouth, an old derby on his head and several days' growth on his chin. His suit was sadly in need of pressing and his shoes apparently had not made the acquaintance of a boot black for weeks. If we were to sum up this description by merely saying that the manager reflected the condition of his theatre, then we believe that you have an accurate description of this so-called playhouse.

Needless to say, opposition was invited by such conditions and at this writing a new theatre is only a few months off.

The moral of this story is—"Don't Think That Because You Are Alone in Your Community That You Can Get Away With Murder. Good Abe Lincoln Had the Right Idea About Fooling Folks."

We Beg Your Pardon

MEMBERS who have sent in their applications as well as those who submitted ideas for publication are earnestly requested to pardon the short delay in publishing them.

Between running two theatres and handling the club, your Chairman has been "rushed to death." But we are rapidly catching up and all the ideas and suggestions submitted will have our close attention.

Please keep on sending in those applications and ideas for improving both box office receipts and theatre operation. C. E. L.

Exploit the Local Dancing School

Wherever kiddies are concerned you will most generally find that the adults show a keen interest. This holds good whether they have kiddies of their own or not.

One of the best tie-ups, as a means of stimulating business, as well as interest in the theatre itself, is the local dancing school, or the dancing classes of the public schools. At least twice a season you should present, in cooperation with these schools, a dance review or carnival. The kiddies themselves are always keen to show their ability upon the stage of a local theatre, and the adults are always glad of an opportunity of seeing these kiddies perform on the stage. Practically every youngster who appears will draw ten to twenty relatives or friends to see him.

If you have never done this before, we suggest that you look into this angle, and see if you do not find it a good box-office bet.

Don't Overlook Value of Short Subjects

Many of us, unfortunately, overlook the value of the short subjects that are so necessary in putting together a good, entertaining program.

For many years past, most managers have paid very little, or no attention, to this important part of the show. They would generally tell the exchange to "book me a comedy" and other such instructions.

Short subjects today are being produced, in most cases, with as much care as many big features, and unquestionably they can be built into box-office boosters if they are played up properly.

Taking a glance through the announcement of Educational in the issue of May 26th, you will find information about their short subjects that could easily be utilized for program copy or for newspaper advertising. Make the different types of comedies interesting to your patrons and play up the featured stars in them.

We tried this not only on "Our Gang" comedies, which always were good box office bets, but on Max Davidson, Laurel & Hardy, Charlie Chase and others, and we heard plenty of comment whenever those names appeared in the program.

The same might be said of the various novelty reels that are becoming so popular wherever well-balanced shows are assembled. There are always little angles that lift a short subject out of the ordinary class and make it stand out.

We are great believers in exercising as much care in the selection of our short subjects as we do with our features and most managers who watch every angle of their business are doing the same.

Ways to Develop "Show-Sense"

Harping back again to Harold B. Franklin's article in the NEWS of May 5th, we find a portion that reads—"The successful manager must have a 'show-sense' or instinct as to the public's amusement appetite, and should himself be a man of taste."

In discussing this phase of Mr. Franklin's article with half a dozen managers one morning in New Haven, many advanced the argument—"How can you develop such a 'Show-Sense'?"

Of course, a discussion along these lines must naturally be based primarily on suppositions; it's just another case of depending on the condition surrounding both the manager and the theatre. But it is easy to develop such a sense if you are really anxious to feel the public's pulse.

Note the reaction to certain types of pictures. To the manner in which your show is presented. Whether the musical accompaniment makes the show more enjoyable or makes it a trial to sit through. You don't have to be a musician to know good music. Just because you pay the orchestra is no reason why your interest should stop there.

All these, and many more of the "little" things, if carefully watched, and comment from the patrons is heeded, will soon start to develop that "show-sense" that makes catering to the public a pleasure.

If YOU know of other ways that managers can develop this "sense" tell us and we will publish them.

Take Advantage of Opportunities

Manager A. Z. Friedman, of the Marboro Theatre in Brooklyn, strikes us as being very much on the job. Many of us will recall the recent nation-wide tie-up of broadcasting stations featuring Paul Whiteman and sponsored by the Columbia Phonograph Company. Having a huge voice-amplifier in his theatre he so arranged his schedule that there would be a break about the time that Whiteman was to go on the air. Appearing personally before the audience, Mr. Friedman explained the idea to his patrons and then Paul Whiteman and his band were heard in the theatre.

While every theatre is not fortunate enough to have an amplifying device, the important point we want to bring out is that Mr. Friedman having one, did take advantage of the situation and made the most out of it. Do you watch every little thing about you and are you ready to make the most of anything that offers itself that might make your theatre a more popular place to go to?

Canada Man Likes Round Table

From Canada, Manager J. E. Besler writes to tell us that he is an enthusiastic member and we hope all of our members feel the same as he does about the Manager's Round Table Club.

Mr. Besler tried the Carnival tie-up we suggested some time ago with great success and like a good member he does not keep it a secret. We are still in the hot-weather Carnival time, so if you have not read it or forgotten about it, then we suggest that you go back to the issue of May 19th, and look it over again.

Thank you, brother Besler, we are delighted that you have tried our suggestions and found them good. But don't forget we want our other members to read about some of your own ideas, so send them in.

MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE CLUB

We were beginning to think that the West was asleep when, Lo and behold, from 'out of the west' came a flock of applications for the CLUB.

The flood of applications and letters have completely swamped your Chairman, so PLEASE overlook his delay in acknowledging them. We are trying to catch up and prepare the various ideas and box office problems that were submitted by the members.

KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK AND

"USE THE NEWS"

And don't forget your photo, either with your application or box office idea. We want everyone to see, as well as hear about you.

If you have not already done so—sign the membership application NOW and send it in at once.

"USE THE NEWS"

Best of all the uses that we can recommend is the knowledge that by reading your NEWS you can always know what the other fellow is doing. But never forget that the other fellow wants to know what you are doing. So make the NEWS the clearing house for everybody's ideas and very soon we will all reap the benefit of this advice.

Theatre Convention Stunt Gets National Publicity

Burros As Living Emblems of Democracy Presented to Houston Delegates by Will Horwitz

THE Horwitz Theatres in Houston, Texas, were projected into the center of the publicity spotlight at the recent Democratic convention as a result of an exploitation stunt in which 48 burros played the leading roles. Will Horwitz, head of the organization, assembled a herd of the "desert canaries" and dedicated one to each state delegation at the convention. This was done by equipping the burros with blankets bearing the name of a State, the number of electoral votes it commands, and a final line reading "Courtesy Horwitz Theatres."

The stunt brought the Horwitz Theatres national as well as local publicity through news reel views taken by all of the film news people and a prominent place in news accounts of the demonstration which followed the nomination of Governor Smith, because one of the highlights of the demonstration on the floor of Sam Houston Hall was the delivery of one of the burros to the box occupied by Mrs. Smith and members of her family. The majority of the newspaper reports included the fact that the living emblem of Democracy was presented to the wife of the party candidate by the Horwitz Theatre.

So favorable was the city's re-action to the donkeys that the committee in charge of the Convention's affairs granted the showman right to parade his donkeys with all political demonstrations and to promenade them about the convention hall grounds at all times.

Donation to City

It is the intention of Mr. Horwitz to turn over a number of the gentle animals to the municipal park for a donkey path and which, incidentally, will represent a perpetual advertisement of the Horwitz Theatres as donors of the desert canaries.

In addition to the donkey stunt, the Horwitz Theatres placed about the city more than 10,000 red cardboard arrows bearing the legend, "Follow the Horwitz Theatres Arrow to the Convention Coliseum" and also the names, Texan, Iris, Isis, Ritz, the four theatres forming the Will Horwitz interests in the city.

Postcard size guidecards were placed in each room of each local hotel—one side of the card bearing a short description of places of interest and the other side calling attention to the outdoor arrows and carrying a miniature reprint of one of the street markers.

Mr. Horwitz is generally conceded to have originated some of the most startling stunts ever attempted in the show business in recent years. His Iris was the first theatre in the country to be equipped with a full power radio station and his "Country Store Night" affair has developed into the "Horwitz Theatres Saveway Store," a complete grocery and drug sundry concern which sells only to patrons of his theatres and to which admittance is gained only through coupons given at the box office of his theatres.

Daylight Time Schedule is Adopted by Canada House

Another Canadian exhibitor to change his program timetable as a method to beat the daylight saving nuisance is Charles Querrie, manager of the Palace Theatre, a handsome suburban house on Danforth Avenue, Toronto. The summer time at the Palace calls for the opening of the doors at 7 P. M., a half hour later than at other seasons of the year. The pictures are started at 7.30, which means that the last showing of the feature is after 9.30 o'clock.

"The patrons seem to like it," is the comment from Mr. Querrie.

On the other hand, Manager A. E. Cauley of the Capitol Theatre, Cobourg, reports that he has lost out in his fight against daylight saving at Cobourg after a real argument with the civic officials.

To make matters worse, after the adoption of changed time and the inauguration of a series of free band concerts under civic auspices, a cheap medicine show struck town and proceeded to draw quite a number from the theatre. "They can't last forever," Mr. Cauley says, however.

Using Radio to Advertise Vitaphone Presentations

The chain of broadcasting stations that exploit Vitaphone pictures in various territories, is being expanded through the activities of Allen S. Glenn, who is traveling for Warner Bros. in the interest of radio hookups and serializations in newspapers.

Thus far the hook-ups attained for exploitation of public interest in Warners pictures embraces these stations: KFWB, Hollywood; WRNY, New York City; WOR, Buffalo; WLW, Cincinnati; KOIL, Council Bluffs; KOIN, Portland, and KOMO, Seattle.

Drohan's Tieup Results in Good Display for Show

Manager A. P. Drohan of the Griffin theatre, Chatham, Ontario, arranged a tie-up with a local music store which produced effective exploitation for his presentation of "Ramona" at the Griffin.

The tie-up featured the Domino Record reproducing the popular "Ramona" song.

E. E. WHITAKER, manager of the Rex theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., introduced a novel ballyhoo for his presentation of "Skirts" at that house recently. Whitaker engaged twelve newsboys, put a skirt on each one of them and had them parade through the town headed by a boy carrying a banner on which the following message appeared: "We are on our way to see Syd Chaplin in Skirts now playing at the Rex." On the back of each boy in the skirt parade were letters in the title and the boys lined up in two flanks in proper position to spell out the title.

JOHN B. CARROLL of Consolidated Amusements in Tampa, Fla., widely noted for his liberality and consideration for the poor, the orphans and the cripples of the city—all of whom have enjoyed free shows and benefits realized from special showings—turned his attention to fathers on the recent celebration of "Fathers Day." All theatres controlled by Consolidated Amusements on that day gave shows at which fathers that could be rounded up at the Seamen's institute and the Old People's home were the guests of the management. Following the show refreshments and cigars were served, the latter being donated by local business houses.

E. R. ROGERS, of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., produced a highly attractive display to feature "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" in his lobby. Using large stones cemented with pine twigs and branches, a fac-simile of a well was built. Resting on top of the wheel was a cutout showing a log cabin. A background of evergreen branches and a floor of sand made the display very realistic. The door of the cabin formed a frame for various stills, mounted on a turntable.

THE Broadvue theatre in Cleveland was the scene of a wedding ceremony recently. B. Z. Levine and Ernest Schwartz, owners and operators of the theatre arranged the event, which took on the flavor of a community celebration. Merchants cooperated with the theatre in presenting gifts for the newly married couple. The stunt gave business a good boost and awakened interest in picture presentations during the summer season.

FRED JOHNSON, manager of the Colonial Theatre, Cambridge, Ohio, won the approval and admiration of his fellow citizens with his recent exploitation of "The Legion of the Condemned." Johnson staged a special morning show for children at which a bouquet of flowers was accepted for admission fee. Between 700 and 800 children attended. At the end of the show, Johnson put the flowers in taxicabs and distributed them among the different local hospitals where they were thoroughly appreciated.

C. A. CLINCH, manager of the Columbia Theatre, Brookville, Pa., conducted a bathing beauty contest in his theatre on June 16, the winner of which will represent Brookville in an elimination contest at Conneaut Lake in August. The winner at Conneaut Lake will go to Hollywood to star in a film picture that will feature bathing beauties.

Stages Six Weeks Campaign for Short Subject at Cleveland Palace

FURTHER evidence that the short subject is beginning to come into its own as an advertised feature of programs at the larger theatres is supplied by the intensive drive which is being carried on in Cleveland for the showing of "Pieces of China," a two-reel special, at Keith's Palace theatre in that city.

The advertising, which was started during the week of June 10 will be carried on for six weeks. "Pieces of China" is receiving space in the regular theatre advertising. It is also being screened for three shows daily, whereas the usual practice is to confine the short subjects to the supper hour program. And it is given the place of honor, just preceding the feature. So, while "Pieces of China" is shown on the screen for the two afternoon and the supper hour performances, it will be seen by many who attend the first evening show. Never before has a short subject been given such prominence at the Palace.

The exploitation of this short subject is equal to the exploitation of any feature. Manager Frank R. Hines, and publicity manager David Nolan arranged a tie-up with the Cleveland Public Library in which the Library has on display book lists on Chinese literature.

Word from Title Basis of Plan for Tie-ups With Merchants

A SIMPLE system of making appropriate tie-ups on "Diamond Handcuffs," was devised by a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploiteer who assisted the publicity staff of the West Coast Theatres in putting over a campaign on this photoplay when it played at the Granada Theatre, San Francisco.

The exploiteer searched through the San Francisco 'phone director for all mercantile firms bearing the name Diamond, and then called personally on the merchants and arranged tie-ups.

The following tie-ups were secured:

Diamond Laundry Company, 3840 18th St. "Let the Diamond Laundry do your washing and then you will have time to see 'Diamond Handcuffs' at the Granada Theatre."

Diamond Palace (Jewelry Store) 797 Market St. "One gem is missing from this collection. You can see it in 'Diamond Handcuffs' at the Granada Theatre."

Diamond Grocery, Geary and Polk Streets. "Do your shopping early at the Diamond Grocery and then go to see 'Diamond Handcuffs' at the Granada Theatre, opening Friday."

Pietzonni's Drug Store, 442 Columbus Ave. The following card was used with a window display of Diamond Dyes. "As full of life and color as Diamond Dyes—'Diamond Handcuffs,' a great romance of Love, Diamonds and the Underworld, opening Friday at the Granada Theatre."

Diamond Sweet Shop, 2786 Diamond St., "Two sure ways to win your sweetheart! A box of Diamond Sweets and two tickets to 'Diamond Handcuffs' opening Friday at the Granada Theatre."

Spelling Turtle Stunt Revived to Exploit "Hellship Bronson"

THE "spelling turtles," which, according to the best knowledge and information of this department were first introduced to picture exploitation as a stunt for "Tol'able David" by Jack Fuld—a veteran exploiteer and one of the most imaginative of the craft—was revived in New York as a leading item of a campaign to feature the showing of "Hellship Bronson" at the New York Hippodrome.

The stunt, used as a window display in a Broadway shop of the Photomaton Corporation, operating slot photography machines, featured fifteen live turtles, each with a letter of the title "Hellship Bronson" painted on its shell, and made the attractive offer of an award of $500 to any person who saw the turtles line up in such manner that the title of the picture was correctly spelled out. The display attracted a great deal of notice, and according to report Michael L. Simmons, director of publicity and advertising for Gotham, distributors of the picture, and the Photomaton Corporation have arranged to travel a troupe of turtles, similarly inscribed to other cities for use in local campaigns. By way of throwing an anchor to windward, the sponsors of the stunt place food enticing to the turtles in corners of the window, thus to make it a bit more diffienlt for a person on the outside of the window to see the name of the picture spelled out.

Kids Safety Club Members Admitted at Cut Rate

As a tie-up with the Edmonton, Alberta, Journal, which is sponsoring a "Just Kids Safety Club," Manager Sam Binder of the Empress Theatre made arrangements for a special admission price to all children wearing the club button. There was a big response.

Syracuse House Reopened With World Premier

The new Empire Theatre in Syracuse, New York, was reopened after a period of darkness, during which extensive renovation was done, with a "world premier" showing of "The Good-Bye Kiss" on Saturday June 16.

Howard Lichey, advertising and publicity director of the theatre, and Bert Perkins, First National exploitation representative, executed a powerful campaign featuring the reopening and the presentation of "Good-Bye Kiss." The campaign was featured by several tie-ups, including a newspaper stunt based on a Gag Contest which ran for eight days, an arrangement with U. S. Army recruiting station where special posters on the picture were posted, and a tie-up with the Colonial Airways whereby upon the arrival of the airmail plane at the Syracuse airport, a print of "The Good-Bye Kiss" was delivered to the head of the Syracuse Post-office and representatives of the theatre—the latter stunt accounting for a large amount of newspaper publicity.

"Eat and See" Ad Line for Theatre-Restaurant Tieup

To exploit his showing of "Chicken a la King," Manager E. E. Whitaker of the Rex theatre in Spartanburg, turned the line "Hear and See," popularized by the growing interest in sound pictures, to "Eat and See." The line was based on a tie-up which Whitaker made with a local sandwich shop to exploit "Chicken a la King."

M-G-M Lion, on Tour, Pays Visit to Broadway

Leo, the star actor in the M-G-M trade mark, entered his de luxe cage, in which he will make a tour of the world, in New York this week. The red and gold cage, mounted on rubber tired wheels, was drawn up Broadway last Monday and parked for a while outside the Capitol Theatre, where Leo attracted a crowd large and enthusiastic enough to satisfy any screen star that he or she had "it" and "these" and "those" and "them" in the bargain.

Celebrate Kunsky's 20th Anniversary July 21

JOHN H. KUNSKY, owner and operator of several large motion picture theatres in Detroit, will celebrate his 20th anniversary as an exhibitor during July. He is among the first picture theatre owners in the world and his career reads like an Alger story. During the 20 years he has maintained major control of the first run situation in Detroit. The first house owned by Mr. Kunsky was operated entirely by himself. He officiated at that time in the capacity of cashier, projectionist, and caretaker. Since then his theatres have proved the most profitable theatrical enterprises in his section of the country. Elaborate plans are being made so that all moving picture fans of Detroit may join in the celebration which will take the form of special programs in all of the 12 Kunsky houses, beginning July 21.

Key City Reports

New York City

THAT some of the producers have been holding back on current releases has been the subject of conversation along the street for some time; this would seem to be borne out by the juggling of certain pictures which appear to be irregular at some theatres. Now comes word that some of the boys are blaming it all on the talkies; that owing to demonstrated pulling strength of sound pictures the ones most adaptable are being diverted to the synchronizing devices for voice culture, whence they will emerge at a slightly later release date—at least, it is so reported.

That's all well enough but the fact remains that under the continued influence of the warm weather and dearth of real strength among the new-comers, Broadway again registered just another week of Summer trade—with the exception of the Capitol where John Gilbert, a prime favorite at this house, had a good picture. The week's business was excellent—'way above Capitol average and the picture, "The Cossacks" (M-G-M) was held for another week.

The Paramount, after its very good week with the Clara Bow picture, fell off a bit with "The Magnificent Flirt" (Par.) and the big Roxy again was under a mark that means real profit with "The Foreign Legion" (U) the added attraction of excellent stage shows at both houses not being enough to compete with existing conditions.

A brighter spot was at the Strand, in comparison to what this house has been doing in the past, and "The Hawk's Nest" (F. N.), the new talkie policy of Vitaphone and Movietone continued, gave this theatre a very good week. As mentioned before in this column, the talkies are being given a good portion of credit for better business here.

At the Rialto and Rivoli business showed a falling off from previous weeks, the former with "The Drag Net" (Par.) just getting by and the latter with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) in after a considerable two-a-day run at another house, did not do well at all. U's "The Man Who Laughs" will go into the Rialto and the Rivoli will replace Uncle Tom with "King of Kings," to which sound effects have been added.

The Criterion with "Wings" (Par) continues to creep up towards a year's run and still can be rated one of the best pullers among the two-a-days. Local conditions cause it to fluctuate from time to time but not enough to hurt to any great extent nor show any red figures. Considerable action is reported at the Globe where Fox's "The Red Dance" and the Bernard Shaw Movietone reel are in evidence. Shaw is claimed to have caused most of the commotion. Another Fox special, "Fazil" still shows at the Gaiety but this one is due to go out about the middle of the month.

The Cameo went along about the same as usual with "The Station Master" and while the weather let things down slightly at the Embassy, where "Tempest" (U. A.) is staying, there can be no real complaint registered here. At the Astor, "The Trail of '98" (M-G-M) had just another fair week and "Dawn" is playing its last two weeks at the Times Square. As mentioned, "The Man Who Laughs" (U) departs from the Central to enter the Rialto for a few weeks' stay. The showing being made by "The Lion and the Mouse" (W. B.) at Warner's is good, in view of the prevailing conditions, and the same can be said for "The End of St. Petersburg" (Hammerstein) at Hammerstein's theatre.

Tampa

THE daily rains didn't hit the show shops very hard last week, as they came early or held off until the crowds had decided to take a chance. Clara Bow led the field, as usual, and pulled excellent business for the Tampa the first half, in her latest, "Ladies of The Mob." The business was not as strong as some of her other pictures but it was very good. "The Vanishing Pioneer" was the feature of the last half and it drew nicely.

"Powder My Back" was the feature of the Victory program and it, with the usual quartette of Vitaphone presentations and Movietone News, kept the business up nicely, though not as big as the talking features.

The Strand didn't click very strongly. They had the hard luck to be the weak sister of the week as none of the pictures featured seemed to have the "pull. "Golf Widows" and "Broadway Daddies" were each used two days and "Jaws of Steel" was used three.

The Franklin went over fine. "Ramona," a second run, pulled like a plaster. Looked like winter time to see a line half a block long. This second run did better than the first runs used, which were "Clothes Make the Woman" and "The Desert Pirate."

San Francisco

EVEN though cold weather conditions during the past week injured most of the first run San Francisco motion picture theatres in the afternoon, the evenings were not so bad, considering everything.

Of all the theatres, Loew's Warfield did the best by all odds. Here was shown the picture "Happiness Ahead," which, together with the ONeill Sisters Kiddie Revue, crowded that theatre both evenings and afternoons, even to a greater extent than Manager Lou Golden contemplated. The Golden Gate theatre reported good business with the picture "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" and where vaudevile acts also were shown.

"Four Sons," held over for another week at the St. Francis theare, did a fairly good business in the evenings. At the Granada theatre, only fair business was done with the showing of "The Hawk's Head," together with Publix Revue acts and musical and other acts.

The Union Square theatre did a good business for this time of year with "Dead Man's Curve" and "The Wild West" on the screen and special acts on the stage. "The Lion and the Mouse," while considered a very good first run, did not draw so well at the Embassy theatre where it was shown a third time.

The residential theatres did a wonderful business, considering weather conditions. The Coliseum and Alexandria theatres being the ones. At the Alexandria "The Noose" drew very well as did "Flying Romeos," together with acts at the Coliseum.

Seattle

WITH warm weather here in earnest and a group of only average films at the picture houses to counteract the attractions of nature, business in the theatrical line continued below par last week.

The Fifth Avenue theatre probably was the league leader, with "Happiness Ahead" on the screen and Fanchon Marco's "Opportunity Idea" on the stage. The film demonstrated Colleen Moore's drawing power at the box office, and Herme King as master of ceremonies with Emma Leht, Seattle girl, featured in the stage show, put that end of the program over in strong style. An average week.

At the Seattle theatre, "The Big Noise" was featured on the screen with the Publix "Take-A-Chance Show" on the stage. It was the original plan to make the entire program a take-a-chance affair, but the management weakened at the last minute and announced the picture. Jack Bain made his appearance as master of ceremonies, and was not received very well, following in the footsteps of the very popular Jules Buffano. Business was just fair.

At the Columbia theatre, "The Love Mart" played to the best houses that have been seen at this theatre in many weeks, but even at that it was just an average week. Billie Dove is popular here, and the picture was well received.

The Blue Mouse theatre played to average houses with "Pay As You Enter" and a list of Vitaphone and Movietone shorts, but it begins to look as though it will take road show attractions to bring the former big business during the summer months to this house.

At the Embassy theatre, "She" was a better than average picture, widely exploited, that played to houses slightly above average. The Orpheum, with "The Chorus Kid" failed to get by very strongly, as was also the case at Pantages, where "Why Sailors Go Wrong" was the film attraction.

"Chinatown Charlie" was featured very strongly at Universal's Winter Garden theatre, and played to business slightly better than usual, and the Egyptian theatre led the neighborhood houses with the first out-of-town showings of "The Jazz Singer" with Vitaphone.

The United Artists theatre still remained closed, but rumor had it that a reopening under a 25c. "summer admission" policy was just around the corner.

Atlanta

ATLANTA box-offices were only fair last week.

The Howard, scheduled for a big week with Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob," was disappointed. This was not a Bow picture, and although liked, failed to draw the crowds equal to her other works.

The Capitol celebrated the first anniversary successfully with the premiere of Universal's picture, "Foreign Legion," and the innovation of a stock company who gave "Sally."

Loew's Grand with William Haines in "Telling the World" enjoyed very good business.

The Beery-Hatton team in "The Big Killing" brought fair audiences to the Rialto and "Nameless Men" was not a good box-office bet for the Metropolitan.

Three westerns gave the Tudor an average week, which the New Alamo enjoyed also with second runs..

Harrisburg, Pa.

BASED on summer standards of attendance, the business of the Harrisburg theatres the last week of June was far from disheartening to the managers. Rain and cooler weather than usual for this time of year had caused many persons to defer starting their vacation trips out of town and naturally the picture theatres benefited to the exent of being comfortably filled at most of the evening performances.

Evidently Harrisburg movie fans regarded "The Garden of Eden," with Corinne Griffith, Lowell Sherman and Charley Ray, as just the right type for warm wather entertainment, for they patronized it perhaps better than any other movie in town last week. The play had all the elements of ideal light entertainment.

Florence Vidor in "The Magnificent Flirt" at the Victoria also proved to be a peppy summertime show which seemed to please well, while "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris" was quite acceptable to the patrons of the Colonial.

At the State, where vaudeville as well as pictures hold forth, the screen feature the last half of the week was John Gilbert in "Shame," a Fox reissue that seemed to have an especially strong appeal for the feminine patrons. The National offered "Old San Francisco," with Dolores Costello, to fair-sized audiences, while the Broad Street did average business with a return to Harrisburg of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," featuring Lon Chaney.

Whatever may be said as to whether or not Westerns are losing some of their pulling power, Tom Mix continues to hold his big following in Harrisburg as evidenced by good attendance at the Russell theatre, which showed Tom in "The Arizona Wildcat." The Grand presented Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Fireman, Save My Child," to average summertime crowds.

Milwaukee

AND so ends another mediocre week for Milwaukee theatres. The summer season is well under way and business has reached a very low level. Rain in torrents discouraged theatre goers for four days and the remaining days were the balmy variety that drew folks out into the big open spaces away from the theatres.

The Garden theatre was a fortunate exception and drew exceedingly good houses throughout the entire week, rain or shine. "Tenderloin" was featured here and is being held over for another week because of the unusually good run it had.

The Wisconsin offered "Something Is Always Happening" and on the stage "Good-Bye, Dave," Dave Schooler's farewell appearance, but even with a strong bill and extensive exploitation failed to draw anything but just fair business. "Across to Singapore" was the Merrill's feature and business was dull.

"Fools for Luck" at the Strand was sparsely attended.

The Alhambra fared slightly better with "The Last Laugh" which brought in fairly good results.

The two vaudeville theatres finished the week with satisfactory results which is their usual custom in this city. "Sally of the Scandals" was the photoplay feature at the Orpheum and "Rinty of the Desert" was screened at the Riverside.

Neighborhood theatres got a better break this week than the down town theatres. "Sharp Shooters" at the Garfield, Uptown and Modjeska resulted in fair business.

"The Port of Missing Girls" at the Oriental and Tower drew fairly well.

"No. 13 Washington Square" at the Venetian was very well attended. "The Patsy" drew good houses at the Colonial. "The Patent Leather Kid" was well received at the National and Milwaukee.

Albany

THERE were two or three perfectly good reasons which accounted for the fact that business was decidely off last week at the motion picture theatres in Albany. In the first place, the weather was warm and muggy with frequent showers, and in the next place, some tens of thousands of men and women were too much interested in the outcome of the Democratic National Convention at Houston and Governor Alfred E. Smith's chances of landing the nomination, to desert their radios during the evenings. Even those who were not fortunate enough to own a radio lost no time in seeking out the homes of friends in order that they could follow the convention. On Saturday night every one in Albany joined in a big demonstration in honor of Governor Smith, and with a parade and fireworks there was little hope for the motion picture theatres.

At the Leland "Why Sailors Go Wrong" drew just fairly well for one of the evening shows. Colleen Moore, in "Happiness Ahead," would probably have done a fine business almost any other week of the year at the Mark Strand. Clinton Square, using "Rose of the Golden West" and "Clothes Make the Woman," played to fairly good houses. The Mark Ritz employed May McAvoy in "The Little Snob, with just fair success.

Neighborhood houses reported business off. Proctors Grand, using pictures and vaudeville, has reduced afternoon prices for women in an effort to stimulate business.

In Troy, "The Street of Sin," running for the first four days of a split week at the Troy Theatre, did not seem to carry any great appeal in building up business, although those that saw it admitted that the acting was good, but in the same breath deplored the type of picture. During the remainder of the week "The Sporting Age" failed to fill the house.

The Lincoln did an excellent business during the entire week with Norma Shearer in "The Actress."

Proctor's Troy Theatre used "Hold 'Em, Yale" along with its vaudeville, and probably did more business than any theatre in the collar city.

Ottawa

RAINY weather worked to the advantage of the theatres in Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of June 25, while the closing of the schools helped to boost matinee patronage. Even Circus Day was robbed of considerable of its glamor because of wetness.

Light entertainment was served at the Regent theatre with the presentation of "The Garden of Eden" and a large coterie of patrons was quite satisfied with the fare. The Paramount News was a substantial portion of the program.

"Midnight Madness" attracted many to B. F. Keith's theatre and it proved to be the type of picture that enjoyed increasing patronage.

The Imperial theatre had a healthy week with Norma Shearer in "The Actress." She displayed versatility in this production and the male patrons liked it as well as the ladies.

There were plenty of star players in "French Dressing" at the Centre theatre, and this farce was one of the best in weeks, according to general comment around town. Patronage was steady.

The neighborhood houses fairly revelled in action pictures—the more hair-raising the better. "Western Whirlwind," starring Jack Hoxie, caused a rush of family trade at the Rex theatre. The serial "Trail of the Tiger" helped to keep up the excitement.

Louise Dresser was found in "White Flannels" at the Columbia theatre, the picture being well-liked for its theme by both old and young. The instalment of "Masked Menace" brought a cheer from the kids.

Cincinnati

SUMMING up the reports from the various exhibitors in Cincinnati for the past week, business as a whole was "just tol'-able," to quote the expression of one manager.

The problem confronting the Keith-Albee-Libson-Hiedingsfeld combination in this city seems to center around the Albee and Palace theatres, both of which houses now offer the same type of entertainment, feature pictures and vaudeville, following practically the same policy. The latter house has just changed from presentation to straight vaudeville. It looks like a case of "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

The Capitol theatre appears to have chalked up the best attendance record with "Tenderloin," which was the first talking feature at this house since "The Jazz Singer," some weeks ago. This house also features Movietone. Business was good throughout the week, as business goes at this particular period.

Colleen Moore in "Happiness Aead," at the Albee, was accorded a fair share of patronage, but not one that will go down on the records as a gala week. The vaudeville acts were well liked.

"The Vanishing Pioneer," at the Strand, attracted quite a lot of the regulars at this house, but no heavy grosses were piled up at that.

Keith's presented "Across to Singapore," but no extra dividends will be declared by reason of the business done with this one.

"Honor Bound," at the Lyric, did only fair, the same being true of "Hello, Cheyenne," first half, and "A Dog of the Regiment," last half at the Family.

Palace, vaudeville and pictures, maintained a steady flow throughout the week, but the flow was not exceedingly heavy.

Several rainy nights helped contribute to the general decrease.

Salt Lake City

SOME very good picture programs here last week accounted to a great degree for the big theatrical attendance at the downtown first run houses.

"The Racket," with Thomas Meighan in the leading role, went over well to packed houses at the Capitol during the week.

The Pantages theatre presented as the film offering "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," to packed houses, although the tendency was to wish for a more pleasing ending to the production. The vaudeville bill was also presented in this connection here.

Colleen Moore with Edmund Lowe in "Happiness Ahead" was the feature production on the picture program at the Paramount Empress, where fairly crowded houses were the general rule throughout the week.

The Victory theatre had tremendously good results again last week with most of the credit being due to the fact of the great interest now manifest in the synchronized pictures; "The Vanishing Pioneer" was the feature presentation, with a special Vitaphone program being presented as well as Movietone News, it is reported.

"Hot Heels" with Glenn Tryon and Patsy Ruth Miller did a satisfactory business at the American this week, as did Jacqueline Logan in "Midnight Madness" at the Gem theatre.

The second showing of "The Crowd" went over well at the Rialto and the "Rose of the Bowery" drew fairly good business to the State this past week.

William Haines in "Spring Fever" was shown at the Tower neighborhood theatre with good results as was "Seventh Heaven" at the Forum of Sugarhouse, a suburb of Salt Lake.

Weather has been warm throughout the daytime here this week, but cool in the evenings.

Dallas

BUSINESS has been rather slow at the Dallas theatres the past week and rain has been more than plentiful. However, no losses are reported and so things could be a lot worse.

"The Lion and the Mouse," with Lionel Barrymore and May McAvoy and William Collier, at the Melba, was easily the outstanding picture of the week and by far the best patronized and most liked picture of the week. The talking sequences put it over big and the picture did much to stabilize the shakiness of Vitaphone in Dallas since the showing of "The Jazz Singer." Business was good the entire week.

At the Palace "The Cossacks," with John Gilbert and Renee Adoree, brought good receipts and was well received. Business at the Palace has been slipping the past few weeks but the past week put things in usual order.

"Why Sailors Go Wrong,' with Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara, brought fairly good receipts to the Majestic, but the show as a whole was not so good and attendance reflected this condition.

The Capitol showing "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," with Buster Keaton and Ernest Torrence, failed to get the crowds and the gross for the week was low.

At the Old Mill "The Wheel of Chance," with Richard Barthelmess, and "The Night Flyer," with William Boyd and Jobyna Ralston, brought only fair business for the week.

"Laugh, Clown, Laugh," with Lon Chaney, and "Easy Come, Easy Go," with Richard Dix and Nancy Carroll, brought fair business to the Arcadia for the past seven days, which means a break in the Arcadia's unusually good business for the past several weeks.

Chicago

DURING the past week business showed an improvement in spots, probably owing to the long-continued spell of rainy weather, but this was largely discounted by the week-end slump caused by the extremely hot Saturday and Sunday.

In the loop the interest of theatre men was focused on the opening of McVicker's Theatre, which had been closed for several days for the installation of a complete Movietone and Vitaphone equipment. The house opened on Friday with "The Street Angel," and for the first time in its history without an orchestra, all music being produced by Movietone and Vitaphone. For the first two days attendance was heavy, and managers are watching with interest to see what the result of the policy will be this week.

The Chicago offered as its screen feature "Ladies of the Mob," "Hey, Hey," as its stage show and Spitalny's orchestral production, "Gypsy Melodies," "business holding up average. At the Oriental "The Michigan Kid" was the feature picture, and Al Kvale and his gang appeared in "Levee Lovers," normal attendance resulting.

"The Cossacks" did well at the Roosevelt, which will join McVickers as a non-orchestra house on July 9th, the installation of Movietone and Vitaphone being practically completed.

Steamboat Bill" opened its two weeks' run at United Artists Theatre on Friday, having followed "Ramona," which did a fairly satisfactory business."

The Uptown Theatre featured "Sadie Thompson" on the screen, Benny Kreuger and his orchestra holding the stage. The program seemed to have a strong appeal for North Side audiences and business was good. "Sally of the Scandals," plus Vitaphone and Movietone and a big stage show, accounts for a satisfactory week at the Granada. The Marbro had a big-name act, Leon Errol in person heading the bill and "Sally of the Scandals" on the screen, business being good.

New Orleans

WITH all first run theatres showing strong pictures and exploiting and publicizing heavy, business during the past week spurted over any previous week during the past few months.

It was a toss up between the new Saenger theatre and its across-the-street neighbor, Loew's State, for first honors. The new Saenger featured John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Cossacks," and the popularity of these stars with local theatregoers resulted in a week of excellent business for the playhouse. Advertisements of the theatre announced this was the world premiere of the film. Exploitation experts from the Southern headquarters of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company assisted the local exchange and Saenger publicity department to exploit the film.

Loew's State theatre featured Thomas Meighan in "The Racket," and the picture proved one of the most entertaining of the year. Not only did the newspaper critics praise the film but those who saw it as well. The film was given much publicity and exploitation by the Loew State press department. The stage program was one of the strongest in weeks but the film was good enough to draw them to the house.

The Orpheum showed Sue Carol in "Walking Back," a delightful bit of entertainment and this house's business took a jump. The stage bill was noteworthy and aided materially in drawing patrons to the university place house.

"Forbidden Hours" at the Strand with Raman Novarro, drew well, while "The Actress" also did a good business despite the fact that the picture had its local premiere at Loew's State a few weeks previous. Sergeant Mulligan," the Globe feature, did well.

Perfect summer weather has prevailed with the temperature high. Most of the downtown houses are equipped with modern cooling systems and the managers are advertising this fact extensively.

New Orleans gets its first taste of the Vitaphone in a few days when the Tudor theatre, recently rebeautified and remodeled by the Saenger Theatres, Inc., will inaugurate this new feature, "Glorious Betsy," with Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, and four acts of Vitaphone vaudeville will be the opening attractions. The Saenger officials have publicized the Vitaphone extensively, and it is expected to go over big here.

Neighborhood theatres continue to do excellent business. Many of the houses have three feature nights a week. These include opportunity nights, bathing revues and other attractions.

Kansas City

A CHANGE to cooler weather played havoc with amusement parks and proved a boom to exhibitors of Kansas City last week, attendance at practically all of the down town first run houses showing an increase, despite the fact that the lineup of pictures was no stronger than usual or there was nothing out of the ordinary in the way of exploitation.

Corinne Griffith in "The Garden of Eden" at Loew's Midland did a good business all week, as did "Glorious Betsy" at the Globe theatre. Colleen Moore in "Happiness Ahead" at the Mainstreet played to an unusually good week's attendance, while at the Pantages "Chicken a la King" drew well from the "flapper" and "cake-eater" ranks. At the Liberty "The Road to Ruin" continued its third week doing a good business, the management's suggestion that patrons be limited to persons more than 16 years old exciting the natural curiosity which was sufficient to draw them in. "Telling the World," featuring William Haines, also did well at the Newman theatre.

Pittsburgh

LOEW'S Penn, as usual, did the biggest week's business of any local theatre. "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," was a riotous success, and the Penn audiences got many uproarious laughs from this excellent comedy. The stage attraction, Publix unit entitled "Sunny Skies," was of average quality and got by O. K.

At the Stanley, "His Tiger Lady" was on the screen and on the stage "Graduation Days." The entire show was weak and below average. Business was but fair.

The newest Beery-Hatton comedy, "The Big Killing," was at the Grand, and the audiences seemed to enjoy it very much. Business was good in the afternoons at twenty-five cents admission, but fell off at night when fifty cents was charged. (Announcement was made that night admission will be cut to forty cents next week.)

"Happiness Ahead" got a little better than average business at the Liberty. Increased business, partly due to the fact that the nearby Regent theatre, first-run house, has been closed.

"The Magnificent Flirt," with Florence Vidor, proved to be good entertainment, and went over in fine style with the patrons, although business was not so good in spite of a price cut. Five acts of vaudeville rounded out the bill.

The Cameraphone again played a double bill to good houses. Productions shown were: "Golf Widows" and "Nameless Men."

The Alhambra had the best week in a long while with "Across to Singapore."

In addition to the closing of the Regent this week, the Olympic theatre has also been closed.

Business, as a whole, among the Pittsburgh theatres, being very discouraging.

Cleveland

THE summer slump is here in all its vigor. Although the weather has at no time been uncomfortably hot, nevertheless, it takes a big picture, or a novelty like talking pictures, to draw crowds.

"Tenderloin," the first of the talking movies on display here, did well enough during its second week at the Stillman. The picture itself excited favorable comment as good underworld entertainment, but the greatest interest was the talking parts. Colleen Moore, who always draws good houses, succeeded in bringing all her fans and admirers at the Allen last week to see her latest picture, "Happiness Ahead," which can be depended upon to keep the whole family entertained. "The Racket," Thomas Meighan's best picture of recent times, got excellent newspaper notices, was well spoken of by all who saw it, and was as well supported by the public as can be expected in June. "The Dragnet" did fairly well at Keith's Palace. This ranks high among underworld pictures, on cast, acting, direction and sincerity. Should be a big attraction in the full swing of the season.

"Name the Woman" at Keith's East 105th Street, very entertaining melodrama, gave Anita Stewart excellent material to work with. It has thrills, mystery, love and justice, properly combined into an interesting whole. Business was fair.

"Love Hungry," shown at Keith's East 105th the last half of the week, proved to be a charming comedy drama that pleased the audience even though they were limited.

The Park played a first-run neighborhood engagement of "The Legion of the Condemned" the first half of the week to pretty good business, and "Harold Teen," the last half of the week, to fair business.

"Wings played its 12th week at the Colonial at road show prices, and did well enough to justify holding it over another week or two.

Neighborhood houses are complaining bitterly.

Minneapolis

PAUL WHITEMAN and his orchestra came into the Minnesota last week and did a whale of a business with "Lady Be Good," a picture featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, as the secondary attraction. Whiteman had plenty of competition in town, including a dance marathon which had the town completely on its ear, and greyhound races which drew thousands to the nearby town of Savage, but he was able to surmount all this and give the Minnesota an exceedingly prosperous week. At the State the semi-annual edition of the F. & R. Kiddie revue helped the attendance considerably, although the Denny comedy, "Good Morning, Judge," was also influential in drawing the crowds.

"The Road to Ruin," one of those sensational "wayward girl" pictures, completed a second week at the Strand, with business holding up fairly well. The Strand had been closed, but opened temporarily to accommodate this film. At the Lyric Richard Dix did a fair business in "Easy Come, Easy Go."

"Woman Wise" rounded out the Pantages program, while the Hennepin-Orpheum found "Walking Back," with Sue Carol, a good drawing card.

The neighborhood houses found business only fair in most instances, with the Rialto, American, Arion, Lagoon, Lyndale and Loring showing such pictures as "The Enemy," "Baby Mine," "Dressed to Kill," "That's My Baby" and "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come." In addition to the dance marathon and dog races, there were two circuses in town, and the combination was a little hard on some of the theatres.

Baltimore

BUSINESS was not anything to brag about at the first-run moving picture theatres here during the week beginning Monday, June 24.

Two houses doing the best business for the week were Loew's Century and Warners' Metropolitan. At the Century Norma Shearer, always a favorite in Baltimore, appeared on the screen in "The Actress" and on the same bill was a stage presentation act entitled Xylophonia, headed by Ted Claire and his orchestra with other vaudeville favorites.

At Warners' Metropolitan, where "The Lion and the Mouse" presented with sound effects and dialogue went into its second week, co-starring Lionel Barrymore and May McAvoy, the attendance was good throughout the week and built better on Friday and Saturday.

Attendance at the Stanley where "Happiness Ahead," starring Colleen Moore, was the feature film attraction with "The Streets of New York" as the stage presentation act with Eddie Sherwood and his stage band and other vaudeville players, drew fairly good throughout the week.

"The Naked Truth" with Jack Mulhall and Helene Chadwick, an old picture, was presented at the Palace, a burlesque house which had been closed for the summer, with social hygiene films on the same bill and a lecture on the social evil was thrown in. Women were admitted during the first four days while men were admitted Friday and Saturday.

The attendance was a surprise for it continued consistently good throughout the week and even better during the days set aside for men.

This is the Sam Cummins' picture which was banned for showing in New York. J. C. Mowbray, handling the film in Baltimore did not mention having any trouble to get the Maryland Censors to pass it.

A fair business was done at the Little Theatre with "Kriemhild's Revenge," a sequel to Siegfried. This Ufa production was as well done as its predecessor. It was presented by the Motion Picture Guild, Inc.

"The Phantom of the Opera," starring Lon Chaney, with Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in the juvenile leads, came up for a revival showing at the Keith-Albee New Garden with six acts of Keith-Albee high class vaudeville on the same bill. But business was only fair during the week.

"Drums of Love," the D. W. Griffith production with Lionel Barrymore and Mary Philbin only went over fairly well at Loew's Valencia during its second week there. This is attributed to the fact that the picture did not seem to ring true with the audience.

"Golf Widows," featuring Vera Reynolds and Harrison Ford, proved an entertaining vehicle at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome with five acts of family time Keith-Albee vaudeville, but business was only So-so.

Portland, Ore.

A WEEK of cooler weather, a nice assortment of pictures, but box-office receipts did not average up to the height they should considering the excellence of the various bills and the exploitation and tie-ups secured by the various managers.

"The Lion and the Mouse" opened at the Blue Mouse for an indefinite run, and packed them in; in fact, the first day was close to the house record, and the three principals, May McAvoy, Lionel Barrymore and William Collier, in their speaking parts, were accorded heavy applause. Hugh Herbert, in "Prediction," and Clyde Cook in "Luck in Love," were the Vitaphone acts. Movietone shorts completed a most entertaining bill.

Pantages new bill included Lois Moran and Neil Hamilton in "Don't Marry," an extraordinarily good film for laughing purposes, while balance of acts also carried appeal and house had fairly good week.

The Bake a Cake Contest, which was jointly sponsored during the past few weeks by Portland Theatre and "The Telegram," helped to swell the receipts at the big house. Manager Blair entertained the judges of contest, committeemen and employes of Portland Gas Company. "The Big Noise," with Chester Conklin, drew well. Phil Lampkin and his stage band pulled a number of musical suprises, accompanied by Ritz Bros. Homer McDonald presided in capable manner at the Wurlitzer. In spite of good bill box-office showed weakness.

"Romona" was held over for a second week at the Columbia, but receipts fell below those of first week. However, the picturization has been voted the equal of either the song or novel.

W. E. Tebbetts, owner and manager of the Oriental, returned from Hollywood and brought back some exceptionally good films, which will be shown patrons in near future. For the week the Oriental offered, with only fair patronage, "Turn Back the Hours."

"Ladies of the Mob," with Clara Bow, gained additional friends at the Broadway Theatre in this exceptionally good vehicle, and it is hoped she will bring more of the same transportation. George Stoll and his band helped to put over the Fanchon & Marco stage idea "Birds." Evening performances brought out good houses, but matinees were below average.

Peoples Theatre, second-run house, showed "Honor Bound," with George O'Brien and Estelle Taylor, with fair receipts.

Rivoli Theatre, now on split week plan, showed "The Patsy," but as this is third time it played here this season, including the stage version by Duffy Players, it did not have heavy run.

Hollywood Theatre showed "The Last Command," and offered prizes to students in contest of the three last commands in history. This brought increased patronage. Movietone act, "Voices of Italy," and the Vatican Choir. Good patronage.

Omaha

DURING the past week the theatres of Omaha played to only average business, with two bad weather breaks in the week no extraordinary business could be expected, a severe thunder storm Friday lasting most of the day put the damper on the theatre business for that day and again the following Thursday another heavy rain slowed up the business for the week.

The Orpheum with a Special Six Act All Star Show and "Three Ring Marriage,' starring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, proved to draw only average business.

Boyd Erwin was the headliner at the World with Marion Davies in "The Patsy" on the screen, four other acts of World vaudeville completed the program and there were no complaints about the business.

Colleen Moore in "Happiness Ahead" was widely publicized at the Riveria and the week looked big but the rain slowed up the business, Paul Spor presented "Snap Shots," a Publix stage show, and the program as a whole was accepted by the audience as one of the best to play here yet.

The Rialto came in with the largest Paramount Western, marking Jack Holt's return to the Omaha screen, "The Vanishing Pioneer," business was up to the average and the picture was well liked.

Larry Jean Fisher, guest organist at the Riveria during Johnson's absence, was accepted with a burst of applause. The boy plays lots of organ, too.

"Conquest" Next Feature for Monte Blue

Monte Blue has been summoned back to the Warner Studio from his vacation to begin immediate filming on "Conquest," his forthcoming Vitaphone picture in which H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson will also be featured. The story is being adapted from a work of Mary Imlay Taylor, originally entitled "The Candle in the Wind." Michael Curtiz, now making "Noah's Ark," will handle the Blue vehicle. Edmund Breese and Tully Marshall, former stage actors, will also be seen and heard.

Ruth Elder Sailing from France for Picture

Ruth Elder, aviatrix signed not long ago by Paramount, has cut short her stay in Europe. She sailed from Cherbourg last Wednesday. Production of "Moran of the Marines," in which she will have the feminine lead, is expected to begin as soon as she arrives on the coast. The pictures, to star Richard Dix, was originally scheduled to follow "Redskin" on Dix' program, but a change in plans made it necessary to summon Miss Elder back from abroad.

Crook Drama Columbia's First July Release

"Beware of Blondes" is Columbia's first July release. The cast is headed by Matt Moore, Roy D'Arcy and Dorothy Revier, and includes Robert Edeson, Walter P. Lewis and Harry Semels. The production was made under the direction of George B. Seitz.

Malcolm Strauss Prepares New Underworld Film

Malcolm Strauss, who produced "Into the Net" a few years ago for Pathe, is now preparing for his next production which will be an original entitled "The Queen of the Underworld."

Opinions on Pictures

The Big Killing

Just an Ordinary Movie

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is said that this is the last of the Beery-Hatton pieces, and if they don't make them any better than this, it's about time they ceased. Not that Wally and Ray are lacking as funmakers. Far from it. But they do need ideas that aren't bound up with motheaten slapstick. The family fued theme has been exploited before, to better advantage.

This one follows a groove all the way, and while it digs up a laugh quite often, the laughter is aroused more over the individual efforts of the players than from the scenes. The stars, members of a carnival, are hired as killers to exterminate a neighboring family.

The Hicks clan wants the Beagles out of the way. The "killers" think the Beagles are dogs. So the gags spill over when the boys run afoul of the bloodthirsty mountaineers. The subtitles are quite nifty and do much to overcome the lack of real comedy. The romantic appeal is furnished by Mary Brian and Lane Chandler of the houses of Beagle and Hicks.

The piece will slide by pretty in the average neighborhood house, but for high class houses it needs a well-varied program.

Drawing Power: If Beery-Hatton team get by in your house, piece should do business. Suitable for average trade. Needs strong billing and strong support. Exploitation Angles: Feature Beery and Hatton in last of comedy tie up. Bill as comedy based on mountain feud. Run portraits of Mary Brian and Lane Chandler.

THEME: Comedy of fake sharpshooters hired to participate in mountain feud.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, 5,808 feet. Released, May 19, 1928. The Cast: Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Anders Randolph, Mary Brian, Gardner James, Lane Chandler, Paul McAllister, James Mason, Ralph Yearsley, Leo Willis, Walter James. Director, F. Richard Jones.

The Hawk's Nest

Up and At 'Em Melodrama—Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ENOUGH action is crammed into this one for a serial and with Milton Sills carrying on in his customary he-man fashion the filmgoer is in for much excitement. The star has left the great open spaces for a try in Chinatown and he goes Lon Chaney for a while when you consider his make-up. In the role of a disfigured hero of the late war he seeks oblivion in the Chinese underworld where he becomes the ruler. It is his job to rehabilitate himself by ridding the community of villainy. But in order to establish his erstwhile confidence he undergoes plastic surgery to make over his face. With this accomplished he dedicates himself to the work of winning the heroine and polishing off the villains.

The picture has a wealth of action and incident and certainly does keep moving all the way. It packs sufficient suspense, thrills and romance to please those people who dote on something doing every minute. And Sills? Who can forget Sills in whatever he undertakes? He has he-manned so much now that he would disappoint us if he ever refrained from engaging in one of those knock-em-down-and-drag-'em-out fights. It isn't so novel, as to plot and execution. But it has entertainment value.

Drawing Power: Depends on Sills-Kenyon following. O. K. for average houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up star as having another he-man role. Feature Doris Kenyon. Play up the star's happy family life. Bill as exciting melodrama.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, 7,426 feet. Released, May 27, 1928. Cast: Milton Sills, Doris Kenyon, Montague Love, Sojin, Stuart Holmes. Director, Benjamin Christensen.

The Wheel of Chance

Not a Big Story, But Interestingly Done

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE dual role figures prominently here and by doing so it stands to reason that dramatic license and coincidence carry the plot along. These factors do not spoil the interest even though they do make it easy to spot events in advance. The director has seen to it that it moves progressively with every scene worked for all its worth.

Barthelmess does a creditable piece of work in the role of twin brothers, separated during infancy through a Russian pogrom. When the children are brought to America, one, reared by his thrifty parents, becomes a prosecuting attorney, while the other, not so fortunate, becomes a gangster.

The dramatic fireworks are shot off when the good brother prosecutes the other for the murder of his sweetheart. The double exposure scenes are finely executed and difficult to detect. And the courtroom atmosphere is well suggested.

It sloughs off toward the finish on a wave of sentiment, but leaves an impression, nevertheless of a satisfactory melodrama, capably acted and directed. Barthelmess differentiates the characters neatly and his support is first rate.

Drawing Power: Should draw with Barthelmess fans. Crook melodramas doing well and this is one of them. For all kinds of trade. Exploitation Angles: Feature star in heavy dramatic role.

THEME: Melodrama of twin brothers with one prosecuting the other, though ignorant of his identity.

Produced and distributed by First National. Length, 6,895 feet. Released, June 10, 1928. The Cast: Richard Barthelmess, Bodil Rosing, Warner Oland, Ann Schaefer, Lina Basquette, Margaret Livingston, Sidney Franklin, Martha Franklin. Director Alfred Santell.

The Michigan Kid

Fair-to-Middlin' But Carries Thrills

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY haven't gotten through with the Alaskan gold rush, the latest to go adventuring in the Klondike being an adaptation of a yarn by Rex Beach. As melodramas go it is thrilling enough, but lacks conviction. And the thrills manage to compensate for a story that does a hop, skip and a jump all over the place. The action is purely physical and packs a wallop in its climax when the camera is so placed as to capture a juicy thrill when the occupants of a canoe go over the falls.

The idea presents a gambler in a Klondike boom town whose work is cut out for him when he rescues his sweetheart from the villain and the villainy of old Dame Nature, herself. The shot of the plunging canoe is realistic enough in its design, though it is conceived with such exaggeration that it looms up as quite picturey. Nevertheless this is the highlight in the picture.

The hero had gone to Alaska to forget an unkind remark hurled at him by his boyhood sweetheart. The girl eventually arrives in the gold country and the end is in sight when she is saved from dishonor or death or both. Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree have the principal roles and act with good sincerity. Lloyd Whitlock is the oily villain. The film will do in the program houses. It has an alluring title and a punch to please the dyed-in-the-wool fan.

Drawing Power: Title and cast. Suitable for program houses. Exploitation Angles: Feature as story by Rex Beach. Tease the title. Bill as fast-moving melodrama of Alaska during the gold rush. Feature cast.

THEME: Melodrama of sensitive youth who flees from his sweetheart when her father upbraids him. Makes good and becomes reconciled to girl.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, six reels. Released, July, 1928. The Cast: Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree, Lloyd Whitlock, Fred Esmelton, Adolph Milar, Maurice Murphy, Virginia Grey, Dick Palm. Director, Irvin Willat.

Griffith Will Direct "The Love Song"

The United Artists production "The Love Song" will be directed by D. W. Griffith and not by Sam Taylor, as previously announced. Upon the arrival of Mary Pickford in Hollywood it was agreed upon that Taylor, who directed Miss Pickford in "My Best Girl," would direct her next vehicle.

Griffith has completed "The Battle of the Sexes" and will begin in a few weeks upon "The Love Song." Irving Berlin has composed a theme for this picture which will be sung in Movietone by Lupe Velez, its Mexican feminine star. Taylor was at work on the scenario when the switch in directors took place.

Three-Phase Electrical Definitions

A PROJECTIONIST recently asked the writer to explain the current and voltage values resulting from the several three-phase connections claiming that it was difficult for him to understand them as he continually kept thinking of them in terms of direct current values with which he was more familiar.

For the benefit of any other men who may be in the same predicament, we are repeating here essentially the same explanations given to this projectionist mentioned above.

The following definitions are the simple fundamental three-phase electrical definitions which hold true for the several methods of connecting three-phase apparatus.

Voltage and Currents

In a three-phase system, circuit or apparatus, there are two voltages between which a sharp distinction must be made. The voltage between the phase conductors, and the voltage from phase conductor to neutral (or ground where the neutral is at ground potential).

From the diagrammatic representation in Fig. 1, these voltages are denoted as the delta voltage and the Y voltage.

If, then, 1, 2 and 3 are the three-phase conductors of a three-phase circuit, 0 the neutral (regardless whether it actually exists as a conductor or not) the delta voltages 1-2, 2-3, 3-1 are variously called the voltage between lines, the voltage between conductors, line voltage or simply the three phase voltage of the voltage of the system; the Y voltage 0-1, 0-2, 0-3 are variously called the voltage to neutral, voltage to ground, neutral voltage, etc.

The delta voltage, thus, is the higher one, the Y voltage being a part only of the delta voltage in the same manner, as distinction is made between delta current and Y current in the three-phase system: the delta current is the current which flows, or is assumed to flow, from phase to phase; From 1 to 2, from 2 to 3, from 3 to 1. The Y current is frequently simply denoted as the current, current per phase, line current, as the current flowing in the phase conductors, in 1, or 2, or 3, and may be supposed to flow towards the neutral 0.

When speaking of the voltage and the current or line voltage and line current of a three-phase system, without further qualifications, the delta voltage and the Y current are understood.

In the conventional denotation, voltage and current in the three-phase system thus do not correspond to each other and as a consequence are not in phase with each other or non-inductive load, but show a phase displacement of 30 degrees; the angle 0-1-2 in Fig. 1.

This is in agreement with the generally accepted denotation and definition of the engineering literature; and thus any change from these conventions is not feasible any more, but would result in confusion.

Circuit Connections

In a three-phase system, the three circuits, a, b, c, of apparatus as generators, motors, transformers, may be connected in delta connections as diagrammatically indicated in Fig. 2, or in Y connection, as indicated in Fig. 3.

In delta connection, the voltage (that is, the delta voltage, line voltage or voltage between phases) is the voltage per circuit of the apparatus; the current (that is, the current per phase, or line current) is $\sqrt{3}$ times the current per circuit of the apparatus.

In Y connection, the voltage (that is, the delta voltage, line voltage, or voltage between phases) is $\sqrt{3}$ times the voltage per circuit of the apparatus; the current (that is, the current per phase, or line current) is the current per circuit of the apparatus.

Thus, with the same voltage per circuit of the apparatus, at the terminals of the apparatus, it is:

$$\text{Voltage in Y connection} = \sqrt{3} \times \text{voltage in delta connection}$$

(The $\sqrt{3}$ = numerically equal to 1.73)

$$\text{Current in delta connection} = \sqrt{3} \times \text{current in Y connection}$$

The voltage in delta connection thus is lower than the voltage in Y connection, since in the former case the voltage is that of one circuit of the apparatus, in the latter the resultant of two circuit voltages. In the same manner, the current in delta connection is larger than the current in Y connection.

The following table gives the most common denotations and their relations:

Voltage—Since voltage, three-phase voltage, terminal voltage, delta voltage, voltage between lines, voltage between phases, voltage between conductors, system voltage = 1.73 × Y voltage, phase voltage, voltage to neutral, neutral voltage, voltage to ground.

Current—line current, three-phase current, current in conductor, Y current = 1.73 × delta current, current between lines, current between conductors.

$$\text{Current in delta connection} = 1.73 \times \text{current in Y connection}$$

Voltage = delta voltage

Current = Y current

Thus: Voltage in Y connection = delta voltage in Y connection; current in delta connection = Y current in delta connection.

Rainbow Theatre Opened at Groveland, Fla.

The new house recently opened at Groveland, Fla., has been named "The Rainbow." Prior to the opening a contest was started with cash prizes offered to those who suggested the most appropriate names. The judges awarded the prizes to the three names selected and then put the final to a vote, with "The Rainbow" carrying off the honors.

The house is owned by L. R. Day and R. M. Young, former manager of the Sylvan at Wildwood, his assistant. This is the first real movie house this little city has had, and though small, with but 200 seats on the main floor and a balcony seating about 75, which is given over to negroes, the house is attractive and they feature their projection.

Idaho Falls Project Under Way by Joe George

It is announced in Salt Lake City that a beautiful new theatre is to be constructed at Idaho Falls, Idaho, which project involves an investment of $65,000, according to S. W. Winburn, architect there, who is preparing the plans.

The new theatre is being financed by Mr. and Mrs. Joe George, who have been in the theatre business in Idaho Falls for many years. George opened the city's first motion picture house twenty years ago and for the past fifteen years has owned and operated the American Theatre of that city.

The building, which will be fifty by one hundred and fifty feet in size, will be located on Broadway adjoining the Crow-Shangdon building. It will have a seating capacity of 950 persons and will be equipped with a stage large enough to accommodate small theatrical productions.

The interior design will be what is known as the atmosphere type, the walls being decorated to represent an Italian garden. The front of the building will be in Spanish style.

The ground floor of the building front will be divided into two shops and the theatre entrance. Construction of this new theatre will start within the very near future, as soon as the plans are completed, it is announced.

Details Announced on New Hershey Theatre

Details of the plans for the new $1,000,000 community building which M. S. Hershey, the "chocolate king," will erect in Hershey, Dauphin County, Pa., and which will include a large and a small theatre, were announced on June 26, coincident with the start of the work of removing the old Hershey Central theatre building which the new structure will replace.

The new building will be six or seven stories high, the exact size to be determined later, and will contain an auditorium capable of seating 2,000, for motion picture shows and other entertainments, and a smaller auditorium which will seat 600.

First Barney Google Completed

Ralph Cedar has completed direction of the first Barney Google Series being produced by Larry Darmour for F B O. Spark Plug came through the long, arduous trial of a first picture without a scratch, as did Rudy, the amiable ostrich. Sunshine, however, is nursing several bumps on his head the result of a number of scenes in which he was required to share the bed and board of Spark Plug.

Columbia's Marine Special

With an entire interior of an S-type submarine already constructed on a stage of the Columbia Studios, Irwin Willat is about to begin his direction of "Out of the Depths," starring Jack Holt. This is the submarine spectacle which Winifred Dunn has prepared for the screen. Preparations on this picture has necessitated more research work than any Columbia production thus far, it is said. Many unusual and hitherto unphotographed marine locations will be used as backgrounds for the Willat picture.

Curtiz Will See "Tenderloin"

Michael Curtiz, still working on Noah's Ark," will take time off to witness the opening in Hollywood of his production, "Tenderloin," which offering, by the way, though released at this late date, is the first talking screen feature ever made. It was produced last summer before the making of "The Jazz Singer," "Glorious Betsy," or "The Lion and the Mouse."

Fox Signs Howard

William K. Howard, who went back to Fox Films to make two productions, and is in the midst of the first of these, "The River Pirate," has been signed by Fox Films to a five-year contract.

Born in Texas

Without ever having a day's experience either in motion pictures or on the stage, Allene Ray, the beautiful blonde serial star, sprang over night, into a leading lady on the screen. Allene is one star whose advent into motion pictures was not premeditated. In fact, when Harry Myers approached the popular and talented San Antonio high school girl, she scoffed at the idea. That was in 1919 and it was only after protracted argument that Allene consented to play the lead in the two-reeler for which Mr. Myers sought her for his picture "The High Card." Since that time Miss Ray has starred in numerous serials and only recently completed a five-year contract with Pathe, during which time she appeared in fourteen chapter-plays, concluding with "The Yellow Cameo." The popularity of Allene Ray extends to all quarters of the globe.

Gainesville, Texas, proudly boasts of having been the birth place of Edwin Carewe, acclaimed director of many successful motion pictures. Carewe started his professional career with the Dearborn Stock Company in 1902 and spent five years with them in repertoire. For several seasons following he was with various stock companies before making his first appearance in New York and not until some time later did he make his first picture—in which he also acted with Walker Whiteside in "The Typhoon." Carewe's initial appearance of importance on the screen was in the well-remembered picture "The Inside of the White Slave Traffic," but today Edwin Carewe is acknowledged one of the foremost directors in the motion picture industry and will soon present "Revenge," in which the popular Dolores Del Rio, whose talents Carewe discovered, is starred.

Bebe Daniels, Paramount star, is a native of Dallas, Texas. Mary Brian was born in the same city, about five blocks from Bebe's home.

of the Big Selling Angles on

1st STARTLING BEHIND-THE-SCENES EXPOSÉ

For the first time, the lowdown on the touring tent-show racket. Blazing color of the Carnival . . . The lure of the midway's lights and banners . . . The loves and hates—passions raw and naked—that lie behind the painted smiles of the strangest lot of picturesque characters the screen has ever shown. . . . A smiling hula dancer, super-vamp out front . . . but backstage she's eating her heart out because she can't hold the one man she loves.

The Barker—smooth as marble and twice as hard—but soft as any mother about his boy. Murder, hate, jealousy, despair—to the tune of a cheap brass band.

And a desperate helter-skelter battle when the piercing cry "Hey, Rube!" turns the carnival into chaos in the flicker of an eye!

2nd ITS FAME AS A BROADWAY STAGE-HIT

"The Barker" was one of the big theatrical sensations of the season in New York. The critics acclaimed it. The public flocked to it. Famous reviewers called it "different," "vivid," "alive," "thrilling," "an abundant, overflowing evening in the theatre," "one of the high-lights of the present season." It ran for months on Broadway, and road companies have spread its fame throughout the country.

You can advertise it as one of Broadway's greatest comedy-melodrama successes.

3rd THE THREE-IN-ONE LOVE STORY

There's Carrie, luring the rubes with smiling lips and swinging hips on the "bally" platform—but behind the smile, heartsick with love for one man—her man—The Barker. . . . Blind jealous she is, as there comes between them a passion greater than any woman's love—the rare devotion of this savage, sin-scarred "spieler" for the son he hopes to make fine and clean and straight . . . ready to kill to hold this one pure affection in a lifetime of evil and deceit . . . No wonder he rages when the youngster falls for Lou, manhandled little sideshow charmer. . . . And when he learns that Carrie had paid Lou a century to lure the boy away from him, then drama moves across the screen with the relentless stride of Fate!

4th THE THREE-STAR CAST

The cast names alone would sell the public on "The Barker." THREE stars for the price of ONE!

When people see not one, but three, such favorites as Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackaill and Betty Compson in a single picture they know they'll get an entertainment bargain. . . . Each strong enough to star alone. . . . But First National has combined them to give "The Barker" super-value!

And Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Sylvia Ashton and George Cooper in featured roles.

And, the reputation of GEORGE FITZMAURICE, director of such famous hits as "The Dark Angel" and "Night of Love." . . .

Sound Movie and the Public

This is the Show Business and Must Remain So

By William A. Johnston

THIS editorial is aimed directly and only in a constructive way at the powers that be in the new sound movie development.

We are writing, we confess, in the dark, because so very little definite information is offered, or to be had from any source. The situation is foggy, to say the least, and perhaps, unavoidably so.

Even so, there are certain large facts which must, it seems to us, be looked squarely in the face.

One is the all important matter of sound movie projection.

This must be made uniform,—standardized so that entertainment from all sources may go over any theatre's machine.

The one large objective of all those interested in any phase of the sound movie develment is the sound movie's box office success.

If the new attraction does not keep up its present sensation, if the public for one reason or another loses interest, then no one will be benefited.

All other objectives, it would seem, are minor in importance to the one great end of advancing this new entertainment by every possible means.

An that means advancing it in the public estimation.

Suppose that the film business had got off to a start of non-standardized film and projection. There was this and that kind of machine, but each one would take only its own size of film. Does anyone suppose the industry would have kept its phenomenal hold on the public?

Let us also bear in mind the fact that the licensing of production and theatres does not work. For a time it did, but the greater force of producing what the people want put the license system out of business.

In the show business there is but one license that binds and lasts and that is the license of public good-will.

And there's but one thing that pays sure fire royalties and that is good entertainment.

With the sound movie, just as with the silent film, there is just one and the same ruling factor and that is entertainment the public will pay for.

The public, right now, is knocking at the industry's door. They want sound movies.

So the theatres are clamoring for machines —and many are not getting them. It will be harmful in a large way, if they are kept waiting too long, or employ makeshifts and misleading advertising.

Then they will want entertainment. And to be good entertainment it cannot come from too many sources. It will be harmful if restrictions are imposed for purposes other than those of providing the best entertainment available, whatever its source.

What, after all, started this rage, that now has the large motion picture industry by the ears?

Just one picture, gentlemen, "The Jazz Singer."

One box office success did the trick. That should be borne in mind.

And only more box office successes will keep the trick alive.

The one wise thing to do in the show business is to keep the public uppermost in mind.

When you put other ends uppermost, you'll find yourself down a blind alley.

"The Barker"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Rather rough-cut, occasionally sexy, but unusually colorful is "The Barker" starring Milton Sills, and directed by George Fitzmaurice. This picture tells the inside story of side-show carnival life. It is done with accuracy, great skill and strong emphasis on the dramatic elements. It portrays a father-and-son devotion and conflict, and may be rated as high in its appeal to the smarter types of audience, while others will probably not find it lacking.

Those who know the stage play, from which "The Barker" was adapted and they are perhaps a mere handful compared with the greater movie audience, will feel that the picture has done ample justice to the original. It is finer in some ways, even as a piece of dramaturgy, but best of all perhaps is the elimination of some of the crasser vulgarities of language, which did not seem to add very much to the footlight version, and made its attractions more marked for the special than the general audience.

At that, "The Barker" isn't infant's food. It has vigorous fundamental qualities. The plot hinges altogether on a revengeful intrigue, where a girl is induced to "get" a young chap so that his father will suffer chagrin and unhappiness because of this.

The father is the barker of the hootch dance of the sideshow. He has kept his son in ignorance of the easy life that he leads in this institution. The son is curious, and rides the rails to see him. Against his parent's opposition, the boy manages to remain with the carnival. He is taken under his sire's protection, thereby arousing the enmity of the father's sweetheart, who induces another girl of loose reputation to make the boy fall in love with her.

Curiously enough, this girl "falls" for the youth. The father is furious when he finds out about it, and threatens to have the girl dismissed from the show. Before he can do this, the two are married, and the barker, embittered, turns first on his sweetheart, whom he has learned engineered the whole enterprise, and then takes to drink, and leaves the show.

However, the irresistible fascination of carnival life gets the better of him. He can't bear to see his show mishandled by an inefficient and amateurish barker who has succeeded him. Half in a daze from liquor he mounts the stand and starts shouting to the people. The crowd collects, the show catches on, and he is himself again. Further contentment is added to his lot by the fact that he learns his son has fulfilled the dreams that he held for him by becoming a member of a legal firm. With a general reconciliation, the picture ends happily.

There are dozens of deft touches in the handling of the situations in this film that make it a genuine accomplishment—one proving the increased dramatic feeling of George Fitzmaurice already evidenced in "Lilac Time." Sills hasn't had such a "regular' role as the one he portrays in a long time, and he does it forcefully and excellently. There are bang-up performances, particularly by Betty Compson and young Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Dorothy Mackaill is the snake-charmer who also charms the boy. "The Barker" is a capital feat of production and direction.

Plans Prepared for Studio of New Canadian Firm

Sam Maclure, architect, Union Building, Victoria, B. C., has prepared plans for the studio buildings at Victoria for Pacific Pictures, Limited, of which Alfred Hustwick, formerly with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of Hollywood, is the promoter. Mr. Hustwick secured the site for the studio at a nominal figure from the City of Victoria.

The plans call for the erection of three buildings of stucco construction, the largest of which is 65 by 100 feet. The stage will have a width of 100 feet with the roof trusses 40 feet from the floor. There will be 25 dressing rooms. The projection and film cutting rooms will be of fireproof construction. Eric C. Clarkson, formerly with General Pictures, Inc., Hollywood, is associated with the undertaking.

Comerford Behind Milton Theatre, Is Indication

Indication that the Comerford chain, of Scranton, are interested in the establishment of the new theatre, which it previously had been reported the Pappas Brothers, of Milton, Pa., are planning to erect in the latter town, was contained in data filed in the state capitol at Harrisburg on June 19, when a charter was issued to the Milton Theatre Company, with headquarters in Scranton. The corporation is capitalized at $25,000, consisting of 250 shares of stock of par value of $100, of which $2,500 is paid in. M. E. Comerford, of the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, is treasurer of the new corporation which, the papers shows, proposes to "conduct the moving picture, vaudeville and theatrical business." The incorporators are Peter Pappas, who owns 12 shares of the stock; George Pappas, 12 shares; and R. M. McCracken, one share. All the incorporators reside in Milton.

Bengal Censors Examined 719 Films Last Year

The Bengal Board of Censors has just issued its report for the year ending March 31, 1928, and during that period it held fifteen meetings and examined 719 films representing 2,037,407 feet, according to a report from Consul General Robert Frazer, Jr., Calcutta, India, made public by the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C. These films were supplied by the following countries: American, 413 or 57.5 per cent; British, 187, or 26 per cent; French, 61, or 8.5 per cent; Indian, 36, or 5 per cent; German, 20, or 3 per cent; Other Countries, 2, or 3 per cent; Total, 719.

Of the above total the Board passed orders for for the issue of certificates for 634 films and refused certificates for only 7. In addition to the films prohibited excisions were made in 83 films before they were certified.

Town Will Vote for Third Time on Sunday Shows

Citizens of Champaign, Ill., within the next six weeks will vote upon the question of Sunday motion picture shows. A petition for an election now in circulation will be presented to the City Council for action.

Recently the Dads Association of the University of Illinois investigated campus conditions at the University of Illinois and recommended some sort of Sunday amusements for the boys and grls attending the University.

The question has been up for vote three times during the past several years and each time the reform element succeeded in defeating Sunday amusements.

New Lighting Method Is Used by Crosland

Alan Crosland, director, and Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production at the Columbia Studios, have worked out a new and unique lighting technique for "The Scarlet Woman."

This will be used with the special color-value costumes and sets that have been designed to secure more artistic and effective gradations of light and shade than are possible with the ordinary color values heretofore used in motion picture work.

Lya de Putti has been assigned to the star role in "The Scarlet Woman" from a script by Bess Meredyth. Don Alvarado and Warner Oland have been selected for the male leads.

Spanish Atmospheric Style Featured in Design of New Warner Theatre in Hollywood

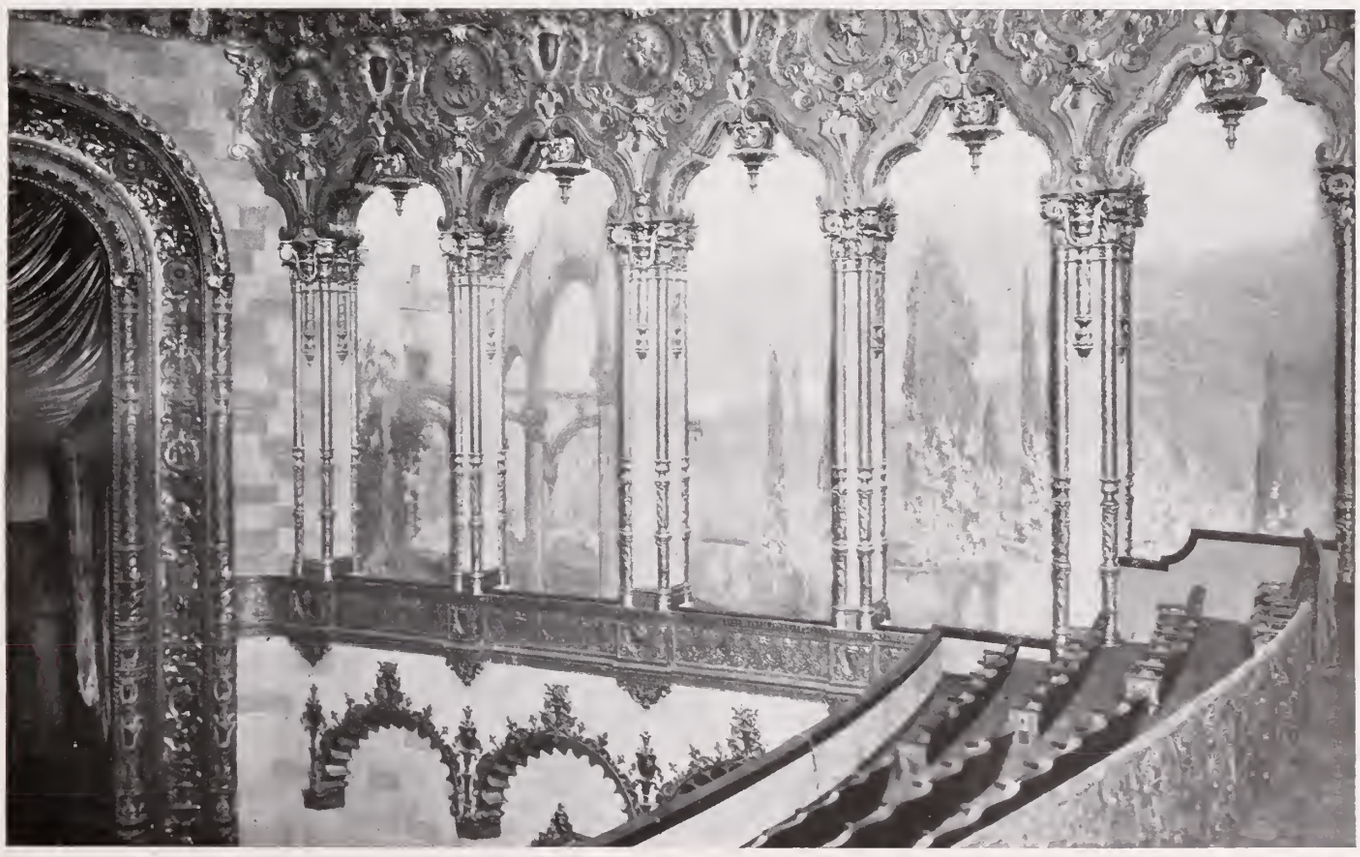
Has Seating Capacity of 3,000 and Includes Newest Conveniences

THE new Warner Brothers theatre in Hollywood, which was opened to the public on Thursday evening, April 26th, is the largest in that city, having a seating capacity of 3,000. The Spanish type of architecture is carried out in the exterior as well as the interior of this atmopseric style of house. The building is a four story structure which houses office rooms and stores as well as the theatre.

It is situated on Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox Avenue. The architecture is the work of G. Albert Lansburgh, the designer of several notable theatres in this country, among them the Martin Beck theatre in New York City. In designing the Warner Brothers theatre, Mr. Lansburgh has had the collaboration of Alber Herter, internationally known mural artist, who is responsible for the entire decorative scheme of the theatre.

The auditorium represents a Spanish garden with the open air effect suggested by the blue domed ceiling, studded with stars. The sidewalls are surmounted by an arcade of pillars with a distant landscape showing through the arches. The coloring used throughout is an intensified tone of flamingo harmonizing with a turqoise blue and gold. This is first seen in the grand promenade, which sweeps in a great curve around three sides of the theatre so that both ends are never visible at once. Numerous doors lead from the promenade into the auditorium and also give access to lounges, rest-rooms and elevators to the balcony floors.

An effect of great height and width is created by the design of this promenade.



Service features include a nursery room for infants, where toys and a trained nurse enable parents to solve the question of caring for their offspring while enjoying the show. A large main lounge room downstairs and smaller lounge rooms on the balcony floor and rest-rooms on each floor, with maids in charge of women's rooms.

To facilitate the seating of patrons an electrical board charting each seat has been installed, with light contacts showing the number and position of seats as they are vacated. In this way the head usher has absolute knowledge of the seating situation at all times, the light contacts working mechanically as each seat is raised or lowered.

The stage is large enough for staging pretentious spectacles. The entire floor is removable, thus providing sufficient depth for illusions and high-diving acts. The dressing rooms are below stage, and are elaborately furnished with tile showers and baths, and facilities for performers preparing their meals if preferring not to go out between shows.

Frank Murphy, chief engineer at the Warner Studio designed the electrical installations for the new theatre. There are more than 25,000 electric light contacts, yet the entire control centers in one switchboard on the stage, occupying only 17 feet of space and weighing 14,000 pounds. This control, moreover, is effected without a single electric wire being brought on the stage, as the operation is connected with a contact board and transformers below the stage.

Ventilation is so arranged that fresh air is provided and changed on the ground floor and balcony separately.

5 Ways to Kill Business by Making the Patron Uncomfortable

A List of Don'ts to Follow If You Want to Make Your Air Conditioning Plant a Business Builder Rather Than a Box Office Wrecker

by A. C. Buensod, M. E.

THERE is seemingly always plenty of advice to managers as to what to do to make the box office click and as novelty in amusement temporarily at least seems to get results it has the commanding attention of exhibitors.

At the present moment in your industry the novelty is all in the direction of sound pictures and unquestionably justifiable as it opens up avenues of tremendous possibilities.

There are, however, certain fundamental features of the theatre that are not subject to experimental ideas or the whims of managers—you have permanent fixtures.

You have a house with seats and a stage or at least a screen, and you cannot change them physically without alterations to the building. You have all kinds of mechanical equipment, and you will, of course, maintain the electrical projection, and plumbing equipment at the highest operating efficiency, but when it involves the mechanical atmospheric conditioning of your house there are numerous methods to be employed that keep patrons away.

Atmospheric conditioning means comfort and surely if you are giving good amusement and have good seats it is quite obvious that the only other thing you have to give is physical and mental comfort. To make the patron uncomfortable so that he will not come back observe carefully the following procedure:

FIRST—Do not operate your mechanical equipment at all, no matter how little or much you have, because you do not want ventilation or comfort. Just let it be stuffy and rank smelling.

You should operate the equipment on part time just to keep it from getting rusty or dirt covered. Or if you have a city code making it compulsory to operate, cheat the code and the inspector all you can. Make it comfortable for the first act then put the patron to sleep for the second act. Its being done all over with great success, ask any intelligent patron.

SECOND—If your home office instructs you to operate the equipment, run it as little as you can get away with and vary the conditions in the house as much as possible so the patron will never know whether its going to be hot or cold, stuffy or pleasant, surely that is novelty.

THIRD—If your house has a modern air conditioning system instruct your engineer to keep it as cold as possible so that you can show off your system of refrigeration. Advertise that you have 65 degrees inside and make it so uncomfortable to sit through a show that the patron will get "thrills" down the spine.

FOURTH—If your air conditioning system has a modern system of automatic control, assist your engineers in avoiding the expense of operating ½ hp. motor by agreeing that hand control is much better as the conditions in the house will vary first cold then hot—never keep it exactly comfortable. Run the plant from your office so that some usher can telephone the engineer to make it hot or to freeze 'em out.

Employ an engineer to operate the equipment then take away all responsibility from him by taking it yourself, as he might run the equipment and give comfort.

FIFTH—Shut your fresh air damper especially when you are refrigerating as it saves power, prevents ventilation and raises the humidity. High humidity means a clammy feeling in the house and the "clammier" the more the house will smell with that indefinable odor of people.

SIXTH—In effect learn as little as you can about modern equipment for comfort and go back to the store front nickelodeon days—that's the surest way to keep the patron away. Also have an efficiency man promote the ideas of saving expense at any cost but especially on ventilation or have a "Scotch Treasurer" who will gladly save a nickel to keep away an admission.

All the foregoing items are "sure fire" to keep patrons away and to prevent you from making new patrons.

As a resumé do not carry these conditions which make for comfort:

1. Fresh pure air for ventilation.
2. Proper temperature.
3. Proper relative humidity.
4. Freshness from odors.
5. Good circulation of air.

It is understood of course to be able to maintain the correct temperature and humidity throughout the year you must have a modern air conditioning system. If you have you can then control your temperature and your humidity by means of your dewpoint which is the temperature leaving the cooling chamber where you cool the air. It is simple to gauge when you operate the refrigerating machine as when the dewpoint goes above 50 per cent it is time to hold it down to that figure as otherwise the humidity in the house would be too high.

Including Analysis of Key City Attendance Averages

Very light new construction
Light new construction
Moderately heavy construction
Heavy new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from May 15th to June 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the three months' period from May 15th to June 15th. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the better theatres in these cities during the period covered. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

SOME radical changes are apparent in the building situation for our thirty day report ending June the 15th.

Firstly, this report records the greatest number of projects for a thirty day period of any which we have printed this year, and secondly, territories that ordinarily have reported little building come to the fore. Another point of interest is that the average cost per theatre is less though the average seating capacity rmains practically the same. This apparently indicates that houses are now being built on a more moderate scale of investment though with good seating capacities and in great numbers.

The figures for these thirty days are as follows:

A total investment of $13,394,000 will be put in 57 new theatres having a total seating capacity of 69,950. This is the heaviest investment reported for the last three months.

The averages for these thatres are $235,000 for 1,228 seats with a cost of $191.40 per seat.

The distribution of this building by territories is as follows:

The North Atlantic States rank first with an investment of $4,104,000 to build 17 theatres seating 23,900. Three of these projects will cost between $500,000 and a million dollars. These figures give averages per theatre of $241,412 with 1,406 seats and $171.70 cost per seat.

The second territory in amount of investment is the Western States. In this section 5 theatres will require an investment of $3,260,000 and will seat 4,500. One of htese projects will cost over a million dollars. The average cost per house for this territory is high—being $652,000 with an average cost per seat of $723.00. The average seating capacity of the 5 theatres to be built in this territory is only 1,100.

The theatre building program for the Middle Atlantic States calls for 12 houses to be constructed at a cost of $2,455,000, giving a total of 13,500 seats. The average cost per theatre in this district is $204,600, with 1,125 seats and an average cost per seat of $181.80.

THE Southern Western States have a program announced of $1,150,000 that will build 8 theatres seating 8,750. The average cost per theatre in this territory shows $143,750, with a seating capacity of 1,094 and an average cost per seat of $131.40.

The last territorial division where an investment of over a million dollars is reached is Canada. Here five new theatres, one of which will cost between $500,000 and a million, will seat 10,700 and will call for an investment of $1,150,000. The average cost per house in Canada is $230,000 with 2,140 seats and an average cost per seat of $107.40.

New England reports only one new theatre project, but this theatre project will cost $750,000 and have 2,300 seats, making the average seat cost $326.00.

The West Coast States announce 8 new theatres that will total in investment $500,000 and have a seating capacity of 5,900. The average cost per theatre in this territory is $62,500, with 737 seats per house. The cost per seat is $84.80.

South Eastern States are at a standstill as far as new theatre projects for this thirty day report. Here only one new theatre is reported which will have a seating capacity of 400 and cost $25,000.

It will be seen from the above figures that the North Atlantic States are continuing their exceptionally heavy program, which program was interrupted by a lull in theatre construction for the past few months.

The two outstanding changes in theatre building programs are in the schedule called for in the Western and South Western States. In these territories practically no new theatre projects have been announced for the last three or four months, though, in this report, these territories take rank as leaders.

The Middle States indicate a continuance of their steady building program with their 12 new projects.

It is also noticed that the theatre building in Canada is continually on the increase, this country showing the heaviest building in this report that has been recorded for some time.

The leading states in this building program are as follows: Arizona, with one project, costing $3,000,000 and seating 2,200; Pennsylvania, with seven projects, totaling $2,110,000 and seating 9,200; New York, with four projects, totaling $1,050,000 and seating 7,000; Illinois is fourth with two theatres that will together cost $900,000 and seat 3,200. Connecticut reports one house that will cost $750,000 and seat 2,300.

Another indication of the improvement in the theatre business is the optimistic reports which are to be had on theatre equipment sales. For the preceding three months the theatre equipment business had been depressed but during the thirty days recorded in this survey sales of all types of equipment have exceeded any month for this year and are ahead of the same thirty day period for 1927.

This gain in the sale of equipment can be partly explained from the introduction of several new or improved models of theatre equipment that have been introduced to the market recently. Also this heavy sale of equipment does not include the installations being made for the reproduction of sound pictures—installations which are accounting for a considerable expenditure on the part of exhibitors for additional equipment.

UP to and including the week of the Decoration Day holiday the Key City theatres of the country netted highly satisfactory box office returns, but thereafter, with hot spells occurring here and there to turn the public's attention toward beaches and other outdoor amusements, attendance averages were spotty during the period we are covering in this report—May 15 to June 15th.

The net result of adverse weather conditions is that seven of the key cities shown on the map wound up the period with Under Average figures. It was a case of abnormally bad conditions sweeping away highly satisfactory box office records scored by nearly all theatres during the first two weeks of the May 15 to June 15 period. Among the Under Average cities are Chicago, where picture theatres have been going along on rather slim box office rations for some time; Des Moines; Milwaukee; Indianapolis; Cincinnati; New Orleans, and Tampa. The low spots which brought the records of theatres in these cities down to an Under Average final mark in nearly every case were ascribed to hot weather depressions—plus, of course, that other sure-fire producer of poor business—weak feature attractions.

Twenty cities are rated at Average for the period, and one, Salt Lake City, where cool weather the latter part of May and good attractions playing the houses there during the balance of the period produced highly satisfactory results, is the one city to appear on the current map with an Above Average rating.

The reports of general business conditions, as interpreted by industrial leaders and bankers, are in the main optimistic for an improvement of affairs over recent times. Among the most bullish statements concerning the near future of business conditions in the country, was the address of Samuel M. Vauclain, President of Baldwin Locomotive, on June 28, to Government officials, railroad executives and financiers attending exercises which marked the removal of the Baldwin plant from Philadelphia to Baldwin, when he declared that American industries were headed out of temporary depression and into a new and more prosperous era than they ever have known.

Predictions that the second half of 1928 would see an increase in general business over the first half were contained in a statement issued by the National Bank of Commerce, on June 20.

Baseball, which is one of the picture theatre's greatest competitors in many of the key cities, has been having a good year of it if all leagues are doing as well as John Heydler, president of the National League, reports that organization to be doing. In the latter part of June, Heydler, in a statement issued to newspapers, declared that he "recalled no other spring in which the weather has been just as bad" but that "as it is we are apace with our best years."

THE outstanding accomplishments of picture offerings at the key city theatres for this period fell to the "sound films"—"Tenderloin," "Glorious Betsy," and "The Lion and the Mouse." The "talkies" performed practically all of the sensational stunts occurring during the period we cover—however there were some singularly good records scored by the non-talkers. The Strand, in New York, did the best week in months with "Tenderloin" as the inaugural feature of its policy to offer sound productions. The Lafayette, in Buffalo, did a record business with a two-weeks' engagement of the same picture. The Madison, in Detroit, ran "Tenderloin" for six weeks, while the State there, with an all "talkie" program, staged a real "comeback." The talkers also showed marked strength at the Victory, Tampa; Aldine, Philadelphia; Melba, Dallas; Blue Mouse, Seattle; Strand, Albany; Capitol, Cincinnati; Metropolitan, Baltimore; Rialto, Atlanta; and others.

Our "ten best" for the period we feel constrained to list only after repeating that the figures and ratings given here apply only to performances at the Key City theatres. This for the reason that we have noted in newspapers, which have quoted this list, a reference here and there to the effect that the list is "limited." That is quite accurate, because any report based solely upon the attendance records at key cities, must be limited, particularly as to the number of pictures considered in the rating list. These key city theatres are all week-run houses and they are first run houses as well. This means that many of them are playing the same pictures day and date. It also means that since the report covers only a month's period there are not a great number of releases current among the theatres. For the purpose of the record, we list the ten pictures which have to their credit the greatest number of Above Average weeks among the total number of features current during the period. In the order of their final average, based on the number of Above Average, Average and Under Average marks they have made at key city theatres, they are listed here. With that repetitive explanation, we proceed to give below, in the order named, the ten pictures which averaged best at key city thatres during the period from May 15th to June 15th.

They are: "Tenderloin," "Ramona," "The Street of Sin," "The Yellow Lily," "The Lion and the Mouse," "We Americans," "The Legion of the Condemned," "Glorious Betsy," "Across to Singapore," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Can Average Projectionist Become Proficient Sound Film Operator?

Art Smith Says Yes and Gives Some Pointers for Operators Who Are Preparing to Meet New Demands on Their Knowledge and Skill

THHe average efficient projectionist need feel no qualms about the future of his career in his present trade or craft because of the coming into general use of sound pictures, says Art Smith, Chief Projectionist at the Roxy theatre, New York, where both Vitaphone and Movietone films have been used off and on since the theatre opened in March, 1927, and regularly each week since the release of a Movietone newsreel by Fox.

Because Art Smith has held rank as one of the foremost projection experts for several years and because the projection booth over which he presides has been a laboratory in which at least one important refinement in the projection of Movietone pictures was developed, THE SHOWMAN sought his views as the best authority on a question which is known to be something of a source of worry to projectionists and theatre owners as well. The question, of course, is "Will the coming of sound pictures bring a radical change in the technique of projection and force back into schools of apprenticeship or eliminate many projectionists now holding jobs?"

The fear that installations for the projection of sound pictures will necessitate an elaborate mechanism, capable of being handled only by some specially trained and high-priced expert is one which many theatre owners have expressed at various times.

The equipment has a very imposing, and, to some, quite an awesome look, but the wires, tubes, panel boards, switches, batteries, photo electric cells, etc., have been developed to a stage of practical perfection and can be operated by a skilled projectionist after a relatively small amount of instruction and practice. Of course, major repairs in the system when required must be done by experts, but such occurrances are ordinarily as unusual as major break-downs in automobiles, lighting and power installations, or ordinary projectors, for that matter, now in general commercial use.

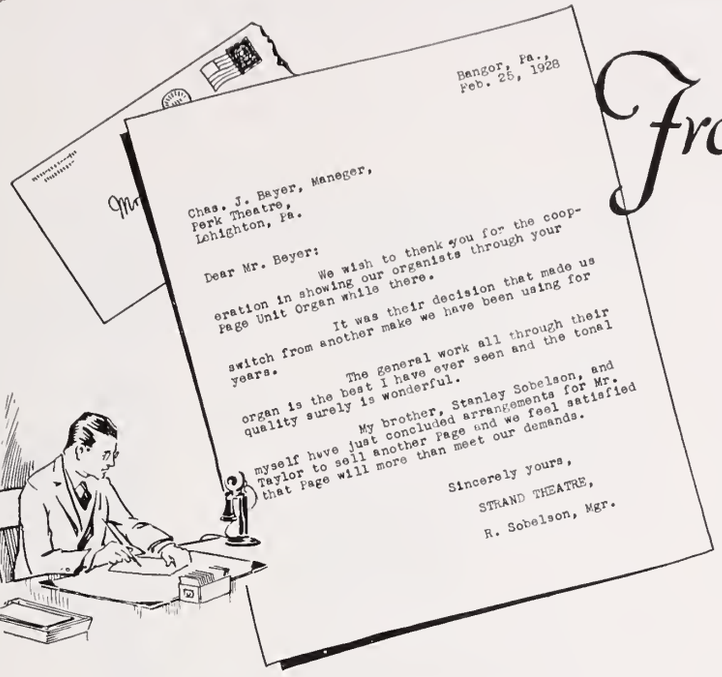
It is not the purpose of this article to treat the subject of synchronized sound recording and reproduction in a technical manner, designed to inform projectionists and theatre owners as to the principles involved and the method required to operate the machines. Its purpose is merely to present the views of an expert, under whose tutelage several men have been trained to handle the sound equipment, as to the ability of the average competent projectionist to become proficient as an operator in booths where sound installations have been provided for. His view is that "there is no reason why the average projectionist, who is willing to devote a little time and study to the fundamentals and the technique involved, cannot within a reasonably short time become proficient as an operator of a machine to project pictures and related sound."

"I think it a good idea for THE SHOWMAN to do what it can editorially to assure projectionists and theatre owners that this is so," continued Art Smith. "I have had both operators and owners come here to look over our installation, and have seen in the faces of many of them an almost panicky expression when they first observed the various articles of equipment employed in the systems for Vitaphone and Movietone. In all cases, however, the panic was over when they remained to see one of our men prepare and start up his machine.

THE operator has some fourteen switches to throw before starting his machine. A little practice enables the operator to throw in these switches in the proper sequence, and with the machine in proper working order, the rest is simply a matter of operating a volume control and projecting the film just as the ordinary soundless film is projected. Of course, in addition to his tests of the light and mechanism of the projector before starting his show, the operator must test his sound apparatus. This is a simple operation.

"In every installation there is placed in the booth a 'monitor horn,' which the operator switches in without connecting the reproducing system to the speakers in the auditorium. To test the Movietone, or any light-ray system of sound reproduction, the operator merely connects his monitor horn, turns on his light and with a strip of paper interrupts the light at the light gate by drawing the paper back and forth or up and down. This produces a sound which is emitted from the monitor horn. The presence of sound from this test shows that the system is in working order. The same test is made on a Vitaphone machine by drawing the finger across the needle in the pick-up device which runs on the disc record.

"Since these systems merely apply the principles of radio, the operator follows the same procedure in seeking trouble that he would in locating difficulties in a radio receiving set. The projectionist who wants to prepare himself for the day when he will be called upon to operate a sound film machine should begin by studying the principles of radio if he is not already well acquainted with them. This seems about the best advice I can give to projectionists anxious to take time by the forelock and equip themselves with all the possible preliminary knowledge obtainable before they actually go to work on sound film projection machines."



THOUGH the Roxy has been presenting sound pictures for nearly a year and a half, there never has been a breakdown causing an interruption in the show. Smith says they have had minor troubles now and then, but these never were serious enough to be noticeable to the audience or cause a break in the programs. This fact should be reassuring to theatre owners and projectionists as well.

The presentation of Movietone newsreel subjects at the Roxy is done in a very smooth manner. The sound subjects are interpolated with straight or "soundless" news views. The changeover is never perceptible, though it necessitates changes from one machine to another with perfect timing. The desire to accomplish this effect—Roxy's idea, of course, since he is a stickler for a smooth and flowing program—necessitated a little invention by Art Smith, and which presumably will be extensively used by projectionists everywhere so long as Movietone reels are made in the present manner of using regulation depth to the frame while sacrificing space on one side of the picture for the sound track. The invention is a mask, of steel, in which the space of the sound track at the side is equally "cropped" from top and bottom of the frame. Thus with the use of the mask and a shorter focus lens, the machines at the Roxy project Movietone films on the same screen as the ordinary pictures. Without the mask a blank white space of sixteen inches would be shown on the Roxy screen. This mask fits into a slot cut into the film gate, the size of the slot, of course, being precisely that of the outside dimensions of the mask. The mask has two frames cut into it, the regular size for ordinary film, and the smaller size for Movietone. When Vitaphone or straight pictures are projected, the mask is removed and reinserted with the regular sized frame fitted into place.

It might be noted here, that the RCA sound process, the Photophone, compensates on the film for the space sacrificed to the sound track at the side. This, of

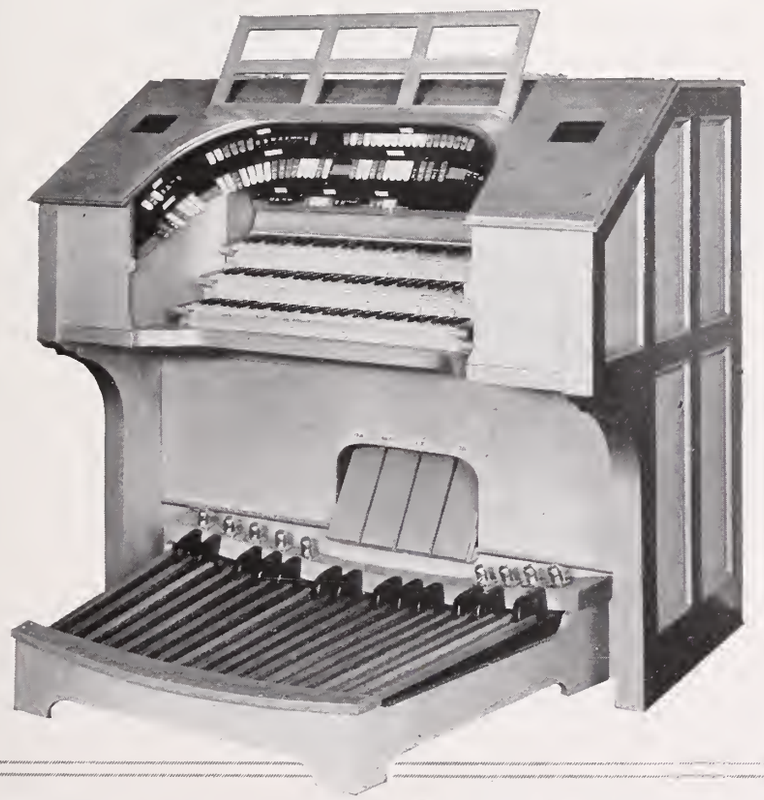
THE matter of choosing an organ for a theatre is of prime importance. It is something that should not be done in haste, to be repented at leisure.

In their deliberations before a choice, an ever-growing number of exhibitors are turning to Page architects—are turning to the Page Unit Organ.

This is only natural, seeing that the performance of the Page is so truly remarkable, that theatre owners speak of it with pride.



And from one exhibitor to another there often goes out the word. as in the case of the letter reproduced here:

"The general work all through their organ is the best I have ever seen and the tonal quality surely is wonderful . . . We feel satisfied that Page will more than meet our demands."

You want to be satisfied. too. We invite you to investigate Page ability to serve you more than acceptably.

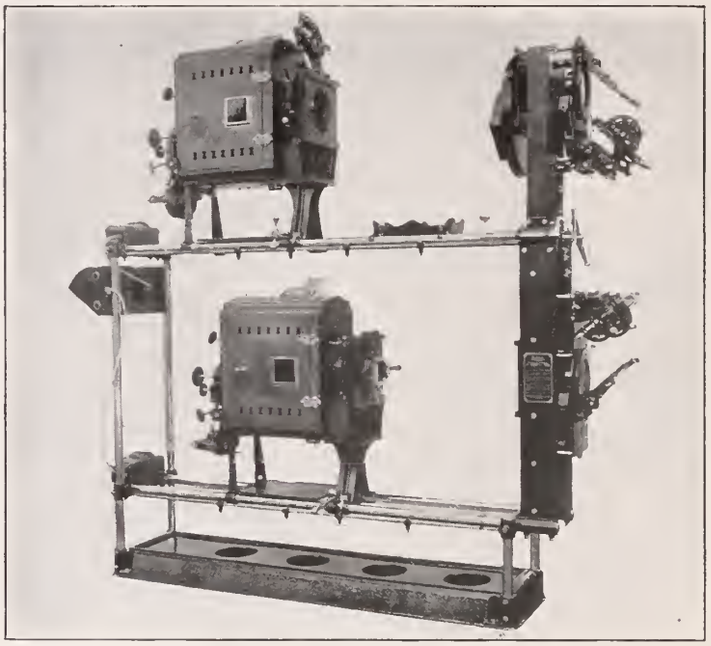
New and Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Presetting a Feature of New Brenkert Effect Projector

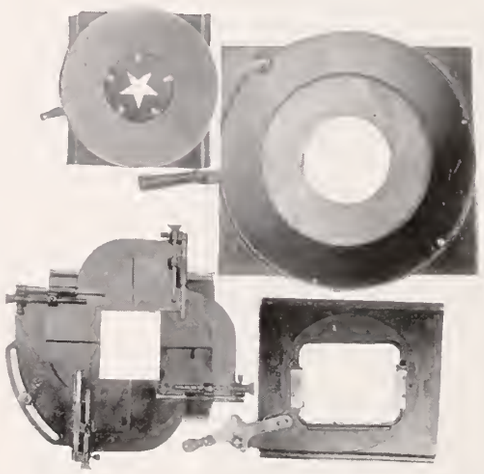
THE Brenkert Light Projection Company, Detroit, Michigan, have added to an already extensive line of projection room equipment an outstanding piece of apparatus in the form of a universal effect projector. This device, which will be known as the Model F-7 Master Brenograph, was exhibited for the first time at the 29th convention of the I. A. T. S. E. recently held in Detroit.

The machine, after being placed in the projection room, is never moved. In spite of the fact that the machine remains absolutely stationary, any object, or surface, at the front of the theatre which can be seen from the port opening, can be instantly covered by either of the projecting systems.



This flexible control is obtained by means of flat directional mirrors, a set of three being placed in front of the projection lens in each system. One mirror in each set is fixed in position before the projection lens and is used only to divert the light beam onto one or the other of the remaining two mirrors. Two mirrors in each set are mounted side by side on a sliding cross rod which permits either to be placed in the path of the light beam. Both of them are adjustable vertically and horizontally so that the beam received upon the surface of each can be reflected to any part of the house merely by turning two small knobs.

Immediately behind the directional mirrors are four projection lenses, graded in focal length from 10 inches to 40 inches which gives the projectionist a wide range over which to work. These lenses are mounted in a swivel assembly to facilitate rapid selection for meeting the conditions at hand.



In front of the respective lens assemblies is an iris shutter controlled by a change-over handle for showing dissolving lantern slides. An effect holder in each system completes the equipment at the front end of the machine.

For focussing purposes, the lamphouse in each system, together with its related parts, is moved back and forth by means of a rack and pinion arrangement. Present focussing indicators are supported along the path of each lamphouse, one for each projection lens, so that focussing can be accomplished without actually observing the screen.

The various framing and iris shutters are constructed as separate devices which can be locked for any desired adjustment and then removed from the machine to be laid aside until used. Thus, the iris shutter is a separate device which can be adjusted for size, locked in position and then removed until the time comes when it will be used. So also with the single unit framing shutter, removable photographic plate-holder for the use of 4 x 5 shutter, screen masks, and glass effect plates measuring 6 x 8 inches for color effects.

Instrated on the right is the Model F-7 Brenograph, a universal effect projector for pre-set adjustments. Below are the separate framing and iris shutters. Upper left is adjustable star shutter. Upper right pre-set iris adjustable to size while in projector and then locked. Lower left, is pre-set framing shutter, with each blade adjustable, which may be swiveled to correct distortion. Lower right, photographic plate holder for effect designs over entire stage

A hinged slide carrier is mounted on the holder assembly so that it can be swung out of the way when slides are not being projected. All plate and effect holders are provided with swivel adjustments to correct distortion when the beam is projected to one side of the machine.

The entire idea of this projector centers around the point of presetting all effects in advance of their showing. All adjustments are performed in advance, so that it is not necessary to disturb any adjustment when changing from slides to effects or from one effect to another.

Both projecting systems are independent of each other, which makes it possible to show a small picture with one system while the other is projecting a large one. The two independent light beams can be directed to different parts of the theatre, so that it is possible to "spot" the organist at the same time that an effect is being thrown upon the screen; or, two effects can be projected to opposite sides of the theatre. The angles over which the beams may be thrown are as follows: 16 degrees above horizontal, 40 degrees below horizontal, and 26 degrees to the left or right of the machine.

While the Master Brenograph has the same over-all dimensions as the old Model F-3 machine, it requires less space in the projection room because no space is required, as with the old model, for side swiveling and tilting to make the beams cover the stage.

New Stage Lighting System Replaces Flood With Spots

A NEW method of stage lighting, which supplants floodlighting with spotlights equipped with remote control of color as well as intensity of light, has been developed by Mr. H. H. Stoll, for some time engaged in special work for Keith-Albee and recently appointed head of the Maintenance Department of K-A-O, in association with Kliegl Bros., designers and manufacturers of stage and lighting apparatus.

The "Kliegl-Stoll" system, demonstrated recently on the stage of the Palace Theatre in New York, adopts to stage lighting the remote control spotlights developed by Kliegl Bros. primarily for decorative lighting in auditoriums and lobbies.

The system has been adopted officially as a future type of lighting for the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuits.

In the present type of stage lighting used in border and foot lights throughout the world, each border and foot light is wired for three or four circuits of a given wattage, with each lamp restricted to one color (either by means of a color lamp or a color filter mounted in front of it) and equipped only to "flood-light" the stage over a wide range.

The disadvantages inherent in this system are overcome in the "Kliegl-Stoll"

Exploiting Manufactured Weather*

Some Suggestions for the Showman— A Source of Far Greater Profits

Patrons and Prosperity

A source of far greater profits for the theater today, too frequently overlooked by otherwise progressive showmen, lies in providing greater comfort for patrons, and telling them about it.

And in these days of super-competition, no showman can afford to overlook one single item which may affect patronage.

"Every day a good day"

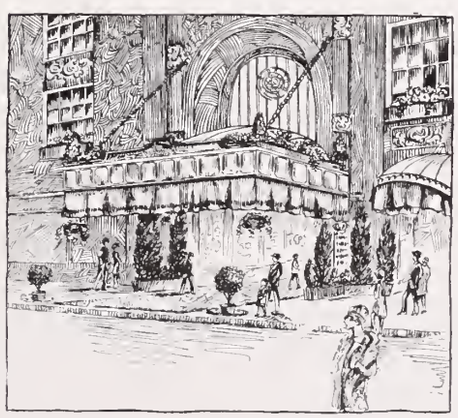
OWNERS of Carrier Conditioned Theaters should realize that they have complete and properly installed air conditioning systems, providing the means of maintaining ideally comfortable and healthful conditions every day in the year, regardless of season or outdoor weather. Furthermore, these owners have something to offer their patrons which cannot be approached by those theaters not Carrier Conditioned. They have, therefore, the very finest kind of opportunity for exploitation, if properly handled.

An Overlooked Field of Exploitation

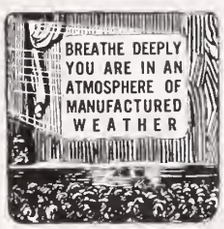
WE do not claim to be theatrical publicity experts, telling the old-time showman and publicity man how to advertise. We do, however, believe that with our years of experience in designing and installing air conditioning systems, and our observation of human reactions, we can suggest certain ways in which *Manufactured Weather may be exploited to advantage by the theater owner. We believe, also, that a great many owners who have invested in air conditioning systems are neglecting a field of exploitation which cannot fail to pay large dividends.



Out Front Ballyhoo

POLAR bears, painted icicles, snow-capped mountains — all have fallen into decided disrepute with those showmen whose earnest desire is to attract the discriminating. These devices were used by smart showmen, the while laughing up their sleeves, long before the advent of real and positive air conditioning, and usually meant little or nothing so far as temperature was concerned, and absolutely nothing so far as humidity was concerned. Small wonder that the polar bear and painted icicle idea of out front ballyhoo is looked upon today with such strong distrust!

Creating a Summery Atmosphere



AS a refreshing change we suggest, during the hot spells, when attendance needs to be stimulated as much as possible, that owners and managers of Carrier Conditioned Theaters turn to the creation of a cool, summery atmosphere outside their houses and in the lobbies. Even the most modest neighborhood house can be turned into a veritable fairyland by the judicious use of gay awnings, potted ferns, plants and trees, subdued green light effects, Japanese lanterns and a few green mats.

Tell Your Patrons About *Manufactured Weather

FEATURE *Manufactured Weather in connection with this display—for next to the obvious advantage of *having Manufactured Weather is telling your patrons about it, creating a consciousness of comfort by word and picture. Tell your public, with a real note of triumph in the telling, what a delightfully pleasant atmosphere they will find in your theater, how much more enjoyable the programs will be when viewed from amid perfect atmospheric conditions, and how much more their health is guarded when seated in an atmosphere of *Manufactured Weather. Tell people about your good air, loudly and often, and you will discover that you have an attention-getter that your competitors will find it next to impossible to equal, and a form of publicity which will bring most satisfactory results.

If your theater is not included in the ever-growing list of Carrier Conditioned Houses, we shall be pleased to have you ask for a visit from one of our engineers, who will present, without obligation, all of the essential facts underlying the successful application of air conditioning in the theater. Ask, too, for the Book, "Theater Cooling and Conditioning."

Effect, Focussing and Color Controls Located at Rear of New Kliegl Spot

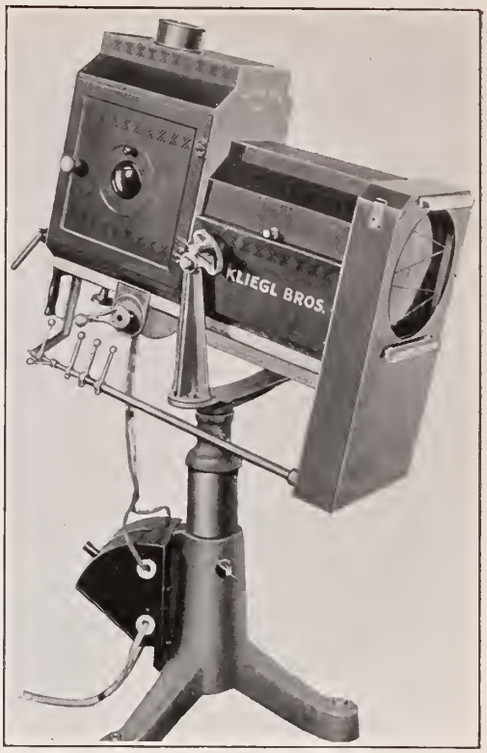
A NEW model spotlight, floodlight and effect projector, designed for higher lighting efficiency and a greater degree of flexibility of operation, has been announced by Kliegl Bros. This new machine is a 125 ampere, long-distance projector, embodying in a single unit facilities for spot and floodlighting, color-lighting, effects and framing shutters. It projects the light any distance up to 150 feet.

All controls, including arc, focusing, shutters, color screens, and directional controls, are centralized at the rear of the spotlight, in full view of the operator, and within arms' length of the operating position.

The arc lamp remains in a fixed position —all focusing is done by moving the lens, causing no disturbance in the adjustment of the arc.

Arc carbons may be adjusted angularly, vertically, and horizontally, and the lower carbon holder may be moved independently of the upper carbon, in any lateral direction. Six different controls are provided so that the arc can be quickly centered, irrespective of any condition that may arise.

One lens takes care of the full range from a 4 foot spot to a 50 foot flood. The movement of the lens, backward or forward, along the optical axis by means of the control handle, is all that is required. A pointer on the focusing control handle travels over a numbered dial on either side of the spotlight and in plain view

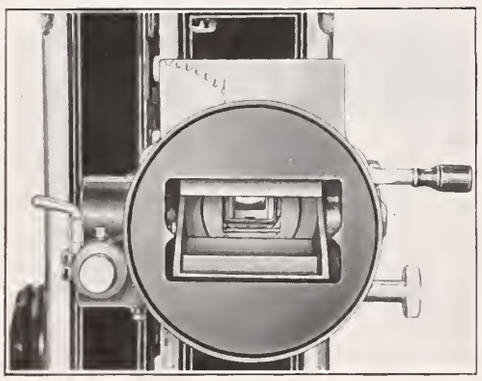


The lens carriage slides on two parallel rods, and is attached to a chain, which passes over two sprocket wheels—one at the front and the other at the rear. The shaft of the rear sprocket extends outside the housing and to it is attached the control handle. To the underside of the chain a counterweight is attached which also slides on two parallel rods, but always moves in a direction opposite to that of the lens and thereby maintains the center of gravity and keeps the spotlight in balance.

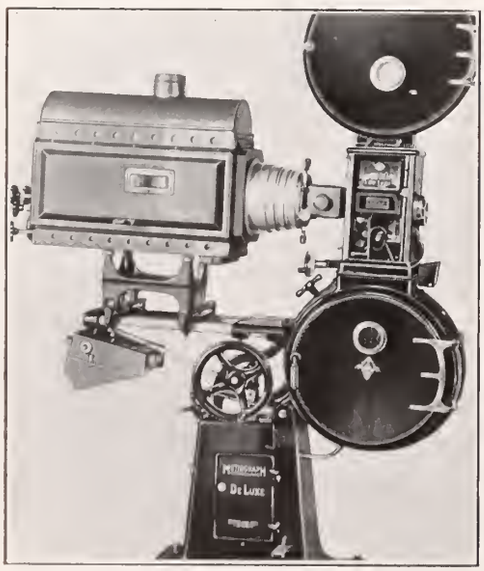
A color box or boomerang on the front of the spotlight provides means for changing the color of the light beam. It contains four color frames for gelatin mediums, controlled by levers at the rear of the spotlight. There is a separate lever for each color frame and each lever is keyed to correspond with the color it controls.

A curtain shutter and iris shutter set in the lamp housing, and independently controlled from the rear, permit light to be framed to flood the stage or orchestra pit, and to fade the light on or off at will. Guide marks on the back of the housing indicate the position of the shutters.

The weight of the spotlight rests on ball bearings and in effect all friction between heavy moving parts is eliminated.



Spotlight can be set to any desired angle within practical requirements and fixed in position by the turn of a hand screw. It swings through a vertical angle of 67°—



New Kliegl spotlight and effect projector

45° below the horizontal and 22° above, and turns completely around in the horizontal plane about its central axis. The base is telescopic and permits adjustments in height.

The customary slide grooves are provided on the front of the color box and permit the use of all standard effects.

Horizontal Type Shutter Developed for Motiograph De Luxe Projector

FOLLOWING reports current for some time that engineers of the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., makers of the Motiograph De Luxe projector have been perfecting a new model, officials of the company last week announced a new projector to be known as the New Model H Motiograph De Luxe Projector.

The outstanding feature of the new Motiograph projector is a new type of shutter, designed to eliminate the heat generated by the arc from the film and representing a distinct departure from the outside rotating disc shutters now in general use.

Other notable changes are the new type of light cone of cast aluminum construction and designed of a number of concentric rings which telescope one within another so that the cone may be collapsed for opening the film gate or adjusted for different positions of the lamphouse; a new rapid tilting device operating through gearing and ball bearings by means of a hand wheel, and mechanism gears of a new type of unit construction.

The shutter, of a horizontal or cylindrical type, is mounted on the film gate and operates between the film and the light source. It differs in construction from the rotating disc type of shutter in that it has two circular vanes and is rotated on a horizontal axis. By these two vanes, the light beam is cut off in a horizontal plane from top and bottom simultaneously. This being across the narrow dimension of the aperture, results in what may be termed a "quick cut-off."

So efficiently has this worked out to reduce the heat at the film that actual tests conducted in our laboratory show a reduction in temperature of the film heat at the aperture as follows:

	Heat at Aperture Model H	Old Type
Film Speed— 80 f.p.m. ..	565°	1486°
Film Speed— 90 f.p.m. ..	570°	Temperature
Film Speed—100 f.p.m. ..	564°	the same at
Film Speed—110 f.p.m. ..	555°	all speeds.
Average Temperature	564°

A long sought for and wanted improvement of convenience to the projectionist is the new design of lamphouse cone which completely encloses the light beam from the lamphouse to the new shutter assembly, allowing no stray rays of light to seep out into the projection room or cause eye trouble or annoyance to the projectionist.

Expert Guidance Required by Architects in Projection Room Design

In Planning Efficient Booth Nothing Succeeds Like Architecture Plus the Specifications of Projection Specialist

IT is seldom that the architect is called upon to give detailed specifications of projection room equipment in which the various types of light projectors and motion picture projectors are included. In a number of respects this is fortunate because the planning of the projection room and the selection of equipment which will be housed in this room represents a specialty within a specialty and calls for highly expert judgment if serious errors are to be avoided.

In those cases where the architect is entrusted with the work of designing the projection room and then specifying the equipment to be used in it he can relieve himself of much serious responsibility by enlisting the aid of outside parties, who because of their specialized training, are better able to take care of such details.

If this is done many of the errors which bespeak the inexperience of the one who designed the projection room and selected its equipment will be prevented. Such errors, even though relatively small, have a serious effect upon the operation of the theatre after it is once opened.

The modern motion picture theatre is an extremely specialized piece of work and its operation appears to the average person to be enshrouded with mystery and magical workings. The design of these theatres is entrusted ordinarily only to those architects who have specialized in this class of structure and who, by virtue of such experience, have learned how to combine a high degree of artistry with practicability. The capacities of even these architects are taxed to the utmost by the structural details of the theatre and outward appearance. For the more technical features which bear directly on the operation of the theatre reliance must be placed upon specialists in the employ of either the architect, the owners (where a large circuit is involved), or upon some outside consultant who, more frequently than not, is a manufacturer's representative.

Where the stage and its related equipment is concerned, experienced architects, for the most part, are quite capable of handling, within their own offices, the specifications and where detailed information on special apparatus is required the manufacturer is always ready to lend his assistance. Partly because of its relative newness, but principally due to its extremely specialized technical nature, the work of specifying projection room equipment is beyond the capabilities of the architect so that in this part of the theatre, at least, outside assistance is absolutely necessary.

This assistance is available in a number of directions if the architect will but avail himself of it. Practically all of the large theatre circuits have supervisors of projection, whose duty it is to plan for new installations aside from their regular duties which involve supervision of theatre projection rooms already in operation.

One large circuit, for example, which operates nationally; has gone so far as to form a standardization committee composed principally of district supervisors and it is the duty of this committee to adopt suitable standards which are applied to all theatres controlled by the circuit.

In such cases, the architect has nothing to do with the projection room except to take the recommendations and designs which are furnished to him and then incorporate them in the general design of the theatre.

EVEN in the case of individual theatres it is not at all uncommon for the owner to rely entirely upon one of his projectionists and charge him with the work of laying out the projection room and the selecting of the equipment. Here, too, the architect is relieved of the work.

This method—where a capable projectionist or supervisor of projection plans the installation—appears to be the most satisfactory one because the problems of the particular theatre are solved by men who are presumed to have expert knowledge of the work and who, later, will have to be responsible for its continued satisfactory operation.

Unfortunately, projectionist assistance is not always available to the architect for a number of reasons. It may be that the owner has no faith in any of his projectionists and feels that they are incapable of sound judgment. Or, like "the poet without honor in his own land" the owner may actually slight him, mistakenly thinking that he is incompetent.

Whatever the reason, the architect may well turn to the local supply dealer whose advice should be solicited even though the actual details of design and equipment are left in the hands of someone else.

Reliable supply dealers are well fitted for such service and it is customary for them to furnish complete specifications and technical advice bearing on all phases of projection and back stage work.

Under this arrangement, the architect is assured of a practical design and also that the theatre will be opened according to schedule and will then be kept open because the dealer is charged with responsibility of seeing to it that no failure of equipment will affect the theatre's operation.

Each dealer handles—or tries to handle—a distinctive line of equipment in order to place competition on something other than a purely price basis. It is the fond hope of every dealer to be able to offer quality equipment at a figure which compares favorably with more cheaply constructed or poorly designed apparatus. If he can do this he stands a good chance of equipping the theatre.

This will serve to prevent mistakes such as the one where an architect, at the dealer's suggestion, specified the use of half size projection lenses having a focal length of 4 inches, not knowing that the promised increase in screen illumination would be obtained through a great sacrifice in picture definition.

Incidents, such as this, are not frequent occurrences, yet when they do happen they serve only to create annoyance and lack of confidence in the person making the recommendation.

If such mistakes are not later corrected, they create more serious damage to the picture presentations and this, in turn, directly affects the success of the theatre.

The projection room and its equipment is of sufficient importance to warrant the architect's closest attention and he should make it a point to solicit reliable recommendations in order to avoid the mistakes which often remain incorrected, once they are made.

Exhibitor Raps Presentation in Ad for His Shows

There is no small competition between motion picture theatres in Kansas City which use stage presentations and those which offer their picture entertainment "straight."

Recently K. S. Duncan, owner of the Alamo, Roanoke and Broadmour theatres, suburban houses there, ran a newspaper advertisement in which he declared that good pictures do not need "presentation acts" to support them. The advertisement then proceeded to explain why it was possible for a theatre which did not have presentations to offer the public better pictures than those which spend large sums for stage effects and performers.

But in the meantime, both down town and suburban theatres which continue to offer stage presentations are attracting larger crowds than those which present "the whole show on the screen."

Perfect Illumination Control for the Modern Theater

Presentation's First Born, Song Slides, Now Bigger and Better than Ever

Favored as Feature to Show Off Theatre Organ and Soloists

AFTER several years of almost complete oblivion, that daddy of all picture theatre "presentation" features, the song slide, today finds itself in a position of such affluence that it is looked upon in the trade, and with good reason, as a "production."

The come-back of the song slide—and it is such a come-back as would insure immortality to any champion of the prize ring—has been due mainly to the fact that song slides are undoubtedly one of the best known devices for showing off the quality, resourcefulness and versatility of expensive theatre organs, as well as permitting the organist to display his talents and technique as a musician and a showman as well.

In the old days eight or ten slides in a set were all that were needed to create a wide appeal among the patrons of the movie shows—and, incidentally, figure effectively as a "plug" for some song. The slides of today are elaborate productions, specially written around ideas and cleverly illustrated. Their production today is in the hands of the music publishers, as it was in the beginning. But the music publishers, in order to get a hearing for their song through this medium, must make slides to serve a definite purpose for the theatre as a complement to the organ feature. Of course, a great deal of cleverness is brought into play in order to make the enterprise profitable for the song publisher by popularizing a melody. Popularizing a tune means sales of sheet music, and sales are the reason for the music publisher going to considerable expense to produce the modern type of quality slides for the picture theatres.

Probably the best evidence of the demand and appeal for present day slides is shown by the fact that a number of writers do nothing but write material for popular song slides, and other forms of organ demonstrations that have nothing to do with popular music. One example of this is a set of 57 slides called "The Soul of the Organ." This feature, if made up for a single organist, as it originally was, proved quite expensive. Given wide distribution with a great number of organists the cost is materially reduced. The price, however, runs about twenty-five dollars and organists throughout the conutry in no small number make the purchase, which is again evidence that slides and the organ complement one another. In this same field of slides are a long list of special community "sings" and material of similar type. All of which require expenditures on the part of the exhibitor or the organist. Again this justifies the song slide idea which come from popular music publishers today in high quality form and at no cost to the exhibitor or the organist.

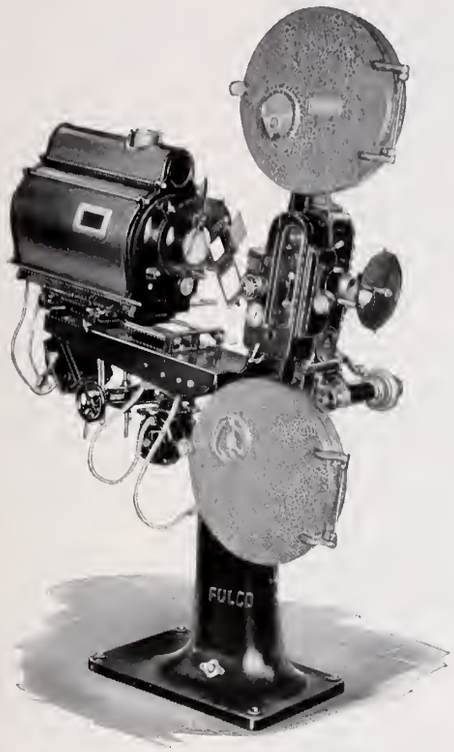
A synopsis of the story and the illustration accompanying the introduction of a popular song in modern slides is given as an example:

It is entitled "The Honeymoon Special" (introducing "Starlight and Tulips"). Opening with the tune "Auld Lang Syne" the words of a specially written and appropriate parody are thrown on the screen. The illustration shows a "travel guide" with a megaphone, who announces that "This boat leaving for points North, South, East and West. First stop Ireland. All a-b-o-a-r-d." Evidently arriving in Ireland, "The Honeymoon Special," takes tune of "A Little Bit of Heaven," takes his tours quickly over the hills and lakes of that country. The travelers move on to France, Naples, India, Hawaii and back to the United States, all of this appearing, with special lyrics, reminiscent melodies and appropriate illustrations. This set of slides has thirty-one in its set and it is not until the eighteenth slide upon the return of "The Honeymoon Special" to the United States that the melody and words of "Starlight and Tulips" are thrown on the screen. Thus it can be readily seen that the publishers have gone to no little trouble in order to entertain the customers for the privilege of finally putting over the words and melody of a popular song.

A MAJORITY of the featured theatre organists, and the theatre owners who employ them, have found that slides make possible a closer relationship between the audience and the organist than can be effected by any other demonstration method. They feature the organist, feature the equipment, and do this while affording the patrons a form of entertainment which is peculiarly adapted to blend with the presentations offered in motion picture theatres.

The publishers value slides, of course, because they make possible the familiarizing of a song, or at least the chorus of a song, in one programming. The slides cost money to produce and the total amount invested in this enterprise runs into considerable amounts, because it is necessary to have several hundred sets available for the show houses of the country. Naturally it is necessary for each set to be used a number of times to justify these expenditures.

Many sets of slides are issued with two song versions, one for the organist running them strictly as a feature, and the other version for those that run "community sing" features.



The greatly increased use of song slides indicates that all this exploitation is proving profitable from the standpoint of the theatre as well as the song publisher. A large majority of the leading organists use slides in some form. However, no ordinary slides or songs will be accepted by present day organists. The organist realizes that he is responsible for this part of the program. If it does not entertain, his is the fault—and a too frequent use of poor slides would injure his reputation as a successful organist and showman.

IT was said earlier in the article that small sets of slides were not acceptable to the organist. The exception to this can only be where the lyric and melody have an unusual or a unique appeal. An example of this is the new song, "Felix the Cat," which is also sent out in slide form. One of the most popular slide sets on "Felix" contains only ten slides, but due to the popularity of this character and the development of his capers in song form, the limited set is justified. This set often follows the Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., short subject on this character, so the short song version in slide form that can follow in the program is thoroughly appropriate.

The organist and the public are ever becoming more discriminating. For this reason what we think are elaborate type slides today may be obsolete in a season or two. Specially equipped writers are prone to make slides increasingly elaborate. Competition, too, among publishers evidently forces them to extend this division of their service. If one publisher gets out a new idea that proves entertaining, one may be sure that competitive publishers will either use the same idea slightly different in form, or go him one better.

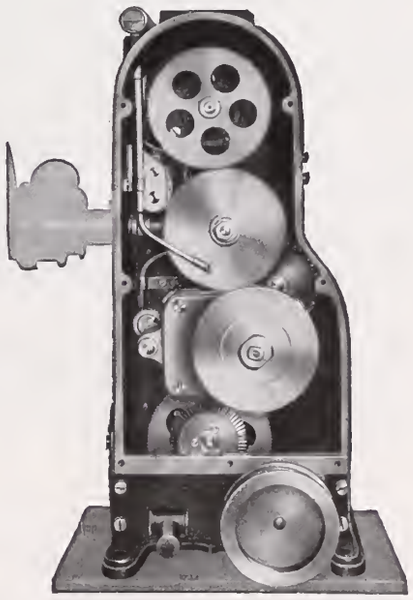
A point that should not be overloked by exhibitors when considering the value of slides is the fact that music retailers, both talking machine record and sheet music merchants, are always ready to cooperate. If the theatre is running a timely popular song that has possibilities of creating sales, music stores in the vicinity will be glad to display the title pages of the number and use a placard in the window announcing: "John Jones, the super-organist at the Little Theatre, is featuring this popular hit all week."

This makes a good local tie-up, it advertises the theatre, the organist and the equipment, and in a measure is publicity of real value.

THE NEW FULCO PROJECTOR

WAS BUILT

TO ENDURE A LIFETIME



DURABILITY is not entirely a matter of quality of Materials and Workmanship. Something more is needed to conserve a precision mechanism which is largely composed of moving parts.

Not only is wear minimized, but smooth, quiet running is assured through the unique, automatic lubricating system which is one of the most conspicuous and valuable features of the FULCO PROJECTOR.

A compact rotary pump embodied within the mechanism case, maintains a constant flow of oil which literally drenches all working parts with lubricant.

Note the sight tube at top of mechanism which shows you how oil flow is maintained every moment machine is in action.

This is only one of the many fine features of the FULCO PROJECTOR. Let us tell you more about it and about our TIME PAYMENT proposition.

Can the Average Projectionist Become a Proficient Sound Film Operator?

course, is done by a mask in the camera, which cuts off from the top and bottom of the frame a total space equal to that at the side.

Smith's invention is to be completely described and illustrated in Movietone literature which will be available to projectionists at theatres where this equipment is installed.

The trend in all improvements to these standard sound systems are mainly toward simplification. Many technicians believe that before long the storage A batteries will be replaced with equipment to use the light current for the purpose of lighting the tube filiments, and there are other changes expected which will make the operation of these systems even more simple than they are at present, and at present they are not by any means too intricate for complete understanding and mastery of their operation by the average intelligent projectionist.

Greater precision in adjustments and operating methods will be required of projectionists in the future, but exactitude in the upkeep and adjustment of his tools and precision in the use of them is elemental in the training and technic of the mechanic, so all first-rate projectionists will welcome the device that will spur them to greater precision, and the day when conditions will give them right to greater recognition as technicians. The very minute opening in the "light gate" of Movietone, Photophone and similar reproduction systems, requires great care. It must be kept scrupulously clean—at the Roxy they use a toothbrush and the highest grade of benzine obtainable for this purpose—otherwise there will be a lot of foreign and most disturbing sounds injected into the dialogue of talking scenes or the music of accompanying scores.

The patching of the "sound track" type of film, must be done with great care. The density caused by the overlapping of the film at the patch point, causes a sound which so far cannot be eliminated entirely. However, there is a method—all this is information that will be given the projectionist who is instructed by the operators who install systems—whereby this sound is greatly toned down. This is done by drawing a line from the inside edge of the sound track to the outside edge at an angle of about 45 degrees upward from the point of the patch above and downward below the patch. The space inside the lines—which form a pyramid tilted over on its side—is filled in with the same ink used to draw the lines. This mark has the effect of carrying the ray over the bump gradually as it were. So instead of a sharp metallic sound in the speaker there results a gradually increasing sound up to the peak and diminishing after—in other words is a crescendo and diminuendo which deceives the ear.

In the main it is simple tricks like these which will be added to the jobs of the projectionist when he operates sound film machines. An understanding of the principles involved, however, is necessary to efficient operation and here a larger order is cut out for the technician.

Cover removed, showing electro-magnets and mechanism that permits remote-control operation of the color frames.

ANNOUNCING A

GREAT IMPROVEMENT

A NEW SPOTLIGHT with electro-magnetic device for remote control of its color frames—permitting an endless variety of changing color effects—all controlled from a central point.

Never before has there been such a demand for color lighting—and never before has there been available a spotlight as flexible in its control, as boundless in its range of colors, as satisfactory in operation, as this new Kliegl Spotlight—that allows its entire service, including white lighting, color lighting, and dimming, all to be controlled from a distant point.

Kliegl Spotlight No. 72 with Electromagnetic Color-frame Control; for 1000-watt G40 or 2000-watt G48 Mazda lamp; with 6-inch lens, automatic color-frame control, four color frames, mirrored-glass reflector, and short pedestal stand.

Already in successful operation in several prominent newly-erected theatres (names on request), it promises to revolutionize present-day practice of color-lighting. One spotlight or a group of spotlights can be controlled with the utmost ease. Colors can be blended to produce most unusual effects. Fewer spotlights are needed—one group doing the same work that required several groups heretofore. More light can be obtained from any given number of spotlights. The spotlights can be located in the most inaccessible places—and yet be operated without the least difficulty from the switchboard or some other convenient location. They save time, trouble, and expense, give a greater and better service.

Write for an interesting folder, Bulletin No. 3, which illustrates and describes the many advantages, uses, and special features of this new Kliegl Spotlight.

Auto Company Develops New Film Speed Indicator

A NEW precision film speed indicator, designed for installation on all motion picture projection machines has been developed by the AC Spark Plug Company of Flint, Michigan, a subsidiary of General Motors Corporation.

A film speed calculator is furnished with the speed indicator and enables the operator to determine, regardless of the length of the film, the correct speed to maintain for any desired performance schedule. The instrument indicates film speed in feet per minute, so performances can be held exactly to schedule time. It also enables the operator to precisely time feature films and accompanying musical scores.

The AC Spark Plug Company long has been engaged in making precision instruments for the automotive industry.

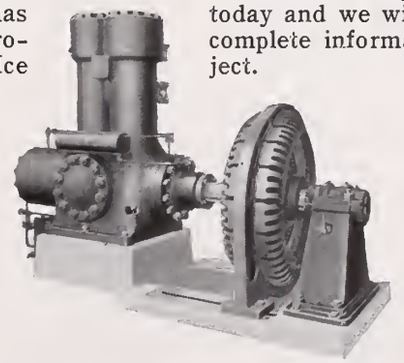
New tools for Simplex operators. Above, the tool for separating sprocket from shaft, and below the taper pin remover.

Tools Designed for Removing Taper Pins and Sprockets

RECENT additions to the line of Fulco specialties, of the E. E. Fulton Co., are two accessories of particular interest to operators and repairmen of Simplex projectors. These are small tools designed to facilitate the removal of taper pins from sprocket shafts and for separating the sprocket from the shaft, while affording protection against damage to the sprocket or shaft.

Both the taper pin remover and the sprocket remover are thumb screw devices especially designed to effectively accomplish their purpose speedily and without danger to the mechanism parts.

Cool, comfortable houses attract profitable summer patronage



The Texan Theatre, Houston, Texas, is cooled by YORK equipment.

Air-conditioning no longer is merely a desirable thing. It is absolutely essential—as much so as heating, ventilating and lighting. The public demands comfort and it goes where comfort is offered.

Right now, movie fans are looking for an escape from heat. If your theatre is cool, they are seeking refuge there. Your box-office receipts tell the story.

The most efficient, dependable air-cooling and air-conditioning system that has been developed is produced by the YORK Ice Machinery Corporation—the largest concern in the world that devotes its efforts exclusively to the production of commercial and industrial refrigerating machinery. YORK air-cooling equipment is made in various types and sizes to meet the requirements of large and small theatres.

Why not talk this matter over with a YORK engineer? You probably will be surprised when you find how economical a YORK installation really is. Write to us today and we will gladly give you complete information on the subject.

Rochester Manager Makes Week-Run Bills Produce Better Show Each Day

THE famous Coué slogan "Every day in every way I'm getting better and better" is made to come true at the Rochester theatre, Rochester, N. Y., under a system of constant check upon performance and as well audience reaction to acts and motion picture presentations offered under the theatre's weekly change policy.

Those patrons who attend performances at the Rochester toward the latter part of the week have no conception of the radical changes which sometimes have taken place since the act or the film presentation made its bow at the opening day of the run.

The plan, which has been in effect at the Rochester for some time, and which naturally is showing results, was introduced there by Manager Thomas D. Soriero, who reviews the Rochester programs every Monday afternoon.

With the assistance of his secretary, the cast are subjected to a very careful check up, which includes time, ability, how the act is dressed, the nature and condition of drops and drapes and the props used, the calibre of the patter and comedy in the offering and what effect it has on the audience. All the weak spots are noted and recorded for immediate "bolstering up."

Following the Monday matinee the stage manager, property man, electrician, orchestra leader, organist, picture operator and assistant manager are called into a general round table conference regarding the first show. Suggestions are submitted and criticisms recorded. The acts that need bolstering are requested to make immediate corrections. Sometimes it is to "cut" time and in some cases to "add" time.

When stage equipment is below par or drops or hangings are torn or the worse for wear, the theatre drops and cyclorama are pressed into service to help put the act over in better style for Rochester patrons.

Acts are many times "switched" from No. 2 spot on the bill to No. 4 and vice versa, and in some cases members of one act are injected into another. All of which results in an entirely different show being presented Monday evening than that offered at the matinee performance.

The many changes result in a smooth-running, fast moving program and acts which suffer lack of applause at the "opening show" often carry off the applause honors when bolstered up or placed on a different spot on the bill.

It is sometimes necessary to "pep" up the picture program by adding a one or two reel feature to maintain "running time." A specially selected library of short features is maintained for this emergency.

Organists are called on to play up each feature with effects, etc.

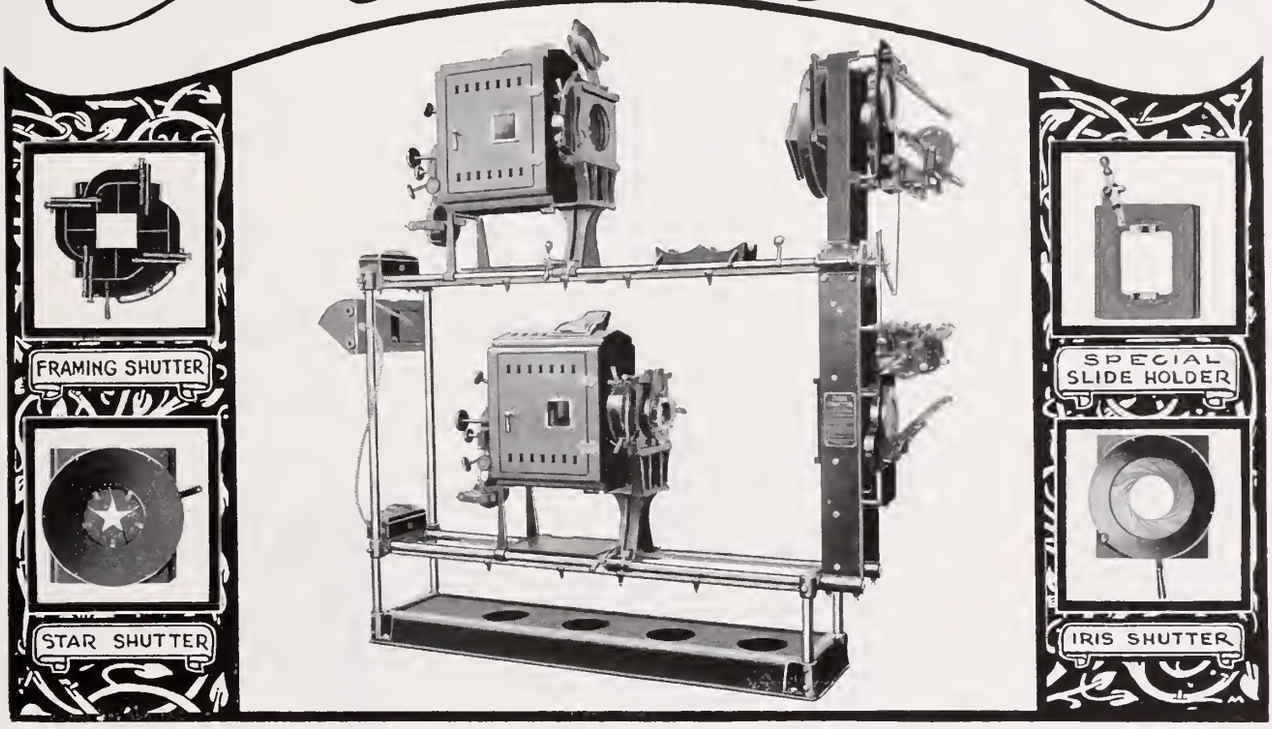
type of lighting, in which each lamp is placed in a spotlight hood with reflector and condensing lense, in front of which is operated a color change of as many four colors in each spot. The lamps are equipped for use as a spot or flood light.



The spotlights used are the same as the Kleigl Mazda-type spotlight described in detail in this department of The Showman for June, except that they are mounted to operate in the vertical instead of the horizontal position.

A comparison of the present general method with the new "Kliegl-Stoll" system of stage lighting as set forth in the following shows some of the advantages gained through the use of the remote-control spotlight in place of the floodlight.

As compared with the present system using a 40 ft. x 14 in. border light with 500 watt lamps on 14 in. centers, there are, in 3 color systems, 11 units each; and in 4 colors, 8 units of each color in the border; as compared to 20 units with 10 color combinations accommodated in the same space. with the new system. The total wattage requirements of the former would be 16,500 watts, as against 10,000 watts for the new type. The dimmer requirements for the old system, in the size of border specified, would be 5—3000, 1—1500, as compared with 3—3000, 1—1000, for the new. Only 3 color combinations are possible with the old system, as against 10 combinations obtainable with the new. 33—500 watt lamps are required for the old, and 20—500 watt lamps for the new. The increased illumination amounts to 250 per cent more light of any given color using the same wattage lamp for the new over the present system.

In addition to these points the new style of lighting with remote control spots effects a saving on dimmers, stage space and switchboard construction costs. Greater flexibility is obtained in the control of the light since each lamp is so mounted that a beam of light can be directed to any part of the stage.

New Type Shutter Feature of Motiograph Projector

A built-in observation glass in the top of the new type shutter housing allows full observation of the light spot at the cooling plate as well as afforded opportunity to observe the operation of the shutter itself.

An innovation in the dowser construction is that this is no longer assembled on the lamphouse or cone but is built in as a part of the new shutter housing. It operates on a new principle and is more accessible than the old type dowser assembled on the lamphouse cone. Two operating handles are provided so that the dowser may be conveniently operated from either side of the projector.

In the mechanism itself many improvements have been made. By a new method of manufacture, a number of the gears which were formerly made of two piece construction are now made in single or unit construction. This type construction adds greater strength to the gear and affords more free-running mechanisms.

The new type Rapid Tilting Device which is a recent development to permit rapid tilting of the projector and which is provided with limit stops for predetermining the angle at either the up or down position is included in the New Model H.

EVENHEETERS are not exclusively for wintertime alone, dampness of summer rains and dewy, foggy summer nights make them a necessity in summer time too. For dampness plays havoc with the delicate organ parts much as coldness does.

MR. ARCHITECT, as a protective measure Evenheeters should be specified in every organ chamber you plan. The Neck of the Bottle

Consider for a moment the bottle, gentlemen. It may contain soothing syrup for the baby—or his old man; drugs that may save a life; the concentrated essence of nectar—or what have you. But so long as they are bottled, are they of use to anyone? Not any. The neck of the bottle must do its stuff before anyone can benefit by the contents.

Moving pictures are bottled goods in a way. The artist, scenarios, directors, cameras, studios—the whole producing industry—is bottled up in a roll of film which doesn't mean a thing to the dollar spenders. All of this work and equipment and artistry must trickle out through the projection lens to be made available to the ultimate consumer.

The projection lens is the neck of the motion picture bottle. How well the pictures come through the lens, determines largely how well the dollars come through the box office.

The lens is a poor place to economize. It is a small item and will pour a lot of pictures in a life time. It would seem to be the best part of wisdom to get the BEST POSSIBLE LENS.

The Mirrors of Filmdom

"Lights of New York"

THIS is the first all-talking picture, the trail-blazer along the road of dialogue films. As such it cannot fail to be a box-office success. The novelty alone would put it over in theatres which are sound-equipped. Fortunate is the exhibitor who is ready for it.

The Warners have again demonstrated their right to the title of sound picture pioneers.

Everybody knows that the box-office is in need of, and demands, novelty as a tonic. Well, here it is—novelty plus.

* * * *

SO much for the box-office angle. We put it first, because it is first in importance to the exhibitor.

There is, however, another side to the story. The remarks which follow are not directed to the exhibitor, but in an effort to be constructive, to those who are making and will make dialogue films of whaever nature and description.

Some of the New York critics complain because the talk in this picture doesn't measure up to their idea of diction. In other words, that it doesn't compare favorably with reading of lines on the legitimate stage.

This does not strike us as a fair comparison. The stage is hundreds of years old; the talking screen only a matter of months. The complete technique is still to be worked out, but, of course, it will be. "Lights of New York" is of, for and by dialogue. Therefore, almost all of the typical movement and action that belong to the motion picture, and which the stage cannot reach, is lost.

The narrowing of screen action as we pointed out recently, is the first fruit of the talkie. This does not hurt the novelty now—but it would be best not to linger too long in a compressed area. Or else, to put into dialogue only those pictures in which the talk itself carries the action, naturally, and without need of a big pictorial canvas or scenic backgrounds.

"Lights of New York" shows that progress is being made with the talkie. There are touches in this film, such as the modulation of sound in close-up as contrasted with long-shot or medium-shot that excite the same interest aroused by the first production improvements in the silent movie. Remember how the close-up and the cut-back were hailed, when Griffith first used them?

So it is, and will be, with talking pictures. "Lights of New York," made as a novelty, will score as a novelty. Its crudeness, where it exists, is simply the crudeness of pioneer work.

E. V. RICHARDS sends us details of an interesting Saenger activity which shows the progressiveness of this theatre organization. The first of the year Mr. Richards organized the "Saenger Thrift Club" among the employees of the company's general offices and the New Orleans houses.

The first dividend of 5.34 per cent has been declared, and the report shows 105 savings accounts totaling $5,921.40, with profits made from operation as $448.53.

There were 157 loans totaling $10,385, and 87 petty cash loans totaling $586. Besides this, the Club purchased $6,000 worth of bonds, par value, and $400 worth of Saenger Theatre, Inc., preferred stock. There was a total saved of $7,373, of which $5,921.40 was allowed to remain on deposit.

* * * *

THE report continues: "We feel that we have fully accomplished the three-fold object of the Thrift Club. It has given the members a practical method of saving, to which the above balances testify how the members have availed themselves of it. It has afforded no small amount of instruction, if the hundreds of questions indicate anything. We are always glad to explain the operation of the Club, the investment in securities, and any kindred subject, to the best of our knowledge, or get more professional information on any question we cannot fully explain. And finally, we have accorded credit accommodation to the members from every department and theatre, and from the smallest salaried to the highest to cover their needs. This has been given without undue delay or embarrassment. We have financed three funerals, two births, several major illnesses, bought over a dozen members out of the hands of the loan sharks, bought scads of new clothes, besides tiding the members over many a tight place."

REPORTS in English trade papers quoting John Maxwell, head of British International, as saying that he had arranged while in America recently for interchanging players with four big American concerns, have now been denied by Mr. Maxwell himself. A report also said that Mr. Maxwell was negotiating distribution deals with the four American concerns.

"British International have made no effort to secure alliances of the kind referred to," Mr. Maxwell said in his denial. "We have made no foreign alliance. Whilst we welcome foreign assistance, if it comes and when it comes, we do not court it."

Interchangeability Issue Again

Question Uppermost in Exhibitors' Mind Regarding Sound Devices Appears Further From Solution Than Ever

THE question of interchangeability of film in sound reproducing devices is uppermost in the minds of most exhibitors, but it seems to get further and further from solution. Up to the present RCA has insisted that the sound reproducing machines were standardized insofar as Photophone and Movietone were concerned and that there could not be any trouble for the exhibitor who interchanged film. Western Electric, sponsoring Movietone, has maintained that they did not know there was other equipment in the field than their own and therefore were not in a position to say anything regarding standardized equipment or interchangeability of film.

The showing of "The King of Kings" at the Rivoli theatre in New York quite evidently has opened up a new angle. This synchronization of "The King of Kings" was done by the Photophone process. It is reproduced at the Rivoli through Movietone equipment. The result is satisfactory. To one who has heard it on either device no fault could be found with the amplification. The synchronization is good. It proves conclusively that film is interchangeable in the two machines.

But there was some confusion before the opening of "The King of Kings." Just what that confusion was seems still to be somewhat a mystery. It is said, however, that Western Electric objected to additional equipment being used on its sound reproducing device. It is necessary to install a separate small aperture plate to the Movietone machine, it seems, to properly project Photophone sound. The adjustment of this plate, according to Photophone is no trick for any operator, and requires not more than a few seconds of time.

Questioned again as to the interchangeability of film in the two machines, following the showing of "The King of Kings," an official of the Western Electrical Company said that he had no statement to make in regard to the matter. Questioned again as to the legality of adding equipment to the Western Electric sound reproducing device to project film of another company, he said he did not care to discuss that subject, nor did he care to disclose the terms of the agreement on that question existing between his company and the exhibitor.

Similar questioning at the headquarters of RCA Photophone brought similar results, or lack of them. Photophone still insists that film is interchangeable. Asked as to the legality of placing additional equipment on the Movietone device for the reproduction of Photophone sound, the latter company declares that extensive changes would probably not be objected to; if, however, there was objection, there were new methods being devised that would prove entirely satisfactory in the interchangeability of film.

An official of the Photophone company was asked regarding the theatrical halting of "The King of Kings," showing at the Rivoli, and he scoffed at the idea that any serious trouble had threatened.

"Why, that didn't amount to anything," he said. "When we explained to them that the addition of the aperture plate was the only change necessary they readily agreed to go on with the showing."

At the same time, Electrical Research Products, manufacturers of the Western Electric system, in allowing the necessary adjustments, declared they were permitted at the request of the officers of the Radio Corporation, and that this by no means was to be taken as a precedent as to the future

Steffes Threatens to Block Arbitration

IF the Minneapolis Joint Board of Arbitration endeavors to enforce the decisions reached at its last meeting and these decisions involve members of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association who do not want their cases arbitrated, an injunction against the arbitration board is threatened by W. A. Steffes, head of the Northwest theatre owners.

Defending his members who do not wish arbitration, Mr. Steffes said: "If the exhibitor were present at the meeting and allowed his case to be arbitrated we are powerless. The association will not, under any circumstances, seek to have any decisions set aside which were made against nonmembers. As I have said before, dues-paying members are the only persons deserving protection by the association and my time, which is being paid for by the association, will be devoted to the interests of members only."

Gov't Aid in European Tangle

Majority at Geneva Against Legislation Affecting International Trade; France May Revert to Drastic Regulations

THE United States Government, through Hugh R. Wilson, American Minister at Berne, Switzerland, and a representative of the State Department at the League of Nations conference for Abolition of Import and Export Prohibitions, will attempt to bring about a settlement of the French quota situation by arbitration, according to a recent report. If this plan is carried through, it will be the first endeavor of the American Government, in an official manner, to render aid to the industry in Europe.

A later report in the New York Times states that France may again go back to its original drastic regulations in regard to American product. This is in face of a statement made at the Geneva conference by M. Serruys, French representative.

The present Geneva meetings follow a series of conferences first started in May, 1927, and taken up in November of the same year when further advance of the idea was accomplished. Since the November conference the matter has made its headway in committee. An international agreement which will do away with quotas and other artificial trade is the goal sought after.

Twenty-three nations, through representatives, made it known in the earlier meetings that they were against legislation which would restrict international trade. Included among these countries were all those where quota laws against films exist at present. Since these meetings the number has been increased by four. It includes:

The United Kingdom, Germany, Austria, Belgium, France, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Columbia, Abyssinia, Denmark, India, Hungary, Cuba, Finland, Irish Free State, Batavia, Japan, Italy, Portugal, Netherlands, Poland, Servia, Roumania, Siam, Switzerland, Sweden, Turkey Czechoslovakia, Greece, Luxembourg and the United States.

Without the signature of the American Government, as a party, there can be no agreement reached, so this country's attitude in the matter is looked for to carry much weight.

$1,325,254 M-G-M's Net Profit for Quarter

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER's net profit for the 3-month period ended June 3 last amounted to $1,325,254, the quarterly statement shows. Gross profit for the period was $2,663,441, a net balance of $1,157,446 remaining after operating expenses of $1,505,995 had been deducted. Miscellaneous income came to $167,608.

The net profit of $1,325,254 for the last quarter compares with the $1,136,490 of the corresponding period of 1927.

Radio Picture Broadcast

C.F. Jenkins, Inventor, Plans Tri-Weekly Programs from Washington; Silhouettes Will Be Initial Presentations

WHAT may very well be the first regular service of radio picture broadcasting to be attempted in the United States will shortly be inaugurated in Washington, D. C., when the plans of C. Francis Jenkins, inventor, to broadcast on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights materialize.

Mr. Jenkins will employ a wavelength of 6,420 kilocycles, or 46.72 meters, under the station call letters of 3XK. His first efforts will be purely experimental and will be received chiefly by amateurs and investigators, but if a sufficiently large number of persons install radio picture reception devices pictures will be broadcast

In these experimental broadcasts silhouettes will be sent. According to Jenkins he has discovered that stories in silhouette are "as entertaining as movie cartoons in the theatre, plus, also, the appeal of the mystery of movies by radio."

After the simpler forms of picture broadcasts have been achieved, Mr. Jenkins intends to send out over the air half-tones and, later, a picture story. An announcement in code will precede each picture and each picture story will be concluded with the word "end." The pictures will be broadcoast on a basis of 48 lines per picture and 15 pictures per second. American and Canadian amateurs receiving radio picture broadcasts and becoming interested in the principles involved will assist materially in the development of this latest scientific achievement, Mr. Jenkins believes.

An indication of the vogue that the radioing of pictures is gaining is in the recent granting of a permit by the Federal Radio Commission to Harold E. Smith to erect a television station on Mount Beacon, N. Y.

Loew in Deal with "U"

Will Acquire Capitol, Universal Atlanta House, Is Report; "U" Expanding in Wis., Mich., Says Executive

THE Loew circuit will take over Universal's Capitol Theatre in Atlanta, according to reports now circulating throughout the southern key city. By the terms of the deal, said to be practically set, Loew will acquire an interest and operation of the Capitol and will close its own house, the Grand.

Reports from Racine, Wisconsin, crediting Universal with intending to sell the Venetian Theatre there, have been denied by Isaac Weinberg, of Universal Theatres, as untrue. "Instead of selling any of our holdings," said Mr. Weinberg, "we have an expansion program calling for three new theatres in Wisconsin and three more in Michigan." Jack Gross has been installed as manager of the Venetian, succeeding Arthur Friedman.

In reference to the impending Loew-Universal deal in Atlanta, it is said that the present Loew house, the Grand, no longer fulfills the requirements of its owners. The theatre is an old one held by Loew under a long-term lease. It is presumed that the present theatre situation in Atlanta is adequate enough to fill the theatre going public's needs. With this in view Loew does not have to supplant the Grand with a new house, it is said, but can secure all the representation it needs in the Capitol. With both Loew and Universal partners in the theatre, neither of them will be forced to sacrifice their first run outlets.

Meeting to Revive Exhibitor Unit Called Off by Northwest Association

THE plan of W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Exhibitors Association, to hold a convention July 10-12 for the purpose of reviving the Allied States Association as the foundation of a new national exhibitor unit has been called off. According to Frank J. Rembusch, secretary of the exhibitor group, reservations poured in in such unexpected numbers that the lake steamer on which the convention was to have been held could not offer the necessary accommodations. It had been planned to stage a simultaneous gathering of the Northwest unit and leaders from other states.

Several members of the unaffiliated exhibitor unit are insisting, Mr. Rembusch says, that the proposed meeting be held as they vividly recall an agreement made at the Trade Practice Conference of last October that a further conference would be held this coming October. "They are insisting that this meeting be held and that the Federal Trade Commission again be represented in an endeavor to cause fair trade practices to be instituted in the industry, as was promised and as must eventually come about," declared Mr. Rembusch.

FBO Studio Filming 4 Feature Pictures

Four feature films are in the course of production at the FBO Studio as June is ushered in. These include "Gang War," "Taxi 13," "Dog Law" and "Orphan of the Sage."

"Gang War,' based on an original by James Ashmore Creelman, is one of the six specials on the FBO schedule. This story of the Chinatown of San Francisco is now in work under the direction of Bert Glennon. Olive Borden and Jack Borden head a cast which also includes Eddie Gribbon, Walter Long and Frank Chow.

"Taxi 13" has been almost completed by Marshal Neilan, who directs 11 children in this production. Jerome Storm is rapidly coming along with the Ranger vehicle, "Dog Law." "Orphan of the Sage," the second Buzz Barton vehicle on the 1928-29 schedule. is now in work at the studio under the direction of Louis King. Supporting the 13-year old western star are Tom and Bill Patton.

Joseph Schildkraut Gets Role of Ravenal

For the role of Gaylord Ravenal, one of the foremost characters in the Edna Ferber novel, "The Show Boat," Universal has signed Joseph Schildkraut. The casting for the part ends a search of three months for a player who will satisfactorily fill the role's requirements. Incidentally, Universal has signed Schildkraut for a period of five years.

As the synchronization of sound will play an important part in the production of "The Show Boat," Schildkraut, an actor of considerable stage experience, has been favorably regarded by Carl Laemmle for the part from the first. An actress with a good singing and a speaking voice will be selected for the character of Magnolia.

Nita Naldi in Paramount French Production

Nita Naldi, a veteran actress of screen roles, has been cast for an important part in "The Model of Montmarte," a picture to be made in Paris by Leonce Perret and distributed by Paramount. It will have as its star Ivan Petrovitch. Louise La Grange will play the title role.

Mayor Walker's Charges of Political Bias Denied in Industry

CHARGES that, according to his information, the picture industry "had been delivered into the camp of one of the major political parties," were made by Mayor Walker of New York in an address before the Wampas, Hollywood, on July 9. The charges met widespread denial in the industry.

Editors of newsreels declared that strict impartiality was always observed.

Will H. Hays, to whom as well as Louis B. Mayer and Joseph M. Schenck, the Mayor's remarks are construed to have referred, declared that no favoritism could possibly exist as film executives are to be found in both major parties. Louis B. Mayer said in part: "The printed report to the effect that Joseph M. Schenck and I were attempting to deliver the motion picture industry to the Republican party must appear extremely amusing to anyone who understands the motion picture business.

"Mr. Schenck and I are Republicans. We are for Hoover, California and our personal friends. However, as to attempting to deliver the motion picture industry to any party, that is my idea of wasting time on an expensive scale."

Outlook for Independents Favorable, Says Brandt

His Company Will Have Big Year, He Declares; Predicts Rosy Trading Season in Statement

THE outlook of the independent is bright and promising, holds Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures Corporation. In a statement this week he predicted great things for his company and independents in general. An independent he termed "a company which confines all its energies and resources to the making and distributing of motion pictures and has no theatre affiliations."

Stating that his views concerning the independent market are conspicuously incorporated into his company's announcement of product for 1928-29, Mr. Brandt enumerated his production budget which runs between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 and the investment in stories and stars for the line-up. "We spared no expense in getting together the sort of story material we know the box offices of the country are seeking," said Mr. Brandt.

"Contracts coming into the home office from all parts of the country," said the Columbia executive, "are evidence enough that we are on the right track, and that the exhibitors of the country are today vitally interested in getting first-class pictures regardless of which company makes them.

"So far as we are concerned, Columbia Pictures this year is going to write the biggest business of its history. We are making the sort of picture the thinking exhibitor will welcome to his program. We know the time has come when performance counts rather than promises—and Columbia has the sort of past record that will stand the closest scrutiny.

"Yes, sir, this is going to be a great year for Columbia Pictures—and that certainly means a great year for the independent market."

Seeking Russian Market

Joseph M. Schenck Enroute to Europe to Negotiate Soviet Distribution of U. A. Films; to Visit Other Countries

RUSSIA is one of the European countries that will be visited by Joseph M. Schenck, who proposes to negotiate for the handling of all the past, current and future United Artists productions through the Soviet republic. The United Artists' president sailed on July 5 on the S.S. Homeric accompanied by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and general manager of foreign distribution. Besides Russia, they will visit England, France, Germany and Scandanavia.

Provided that the Soviet negotiations are successfully carried through, United Artists will have 100 per cent world distribution, the company claiming to have 84 offices in principal foreign countries.

It is arranged to have another production made in England in addition to the one Rex Ingram is producing now. Mr. Schenck declares this not only as a compliance on the part of United Artists with the quota regulations, but also as a desire to cooperate with the idea of home production in Great Britain.

Sales conferences will be held with various distributors of United Artists films in the countries visited. In Italy it is planned to expand present methods of distribution.

Two other passengers on the Homeric with Messrs. Schenck and Kelly are Maurice Silverstone, sales manager for Allied Artists Company, Ltd., who is returning to his London headquarters with his bride, the former Dorothy Littman.

Northwestern Theatres Enlarging Chain

NORTHWESTERN Theatre Circuit, newly organized concern said to be backed by Standard Oil of Canada and now operating 8 houses in the Dominion, has taken over the Border Theatre in Detroit and will renovate the house. The Border seats 900.

Northwestern is also building a large house in downtown Pittsburgh. This house, to seat 2,600, will be completed by February, 1928, it is thought. At all its houses the circuit plans to show films and tab burlesque shows. Its plan is said to be the establishment of a string of theatres starting from Pittsburgh and through New York State to Canada.

Officers of Northwestern are Paul A. Schenck, president, and J. Arthur Selwyn, vice-president. The first is a nephew of Joseph M. Schenck and the second a brother of Arch Selwyn. Ray Le Strange, general manager, is now in New York on a booking expedition.

Pathe Review to Revive Old Serial Scenes

Under the title of "Dirty Work at the Crossroads," a novelty is presented in Pathe Review No. 31, which will call again to the minds of adult spectators the thrills that they enjoyed when, in their younger days, they witnessed the sensational scenes from such old-time serials as "The Iron Claw," "The Shielding Shadow," "The Fatal Ring," "The Third Eye," "The Tiger's Trail," "The Timber Queen" and "White Eagle." Some of these serials are thirteen or fourteen years old.

No. 31 of the Review is set for July 29 release.

Will Murphey Finishes First Talkie Script

WILL C. MURPHEY, formerly of Warner Bros. publicity department is devoting his time to the writing of scripts for talking motion pictures. He has just completed his first script written directly as a talking picture.

Murphey is well qualified to pioneer in this new field as he has had wide experience in connection with both pictures and the speaking stage. He has had five stage plays produced on Broadway and a number of his screen stories have also been produced. His initial story for the "talkies" is said to contain something entirely new in the way of screen entertainment. Jay Packard is handling this first story.

Edeson Added to "Little Wildcat" Cast

Robert Edeson will have one of the principal roles in Warner Bros. picture "The Little Wildcat," starring Audrey Ferris. The part assigned to the actor calls for a great deal of dialogue on the Vitaphone.

E. T. Lowe, Jr., has completed the script of "The Little Wildcat," which is based on a story by Gene Wright. James Murray, George Fawcett, Doris Dawson and Hallam Cooley are also among the featured players.

"Toilers" Premiered at Los Angeles and Detroit

Tiffany-Stahl's special production of "The Toilers" opened for indefinite runs at the United Artists theatres in Los Angeles and Detroit, on July 11 and 13, respectively. Plans are now in progress, it is said, for the showing of the production at a Broadway theatre for an extended run.

"The Toilers," the first of the ten Tiffany-Stahl specials for the year, will be followed by "The Cavalier."

Christie Promotes Nancy Dover to Girl Leads

Nancy Dover, a girl from Dallas, Texas, who has been appearing on the stage in Los Angeles in musical comedies and who made her debut in a Christie comedy just before the studios were closed for the spring shut-down period, has been moved up to occupy the niche of leading woman. She is now playing in a Bobby Vernon comedy which will probably be called "The Sock Exchange."

M-G-M Acquires "Last of Mrs. Cheney"

"The Last of Mrs. Cheney," the play by Frederick Lonsdale, in which Ina Claire was starred, has been acquired for the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It will be Norma Shearer's next vehicle and will follow "A Little Angel," which enters production next week. Meanwhile, the Lonsdale play will be scenarized.

Theodore Roberts Will Return to Screen

Theodore Roberts and his big cigar will return to the screen world, after an absence of two and one half years. He will have one of the featured roles in John Gilbert's "The Mask of the Devil," which Victor Seastrom will direct for M-G-M. Alma Rubens is the only other selection for the cast thus far announced.

Canadian Censorship on "Dawn" Varies

CENSORSHIP developments with regard to "Dawn" have aroused considerable attention in Canada and the announcements of the Provincial Censor Boards show that the feature is meeting with varying fate.

In Manitoba, the censor tribunal passed "Dawn" for general presentation without one change or deletion. On the other hand, the Western Province of Saskatchewan will not see it at all because the Censor, W. E. Gladstone, has condemned the feature in its entirety and has not offered any explanation for his decision. It is interesting to note that the Manitoba and Saskatchewan censors viewed the picture at the one screening in Winnipeg.

Premier G. H. Ferguson and other Government officials of Ontario viewed the feature at Toronto some few weeks ago and then passed the production on to the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors without comment. The decision of the Ontario Censors has not yet been announced.

Two Added to Cast for "Redeeming Sin"

J. L. Warner has selected two more players for places in the line-up of "The Redeeming Sin," the next Vitaphone Road Show on which Dolores Costello will begin work as the star. The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Sound Device Issue is Much Clouded

Interchangeability of Equipment Cause of Much Speculation

policy of Electrical Research Products under like conditions.

All of which fails to answer the question of interchangeability. It seems that film is not interchangeable in the machines without the installation of some very minor equipment, but the main question seems to be whether or not Western Electric will permit exhibitors to install that equipment on the Movietone device. With the latter company taking the stand that theirs is the only equipment at present in the market and that therefore they know nothing of any other device, it seems likely that no information will be forthcoming on the subject until RCA actually starts installation of its Photophone equipment in theatres.

Meantime Photophone announces it is making rapid progress with the synchronization of feature pictures both as to music and sound effects. Here again, Photophone is most secretive as to its future plans other than to say it will have a Broadway house equipped with Photophone perhaps some time in August, when First National's "Lilac Time" will have its premiere showing.

Aside from "Lilac Time," Photophone is said to have completed synchronization of music and sound effects in "The Perfect Crime" for FBO, "The Godless Girl" for Pathe and "The Good-Bye Kiss" for First National. "The Butter and Egg Man" is another First National feature that is to be Photophoned, and, aside from those mentioned, the company announces that contracts have been closed for twenty-six other features that are to have music and sound effects by the Photophone process.

With a number of the leading producing companies tied up with Movietone under long contracts the question has arisen as to where Photophone was to get sufficient product to supply exhibitors if film is not interchangeable under the two devices. In answer to this Photophone claims not to be worried in any way regarding product and that there will be ample pictures to keep all their equipment busy.

Al Christie Outlines Policy for Sound Comedies

AL CHRISTIE, who is making preparations for the building of stages for sound equipment, and who has announced that all new season Paramount-Christie comedies will be synchronized, is now planning the new stories for his four series of comedies which will carry sound effects, music and talking sequences.

"We expect to use sound in some form in every picture made for the new releasing season, which begins August 11th through Paramount exchanges. In some of the comedies, sound effects and dialogues will be used in parts of the picture where most effective, and some of the comedies will carry sound all the way through, with the addition of musical effects. Stories and situations are of primary importance, as we always maintained they were in building a high calibre of short comedies.

Christie is very enthusiastic concerning the future of sound in short comedies because it is his belief that there are even greater possibilities for novelties and effects in short comedies than there are in the average run of feature pictures.

"Comedies have always stood for action," he said, "the one item which movie fans have been taught to crave the most; and bringing sound to the two-reel comedies, keeps action on the screen, a very successful item in movie entertainment.

"All product made for sound accompaniment will also be presented in straight film for the regular trade which is not equipped to use sound effects and for the foreign market."

Canada Famous Orders Sound Equipment

H. M. THOMAS, Division Manager of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has announced that this company has ordered 10 sets of equipment for the presentation of sound pictures.

The equipment will be installed in the Capitol Theatres in Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Calgary and in the Uptown Theatre at Toronto for a start and the arrangement will be such that both "Movietone" and "Vitaphone" releases will be presented in these Famous Players houses.

It is also understood that the Capitol Theatre to be constructed in Ottawa, Ontario, under the direction of Thomas W. Lamb, architect, will be fitted for the presentation of audible features. Famous Players has approximately 130 theatres in the Dominion.

NEW developments show interchangeability of film in sound reproducing devices, but develop question of legality of placing extra equipment on machines necessary for reproduction of sound.

King Vidor, noted director, expresses opinion that all-dialogue pictures will be a thing of the past within a year and that meantime they will only retard the art of motion pictures.

Labor troubles continue to crop up in different cities

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., warns against panic.

Joseph M. Schenck says talking motion pictures will not displace the silent drama, but they will be aided by sound or music synchronization or both.

Universal will produce as the first musical comedy written directly for the screen a collegiate picture.

Irving Berlin has signed an exclusive contract with United Artists to write music and songs for the screen.

Al Christie outlines the policy under which his short comedies will be produced with sound and dialogue for Paramount.

"King of Kings" opens at the Rivoli theatre in New York with sound accompaniment synchronized by Photophone and reproduced by Movietone device.

Labor Trouble Feared for New Season

St. Louis Situation Developments Being Watched with Interest

CONSIDERABLE in the way of labor trouble is anticipated in August and September, when present agreements expire in different parts of the United States. The advent of the sound pictures involves questions with musicians, operators and stage hands unions. As a consequence much interest is being shown in the St. Louis situation, where much strife has existed for several weeks past.

St. Louis exhibitors have asked operators to accept a ten per cent cut in wage and a reduction in scale and number of men employed in orchestras in smaller houses. Musicians are waging a strong fight against sound pictures and operators are insisting on extra men with sound films. Stagehands demand that their union must be employed if a mechanical musical instrument is operated on the stage or if there is to be dialogue in the picture.

It is not unlikely that a crisis may be reached shortly in Chicago, where a pit orchestra of fourteen men is said to have been removed at McVicker's with the start of a Movietone picture. No protest has yet been issued by the Chicago Federation of Musicians. It is said, however, that a conference between Sam Katz of Publix and James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, resulted in Katz declaring he would take care of the musicians left jobless.

Petrillo, a power in labor unions throughout the country, is said to feel that the talkies will not replace musicians and that the public would not stand for such a change. He holds that orchestras are just as essential to the success of a movie house as other elements and that patronage is bound to fall off materially if they are eliminated. If, however, Petrillo is wrong in his belief, he will not waste much time in launching a campaign in the interest of the musicians, it is said.

From many parts of the country comes word that exhibitors may seek to cut wage overhead because of general business conditions. The unions, on the other hand, are just as determined to keep up or increase the present scale.

Irving Berlin Signs Exclusive Contract With United Artists

IRVING Berlin has signed an exclusive contract with United Artists whereby he will write original songs and scores and compose music for that company. The contract was signed by Berlin with Joseph M. Schenck, the two being very old friends. This friendship dates back to the days when Mr. Schenck was an immigrant drug clerk in a Bowery shop and Mr. Berlin was making his debut as a professional songster in "Nigger Mike's" around the corner in Chinatown.

By the arrangement, Mr. Berlin will provide an original song of words and music entitled, "Where is the Song of Songs for Me," to be sung by Lupe Velez in D. W. Griffith's production, "The Love Song." He will also write a special song, "Marie," to be sung as a part of Samuel Goldwyn's production, "The Awakening," in which Vilma Banky makes her first individual starring appearance under the direction of Victor Fleming, with Walter Byron as leading man.

Woodhull Warns Against Panic in Installing Equipment

AT the annual meeting of the Northeastern Pennsylvania exhibitors held at Scranton last week, R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., warned those in attendance against rushing wildly into the installation of sound reproduction equipment in their theatres. While pointing out the necessity for such installation he declared a thorough investigation as to the interchangeability of product in the different devices was absolutely essential, as was the legality of interchanging equipment.

The Woodhull speech follows in part:

"Synchronized pictures, or talkies, are the most revolutionary factor that has ever entered the business of exhibiting pictures. They are here to stay, and no exhibitor can afford to ignore them. No matter how isolated a theatre may be, it will have to eventually run synchronized pictures, for once a person has heard them he will no longer be satisfied with the silent picture. Therefore, no exhibitor can afford to put himself in the position of those wisecrackers of another age who stood on the banks of the Hudson watching the first steamboat on its trial trip, and called it 'Fulton's Folly.'

"But in selecting your type of installation you will do well to exercise ordinary business caution. After determining the device that most nearly meets your needs, make the necessary research to find out that this device can both mechanically and legally use the product which you intend to purchase. Make certain that there is nothing in your contract for the equipment of your theatre which may prevent you from using product which you may deem desirable.

"Ask for assurances that the device you select is interchangeable mechanically and legally for all the product which will be manufactured. Inquire from the renting companies if they can legally supply you, with their product to project over the installation you have selected.

"The greatest minds of the world are now working on the problems connected with this new wonder of the world. Within a year great improvements and refinements may develop.

"Don't understand any part of this speech as an opinion that the day of the talkie is yet in the future. It is here now, but exhibitors must not be panicked into buying the first installation they see. Study the question deeply for it is one that has to be met by every exhibitor, and by exercising cool, ordinary business judgment it can be met adequately."

Christie Comedy With Sound Completed

Synchronization of the first of the Christie sound comedies, "The Dizzy Diver," has been completed by the Victor Talking Machine Company, in conjunction with Nathaniel Finston, Paramount's musical director. Billy Dooley is the star. Christie recently signed for a Western Electric license, and will soon begin the making of synchronized pictures during production in their Hollywood studios.

The next of the Christie comedies to be synchronized will be the first of the "Confessions of a Chorus Girl" with Frances Lee, Billy Engle and others. The title of the first one is "Skating Home." This will be followed by Jack Duffy in "Hot Scotch," the initial comedy in the Sandy MacDuff series, and by Bobby Vernon in "Stop Kidding."

All of the Christie pictures, including the two coming Douglas MacLean feature productions, will be synchronized with dialogue, music and all kinds of special sound effects.

Walsh in N. Y. to Confer on Sound Picture

Raoul Walsh, Fox director, has arrived in New York from Hollywood. He will confer with Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the Fox company, on plans for the filming of "Behind That Curtain," Earl Derr Bigger's latest best selling novel.

This production will be produced in Movietone and Walsh expects to spend considerable time in New York making arrangements for his first sight and sound picture.

Warners Sign Ted Lewis for Vitaphone Film

Ted Lewis, one of the leading exponents of jazz, and well known both on the vaudeville and musical comedy stages, has been signed by Warner Bros. to make a Vitaphone picture. The title will be "Is Everybody Happy?", Lewis appeared last season in "Le Maire's Affairs" and "A Night in Spain."

King Vidor Decries Dialogue Films

Says Talkies Will Detract from Art in Picture Making

KING VIDOR, who, among other successes, was responsible for "The Big Parade," is not an advocate of the dialogue picture. In fact, he sees it only as a fad that will run its course within a year. He says at best it can be but an imitation of the speaking stage and that meantime it will detract from the progress of motion pictures. For sound effects and synchronized music, Vidor gives his wholehearted approval of the "talkies."

"Motion pictures were just getting somewhere," said Vidor, "when the upheaval came along. They had reached a point that neared perfection and they were developing artistically along lines that argued well for the future. It is true that there were many bad pictures and too many features being produced, but the worthwhile pictures were improving and would have brought better times in the industry.

"Sound pictures, those with dialogue that runs continuously, will do away entirely with the art of motion pictures. It will no longer be an art and I think dialogue will really detract from the entertainment value in films. What was left to the imagination of the picture patrons will be entirely lacking in the talking films. You take some of the sequences in 'The Big Parade' and they would be entirely ruined if dialogue was supplied to them. As an instance, take the scene at the truck in the French village, when Jack Gilbert was leaving Renee Adoree. If you put dialogue into that scene you would absolutely ruin it. There would be nothing left to the imagination.

"A motion picture should be produced to appeal to three classes, the lower type of mentality, the middle classes and the upper class. Each one had his different conception of that scene between Gilbert and Miss Adoree. To have put words in explanation into their mouths would have ruined it all and taken away much of the pleasure of the audience.

"What is it that makes Charley Chaplin the great artist he is? It is his genius at pantomime. A shrug of the shoulder, a hitch of the leg, a twirl of the cane; by these and many other methods he gets over to you the idea of the thing and you can draw your own conclusion as to just what he is thinking. That is the sort of thing that makes entertainment for all classes. Each one can do his thinking for himself. Chaplin would lose a lot of his art if explanatory words were put into his mouth.

"An occasional line of dialogue for contrast or to explain a situation might not be amiss. It would do away with subtitles, which are our great weakness in pictures as they are now constructed. But I think pictures were nearing such perfection that we would have dispensed largely with subheads in the near future.

"Sound effects undoubtedly will help many pictures. They would have helped 'The Big Parade.' I got together with Sid Grauman when we were to open it in Los Angeles and we devised some good backstage effects, but the sound did not exactly synchronize with the flashes of the machine guns and there was a slight weakness that will now be overcome by the sound devices.

"As a matter of fact I am hardly qualified to talk on sound pictures, as I have seen but few of them, having been in Europe for the past three months. I do not want to seem to lack progression, but I do love the art of motion pictures and I can't feel that art can be retained if the pictures are to carry continuous dialogue.

"I am firmly of the opinion that the motion picture industry would be best served if fewer pictures were produced and more concentration put on each one. That with sound effects is the solution of the problem of building better patronage. Then, too, I think that pictures should be produced in their proper locale; that the story should be built around the locale and that every locale should not be built in Hollywood."

Warner Bros. to Test Talkie Censor Rights

WARNER BROS. will start a friendly action in New York State in the fall to determine the legality of the ruling that the censors have jurisdiction over talking sequences in motion pictures. James R. Wingate, head of the commission is also anxious to have his status definitely decided in the matter.

The censor boards of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio are at present passing upon dialogue, and a ruling in New York will probably be the basis for similar action in other states if it favors the motion picture producers.

Victor Talking Machine Co. to Establish Hollywood Plant

HOLLYWOOD, July 8.—The Victor Talking Machine Company, Camden, N. J., is to erect a $250,000 studio in Hollywood to meet the requirements of the company's division of synchronization of sound with motion pictures. H. L. Sommerer, in charge of the company's sound devices, is here and has leased a plot of ground between Orange Drive and Sycamore Ave., just off of Santa Monica boulevard, upon which will be erected the new plant. Special equipment is being assembled at the Camden plant which will be installed in the new Hollywood branch as soon as completed.

The Victor company has been working in close cooperation for some time with several of the major motion picture companies in the development of sound devices. George Hall, manager of the Victor branch factory at Oakland, Cal., and Sommerer have been busily engaged in surveying the situation and establishing the local plant to best serve the interests of the motion picture industry.

In reference to the establishment of the Victor development Mr. Sommerer said:

"The Victor company has been working in close cooperation for some time with the major motion picture producers in the development of sound synchronization with the exhibition of motion pictures, and for the past ten days Mr. Hall and myself have been surveying the city for the best location for our new plant.

"Because Hollywood is the acknowledged motion picture capital we felt that it was the logical location in which to establish a plant for the development of this branch of our service and believe the site we have chosen is particularly adapted to render efficient service because of its convenient location to the majority of the studios.

"Complete laboratories and manufacturing facilities with the necessary staff of experts will bring the Victor Talking Machine Co.'s thirty years' experience and technique in the development of sound recording and reproduction to the very door of its associates in the development of talking pictures."

Work on the new plant will start immediately upon completion of the plans. The site includes more than 30,000 square feet.

'King of Kings' Sound Reproduction Shows Film Interchangeable

THAT film is interchangeable on Movietone and Photophone apparatus with good results is evidenced by the showing of "The King of Kings" at the Rivoli Theatre in New York. The picture, synchronized with a musical score and sound effects under the Photophone process is being reproduced by Movietone apparatus and the results are satisfactory.

The writer has seen "The King of Kings" projected by both devices and was more impressed with Photophone, which seemed to more intensify the sound accompaniment. This however is explained by Movietone as being more the fault of the sound production, while by Photophone it is said the reproduction is inferior.

Under any circumstances there is little fault to be found with the reproduction of the sound, which would be considered almost perfect if heard exclusively on either machine.

Hays Says Sound Will Draw New Patrons

WILL H. HAYS, on his arrival in Hollywood, expressed enthusiasm over sound pictures and the possibilities that attach to them. He foresees great new audiences with the advent of the sound films. In discussing sound possibilities he said:

"Now the greatest personages will be heard as well as seen everywhere. Think what this means historically to posterity. Sound will be dramatized when such dramatization adds to the total dramatic value of the picture. Great new interest will be created. The motion picture always has brought the remotest outposts of civilization to Main street everywhere and this new feature is bound to add to the general interest in films."

Paramount Officials to Launch Talkies

Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount's first vice-president; B. P. Schulberg, associate producer, and Harry Goetz, treasurer of the Paramount corporation, arrived in Hollywood Wednesday, after a conference in New York on sound film plans. Paramount's sound program on the West Coast will be launched at once under the supervision of Mr. Lasky and Mr. Schulberg.

Accompanying the Paramount officials were John Monk Saunders and Fay Wray. Miss Wray has been definitely assigned to a leading role with Richard Arlen in "Dirigible," an air special based on Saunder's screen original.

MacLean Plans to Have Sound Accompaniment

Douglas MacLean's first feature picture under his contract with the Christie Film Company will have sound accompaniment, according to announcement by Al Christie, production head for the company. The picture will bear the title "The Carnation Kid."

Al Cohn's story has already been scenarized by Henry McCarthy.

Talking Sequences for Gloria Swanson

Not only will the music be synchronized on the film for Gloria Swanson's next United Artists Picture, but there will be talking sequences, according to a statement made by the Swanson unit. Voice tests are now being made at the studio in Hollywood, and the leading man will be chosen with suitable attention to his vocal ability.

The story will be directed by Eric von Stroheim and was also written by him. The production is tentatively titled "The Swamp."

SO greatly enhanced is the value of the Shamokin and Mt. Carmel, Pa., theatres of the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of the first named city, through the introduction of the Vitaphone and Movietone in the last few months, according to a statement published in a Shamokin newspaper, that the "talkies" devices are to be placed in all the theatres of the Chamberlain circuit.

The statement adds that the Shamokin and Mt. Carmel houses "were among the first one hundred progressive theatres of the United States to keep abreast of entertainment progress.

Vitaphone Makes Debut in New Orleans

Vitaphone added another triumph to its lengthy list of conquests when it made its New Orleans debut last week at the rebeautified Saenger Tudor theatre in Canal street. Interest was keyed to a high pitch through effective publicity and advertising and the public was eager for the first presentation of the "sound pictures."

The opening program was well chosen, bringing Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello in "Glorious Betsy" as the feature, and four acts of Vitaphone vaudeville, featuring Mary Lewis, Van and Schenck, Waring's Pennsylvanians and George Jessel. The inaugural address by Vitaphone was by Will H. Hays.

So great was the success of the first week of the Vitaphone in New Orleans that the program was held over an extra week. It has been rumored in theatrical circles that both the New Saenger and Loew's State will install "sound picture" apparatus in the very near future.

Somma Circuit Houses Equip With Vitaphone

Two theatres of the Charles Somma Circuit of Virginia opened with Vitaphone on July 2, and three others of the circuit will play Vitaphone as soon as installations of equipment is completed.

The Somma theatres in which installations have been and are being made are the Bluebird in Richmond, Hippodrome, Richmond; Brookland, Richmond and the New Byrd theatre which opened with Vitaphone July 2. The Bluebird in Petersburg, Va., also opened with Vitaphone the same day. Service contracts with the Vitaphone Corporation for four acts a week in each of the five theatres have already been signed.

Sloman Finishing Filming of "Girl on the Barge"

Director Edward Sloman and the Universal company making "The Girl on the Barge" is rapidly nearing the end of photographic work on this feature, the first to be made in its entirety in the east for several years by this company.

The exterior canal and barge scenes were filmed along the Champlain Ship Canal. The interiors are being made this week at the Paramount Astoria studio.

Derelys Perdue Leading Lady in New "U" Serial

The leading feminine role opposite William Desmond in the new Universal serial, "The Mystery Rider," has been given Derelys Perdue, former Wampas baby star and now acting in Stern Bros. comedies. The Sterns, who have her under contract, are loaning her to the Universal studio for the summer. Sid Saylor, another of the Stern players, will be seen in "The Mystery Rider," also.

Bell Production Chief at Paramount Studio

MONTA BELL, director, becomes the production executive at the Paramount studio in Long Island, as the first step on the part of Paramount following a series of conferences which materialized plans for the production of sound films at the Astoria plant and on the coast. Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president, has departed for California accompanied by B. P. Schulberg and Harry Goetz.

Bell arrived from Hollywood last Tuesday and took active charge of the filming and recording of several subjects which are scheduled to begin immediately at the Astoria studio. The program of new sound pictures takes in short sound novelties as well as features and the reproduction in talkie form of stage shows, it is said.

Cortellaphone Ready to Install Soon

Ed D. Turner, general manager of distribution for Cortellaphone, states that the company will be ready to make theatre installations within sixty days.

The Cortellaphone reproducer is at present a sound-on-disc device, but the same machine is adaptable to a sound-on-film attachment which will be installed later. The machine weighs less than 300 pounds and can be installed in any theatre at a cost of $500. The Cortellaphone reproducing device attaches to any standard projector.

The Cortellaphone will go into quantity production in ninety days, according to Turner, and the company will then be in position to supply the device to any number of theatres.

May McAvoy, Francis Join "The Terror"

May McAvoy and Alec Francis, who last appeared in "The Lion and the Mouse" for Warner Bros., are working together in another special now in the making at the Warner Studio. This is "The Terror," based on the stage play by Edgar Wallace which, when it reaches the screen, will have complete dialogue and sound effects on the Vitaphone.

In addition to Miss McAvoy and Mr. Francis "The Terror" will feature Louise Fazenda, Edward Everett Horton, Matthew Betz and Holmes Herbert. Roy Del Ruth is directing.

Publix Stage Units May Be Sound Releases

PUBLIX is giving serious consideration to the sound picture versions of its stage shows. If the experiment proves successful these films will in all probability be included in the regular Paramount program.

It is not likely that any of the present stage shows will be completely recorded, but highlights of each unit, including Paul Ash and his band, will be filmed with sound. A unit will be used for experimental purposes at the Paramount studio on Long Island as soon as the work of installing a sound-proof stage is completed.

Anita Page Enrolls for "Talkie" Course

Anita Page, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, has enrolled as a co-ed at the Summer sessions of the University of Southern California for a course to improve her talking picture technique. She will attend college two hours each evening and will study under Dean Ray K. Immel, of the U. S. C. School of Speech, and Prof. W. B. MacDonald, of the dramatic department.

Miss Page was among the first to have her voice analyzed by the electrical voice dissection apparatus. Many other players are said to be contemplating the university course in talking picture technique.

Chandler Sprague, editor-in-chief of the Fox West Coast Studios, has arrived in New York to study the question of how the introduction of sound will affect scenario writing. He will spend a month in the East with headquarters at the company's office.

The first of the all-dialogue films to benefit by this close attention will be Earl Derr Biggers' mystery novel, "Behind That Curtain," which Raoul Walsh will direct.

Public Library to Have Exhibit of Vitaphone

The Cleveland Public Library is soon to place on public view an exhibit on talking pictures. It will consist of descriptive stories of the development of Vitaphone, photographs of Western Electric equipment by means of which Vitaphone is produced and reproduced and actual Vitaphone records. The exhibit is being installed by Miss Ina Roberts, publicity director of the Cleveland Public Library.

Ziegfeld Considering Road Shows for Stage Attractions

FLORENZ Ziegfeld, Jr. is said to be seriously considering having all of his future shows photographed in color with sound effects and dialogue by the RCA Photophone. The Ziegfeld idea is said to be to give his stage shows only in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. The rest of the country would see only the picture version.

Among the present shows said to be under consideration for synchronization are "Rosalie," "Three Musketeers" and the new version of the "Follies." The producer is said to be favorably impressed with recent talking pictures seen on Broadway.

"Talkies" Will Not Displace Silent Drama, Says Schenck

TALKING PICTURES will never displace the silent drama, in the opinion of Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, who sailed for Europe on July 5th. Mr. Schenck urges the utmost care in the use of sound and dialogue. He says the latter should be used only where it will intensify the dramatic suspense, the dramatic situations or the action of the drama.

The statement made by Mr. Schenck follows in part:

"Many producers, excited by the success of some of the talking pictures, seem to lose their perspective and to assume that the talking picture will be the only sort of picture in a short time from now. Therefore they calculate that a mass of spoken words as a part of each screen production is to be recommended.

"But really there is no good reason for believing this. A little thought will show that sound effects must be used judiciously. The spoken word must be used even more carefully. In fact, it should be used only where it will intensify the dramatic suspense or the dramatic situations or the action of the drama. It is important to remember that the picture is still the foundation of screen entertainment, and sound only an accessory.

"Not all pictures can use the spoken word to advantage. Basically a motion picture is international in appeal, because visual picture entertainment is almost exclusively international in its expression. Peoples of every tongue and clime understand silent pictures. Music and sound effects are also international, because all peoples can hear as well as see, and there is very little difference in taste as to music and interpretive sounds.

"But the talking picture is limited in appeal to certain peoples of certain countries. The spoken word never has been international in its practicability. Even in English speaking countries only certain pictures will permit of spoken lines as an accessory. Even with these there will be only occasional instances of success. Talking pictures will never displace the silent drama from its supremacy, or affect the appeal of motion pictures with synchronized music and special sound effects.

"Forthcoming product for United Artists will have in every case, synchronized music. In some instances, wherever sound effects are adaptable, it will also have sound effects.

"U" to Produce First Musical Comedy Written for Screen

UNIVERSAL is preparing to launch two musical comedy talking pictures, both written especially for production in sound and dialogue. One of these is to be titled "The College Hero" and the other, "The Minstrel Show."

"The College Hero" will present a somewhat novel idea. It is the claim of Universal that it will be the first musical comedy ever written for the talkie screen. Some time ago Carl Laemmle, Jr., started writing a series of shorts which were widely shown as the "Collegiate" Series. They were full of the pep and dash of the college campus and they covered various lines of sport. The plan now is to combine about four of these stories into one and the story is now being prepared. The dialogue will be of the college type, with singing, dancing and sports combined.

The cast that will be used in this picture will be largely the same as that which appeared in the "Collegiate" series. Among those who will participate will probably be the following: George Lewis, Dorothy Gulliver, Eddie Phillips, Churchill Ross, Hayden Stevenson, Colette Merton and Lorayne Duval.

Joseph Cherniavsky has been at work for several weeks on appropriate music for the production and it is possible he will go to the coast to assist in the musical arrangement of numbers. It is likely the direction will be in the hands of Nat Ross.

"The Minstrel Show" is founded upon a composition purchased last week from George Rogan and Norman L. Sper, entitled, "The Mintrel Man." The idea of this production will be to present to the present generation all of the characteristic humor, minstrelsy and color of the old-time minstrel show.

:: "The Check-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Lively Production Current at Metropolitan Studio

Big Plant Now Houses 12 Units Engaged in Filming; Plans for Sound Equipment Installations Under Way

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—Following the expiration on Pathe's lease of the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood, which terminated June 30, the Christie Brothers, owners of Metropolitan, have again assumed active control of the large plant with Phil H. Ryan in charge of operations and management.

A large number of companies are at work at Metropolitan, headed by Harold Lloyd and Caddo companies, both of which are engaged on important productions. The Charles Hutchinson company is also engaged on important films, starting on its third feature picture, and Trem Carr Productions are in the midst of a large schedule. Other producing units which are centered at Metropolitan include Burton King Productions, First Division Pictures, Cliff Broughton, Batchelor Productions, Mascot Pictures, Vareo, Nat Spitzer, and part of the production of Anchor Films.

Plans are going forward rapidly for the new construction which will be undertaken for sound-stages and sound-recording equipment. Metropolitan will thus be the first of the so-called independent studios to be equipped for the making of sound pictures through the Western Electric System.

"Toots and Casper"

"Toots and Casper," those cartoon creations of Jimmy Murphy, will be played by Thelma Hill and Buddy Duncan in the series of two-reelers that Larry Darmour will produce for F B O release. The strip is now running in Hearst newspapers throughout the country. Production on "Happy Holidays," the first of the series, is now under way.

Mix's First FBO Western

Tom Mix' initial western under the auspices of the Joe Kennedy organization will be "Son of the Golden West." It was started at the Hollywood studio of the company last week. The story was written by George Pyper and is a tale of the Pony Express. Eugene J. Forde is to direct.

Rinty's Next

Rin-Tin-Tin's next starring vehicle will be "The Outlaw Dog," written by Robert Lord. Ross Lederman will direct the dog star. The initial scenes call for a location trip to the Big Tree country in northern California.

N. Y. Mayor at "Lilac Time" Coast Premiere

MASTER of ceremonies at the premiere showing of "Lilac Time," the First National special production, at the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles on July 17, will be Mayor James J. Walker of New York. He accepted the invitation to preside at the showing at a dinner given in his honor by Ned Marin, First National producer who entertained him at his recent visit to the Burbank studio.

An extensive exploitation and advertising campaign will back "Lilac Time," First National reports. The Eveready Hour of July 3 featured the theme song of the picture, "Jeannine, I Dream of Lilac Time," a composition of Nathaniel Shilkret. The song was broadcasted over Station WEAF and 19 other stations. The firm of Leo Feist is publishing the song and has already begun its activities to popularize it. The song will be tied up with chain stores as well as the retail music stores in key cities, it is said.

Alone

For the first time in a long time, Jack Mulhall will be featured alone. When he assumes the leading role in "Applesauce," he will not have opposite him Dorothy Mackaill, his constant co-star for several seasons. He is now being teamed with her in "Waterfront," and is scheduled to act with her in one more production this season, "Children of the Ritz."

Camera Supervision

At the Burbank picture plant Syd Hickox will be in charge of the cameras on "Oh Kay," the new Colleen Moore vehicle. Incandescent lighting is being used entirely on this picture.

"Our Daily Bread"

"Our Daily Bread" will be F. W. Murnau's third picture for Fox Films. Chas. Farrell and Mary Duncan will have the leading roles and to permit their immediate work on them an unprecedented twist in the production schedule of the Fox studio has been made.

The two players will work in two specials at the same time. On August 10 they will stop work on "The River" to journey to the Oregon wheat fields, where they will spend a month making harvest scenes under Murnau's direction. That task completed, they will return to work on "The River," which will be completed before further scenes are taken for "Our Daily Bread."

FBO's Plant Active

Nine features are in the course of work at the FBO studio at the present time and three of them are Gold Bond productions. The nine are: "Son of the Golden West" and "Sinners in Love," started July 9; "The Chorus Kid," "Sally's Shoulders," "Singapore Mutiny," which was begun early this week; "Captain Careless," also begun this week; "The Trail of the Horse Thieves," and "Rough Ridin' Red," another of the films began this week. Leon d'Usseau expects to start "Fury of the Wild" momentarily.

Pathe Films in Work

At the Pathe Studios in Culver City, several new films have been placed into production and several have been finished. Last week "Show Folks" went into work at the same time that "Craig's Wife" and "Captain Swagger" were finished. On the 23rd, the "Annapolis" company returned to the studio to finish a few remaining scenes. "Sal of Singapore" went into production about June 10th. Two or three days later "Marked Money" joined the list of pictures now in work. In preparation and soon to enter the filming stage are "Geraldine," "Ned McCobb's Daughter" and "The Spieler." Irene Rich will star in the second and Jeanette Loff in the first.

Mack Sennett's studio is hard at work on new comedies—the "Handy Andy," "The Tired Business Man" and "The Taxi" series.

"The Swamp"

Camera work on "The Swamp," Gloria Swanson's next film to follow "Sadie Thompson," will begin on August 15 in Hollywood. Eric von Stroheim, who is to direct Miss Swanson in this story, his own, of Berlin and German East Africa, is nearly finished with the script. In this vehicle, the star will play an Irish girl named Queen Kelly. The role of the leading man, that of a German army officer, has not been filled as yet.

New Tuxedo Titled

The first Tuxedo comedy on Educational's program for 1928-29, recently completed at the Educational studios, has been titled "Wedded Sisters." Wallace Lupino and Betty Boyd have the principal roles, Lupino playing his first featured role in a two-reel comedy.

"Sinners in Love"

The script of "Sinners in Love" has been finished and approved by Director Melford and camera work on this F B O special production is scheduled to begin shortly. The picture will be released as a Gold Bond; simultaneous with its release the story will be published in four issues of True Story Magazine, the September number to carry the first installment.

New T-S Color Classic

"A Tenderfoot Tourist," a new Tiffany-Stahl Color Classic short subject, is now being photographed under the supervision of Howard C. Brown in the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Jack Singelton and Dorothy Nourse are the leads and Mark Goldaine is the director. One of the scenes will be of a Hopi Indian dance.

Fox Finishes Five

Within the week five new pictures have been finished at the Fox studio, where production is well in advance of release dates. The newly completed quintet are: "Mother Knows Best," "Me, Gangster," "None but the Brave," "Prep and Pep" and "The River Pirate."

"Jimmy Valentine" in Work

"Alias Jimmy Valentine," the stage success in which H. B. Warner starred, is now in production at the M-G-M studio, where it is being made into a vehicle for William Haines, Jack Conway directing. The feminine lead is not yet chosen.

Bessie Barriscale Returns

One of the earliest of the screen stars and one of the most popular during the Ince regime, has returned to motion pictures. Bessie Barriscale has come back to play the role of Kitty Mayo, vaudeville trooper, in "Show Folks." Recently she was heard at the Hollywood Playhouse in the drama "Women Go On Forever."

On the Stella Way

Eva Von Berne, the young Viennese girl recently discovered by Irving Thalberg and Norma Shearer, is already on the way to stardom, M-G-M having chosen her to play opposite Jack Gilbert in "The Mask of the Devil." This is her first camera assignment and a prize role for a lass who not long ago was but the daughter of an Austrian army colonel. She has had no previous stage or screen experience.

"Outcasts" Seiter's Next

Director William Seiter will commence directing "Outcast" for First National upon the completion of his present picture, "Waterfront," and Corinne Griffith's present starring vehicle, "The Divine Lady."

"Revenge"

Final scenes for "Revenge," the gypsy story that will come to the screen via United Artists, starring Dolores Del Rio, are now in progress. It was adapted by Finis Fox from a short story by Konrad Bercovici, the gypsy author. Fox will continue adapting material for Miss Del Rio and will remain on the job in Hollywood while director and star of Carewe productions are in Europe.

Not Going Abroad

Carmel Myers is not going abroad, contrary to a persistent report that she has signed to go to England in connection with British Amalgamated pictures. Miss Myers is going to stay in Hollywood and will contribute her talents to two pictures for Gotham—"The Girl from the Argentine" and "A Modern Sappho."

Thrill Work

Although Buck Jones' first independent production, "The Big Hop," will not be a western, it will not lack thrills. Buck took his company to sea while making "The Big Hop," and the star made a parachute jump from a plane into the Pacific ocean with four other men. The plane, a big passenger ship, took off from Long Beach. Director James W. Horn and a camera crew were on board the boat twenty miles out. When the plane reached the ship Buck and the others jumped. They were picked up by speed boats.

Blanche Sweet

Blanche Sweet plans on resuming her picture work in Hollywood following her extended trip abroad during which time she played in one picture for British Films, Ltd., "The Woman in White."

Bess Meredyth in Accident

A fractured wrist and severe cuts around the face and throat have been the means of interrupting Bess Meredyth's work on "The Woman of Affairs," which she was adapting for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when an accident caused by a wild driver smashing into Miss Meredyth's car resulted in her painful injuries. Miss Meredyth was on the way to her beach home, where she expected to spend the week-end. Instead, she spent several days in the hospital.

Requiem

The film colony mourned the passing of Sidney C. Smith, 36, screen comedian, who succumbed in a private hospital on Gower street, following a beach party. Smith was one of the original "Hall Room Boys" of film fame and was recently featured in Christy comedies.

Ramon Novarro Returns

Ramon Novarro returned to Hollywood last Wednesday after a three months' tour of Europe with his family. While abroad Novarro visited Rex Ingram at his studio at Nice.

"Oh Kay" Done

Mervyn LeRoy directed the final scene for "Oh Kay," starring Colleen Moore, on Sunday, July 8, finishing the picture on schedule time.

Lubitsch Collaborating

Ernst Lubitsch, whose next production will be a John Barrymore vehicle for United Artists, is working with Hans Kraly, scenarist on "Conquest," an original which Director Lubitsch will start about the middle of September. Barrymore is reported to be elated over the prospect of the story, its author and director.

Submarine Story

Irvin Willat, handling the megaphone on "Into the Depths," a Columbia production, will direct some extraordinary spectacular scenes, including one depicting the ramming of a submarine by a cruiser.

Adapting

Dorothy Farnum, who is adapting "Adrienne Lecouvreur," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, says this is one of the most charming stories she has brought to the screen. Fred Niblo will direct and it is believed that Greta Garbo will have the title role.

Complete Oral Scenes

For four consecutive days Roy Del Ruth and the entire company under his direction worked eighteen hours in order to complete the talking scenes in "The Terror," which Warner Brothers are producing as one of their big all-Vitaphone productions.

Fox Signs Young Director

Winfield Sheehan, vice-president of Fox, has been credited with the saying that "no director is any better than his current production." Sol M. Wurtzel, another vice-president of Fox Films, evidently is in accord with his chief's views on that subject for he has signed Raymond Canno upon the strength of that young director's contribution to the screen, "Life's Like That."

Keefe in Anchor Picture

Cornelius Keefe will play the featured male role in the screen production of James Oliver Curwood's story "Thunder God," which Charles Hunt is directing for Anchor productions.

Tryon in "Talkie"

Fred Newmeyer, who is slated to direct Glenn Tryon in "It Can Be Done," is making a thorough study of the Movietone synchronization device, as it is understood that Carl Laemmle intends using the "talkie" on this feature production.

New Underworld Film

Randall H. Fayne, whose "Collegian" special which Mack Sennett produced, brought him into prominence, is writing the scenario of "Romance of the Underworld," the Paul Armstrong play which will be picturized by Fox.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
THE CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

Managing Director, Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., and Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Creating Our Own Slogan

A well-known paint manufacturer created the slogan "You Can't Paint Your House With Applesauce" and we thought it just as appropriate to create a slogan of our own.

We have, off and on, since the appearance of the Manager's Round Table Club, been preaching that, in most cases, the days of "bunk," as applied to theatres, advertising and exploitation, are over. Theatre-goers, wherever they might be, are "show-wise" because they travel more often to the bigger cities, they drive there in their automobiles and they subscribe for the city papers. Don't let your own theatre suffer by comparison. For that is exactly what happens if you are in a rut in your shows, in the way you present them or the way you operate your house.

When the folks return from a visit to the larger cities and come to your theatre, don't let them walk away saying, "What a difference between this 'dump' and the So and So Theatre in Such and Such a town."

Entertainment Sold Like Anything Else

Pictures are entertainment. At least that's what the producers are always trying to tell us. And our contention is that entertainment must be sold with as good a form of salesmanship as any other item requiring the services of a salesman.

Look for the "big idea" that might be hiding away among the exploitation angles of the picture. Think over what the chances are for tying it into something local. Advertise it so that your prospective patrons will want to see it and not just come because they have no other place to "kill" a few hours. But don't misrepresent it. Better to starve on a picture than to pack them in on a lie. Because you will feel it for many a moon to come. So again we caution and say "You can't fill your house with bunk."

Ads Should Reflect Theatre Caliber

It is generally conceded that the time is past when a theatre can turn out any old piece of advertising matter, and expect to get results. In our opinion any advertising coming out of a theatre, should reflect the caliber of the theatre itself. It can hardly be called economy to distribute among prospective patrons a circular, poorly set up or printed on cheap stock. Investigation will disclose that the difference in cost between a cheap piece of advertising and a good piece of advertising is very small.

To those managers who like to use circulars or heralds as an advertising medium, we suggest that they use cuts or mats to liven up such advertising. Plain type set-up is not always eye-arresting, and a good cut might tend to make a person read it through instead of throwing it away.

Then there is the so-called "trick circular," which most certainly will be read if not worked too often. We used one some time ago, and from personal observation we found it was being read by practically everyone who got hold of it.

After all "good" advertising is not expensive because if it really is good, it is bound to bring back, in additional business, more than you paid for it, but keep in mind at all times that a herald or circular is used for the purpose of attracting patrons to your box-office, who might ordinarily not attend, and with such an idea in mind, make it both peppy and attractive.

Are You Invisible?

THIS is the age when we should be seen as well as heard. Don't crawl away into the cellar and do the disappearing act.

The Manager's Round Table Club was created so that exhibitors all over the world could exchange ideas and suggestions for improving business and theatre operation. But we want to see what you look like.

We are just as anxious to publish your picture as we are to print your story or "stunt"; so, please see that we receive your photo as soon as you can send it on.

Parking Tags at the Right Time

Manager Edward T. Zadra of the Lyric and Ramsdell Theatres in Manistee, Michigan in advertising "Beau Sabreur" hit upon the idea of a Red parking tag similar to those used by the Police Department of his town. It happened just about the same time as the Summer Parking regulation went into effect with the happy result that everyone who found the tag on their car was certain to read it. Mr. Zadra tells us that it increased business and created considerable comment.

What we particularly like about this "stunt" is that it can be used on any picture you care to work it with. This is another one of the "real" ideas that we are anxious to uncover, proving that the picture can be fitted to the idea and the idea to the picture.

Just a little portion of Mr. Zadra's most interesting letter read—"Have been religiously reading this section of Motion Picture News, and will be candid in stating, that I have profited by some of the suggestions submitted by members."

From Goldquist of Illinois

Here's an idea that F. C. Goldquist of the Web Theatre, Savanna, Illinois, worked and which appeals to us because it can also be used on any picture you want to try it on. Providing, of course, that the picture has some real merit.

He describes his idea as follows: "I sent up six day bombs at two minute intervals just before we opened the doors for the evening. Then from the roof of the theatre I sent up a small paper balloon with passes attached. I got two kids from the crowd, watching in the street, for my committee. They helped inflate the balloon, saw the passes attached and just before it went up I took two from the balloon and gave it to them. After it was in the air I told the kids to show their passes in the crowd and tell them they saw me put the others on the bag. This showed them there was no deception about it.

Quite a crowd chased the balloon several miles. It finally landed on the farther edge of a river and one brave lad did not hesitate about plunging in, swimming the stream and bringing in the passes."

In the smaller towns, particularly, this "stunt" will surely attract plenty of attention if handled right and that is why we are publishing it for the consideration of our Members.

Wodetsky in Full Charge of Miles

J. C. Wodetsky, manager of the Miles Theatre in Detroit was recently placed in complete charge of the entire proposition. He put his shoulder to the wheel and from recent reports has started to build up the theatre into a real business again. This gave him the opportunity of doing many things that previously he could not do himself and he found that in actual practise, many of his ideas of theatre management were money saving and practical.

As Mr. Wodetsky is a member of the club, I want to wish him all the luck he deserves and we hope to hear more from, and about him.

Testimonials Keep on Coming in Creating a new idea such as this Manager's Round Table Club is in itself a pretty large order for anyone to assume. But when the response is so great from every corner of the country, and when we receive so much encouragement, then the task becomes infinitely less difficult.

Fred ("Fritz") Putnam of the Strand Theatre, Port Arthur, Texas, was one of the first to see the advantages that membership in the Club offered and did not hesitate to express himself when sending in his application. Just a small bit from his letter says—"Hope you get many members in this Club as I am sure it will be a big success as it will be a big help to everyone." And every day continues to prove that Fred's idea was correct. The Club is a real success and the suggestions offered for the members' consideration have already proved business boosters to many of us.

Newspaper Tie-Ups Good Money Makers

Tie-ups with newspapers, when successfully put across have always proved a sure money-maker. Why not? It is conceded that the best medium to get to your theatre-goers is through the local papers. For this reason we liked the stunt put over by O. Fred Glass of McCook, Nebraska.

Mr. Glass worked his tie-up with a local aeroplane factory and the paper, and since there are so few of us with the makings of an aeroplane tie-up, we cannot honestly advocate "stunts" requiring same. If you can do so, all the better, but if not there is still the newspaper to work with and that in itself is good "dope." Mr. Glass tied up with every merchant in town on his idea and the paper co-operated 100 percent with the result that "The Legion of the Condemned" was a "whiz and did business." A special edition, distributed in all surrounding towns done the trick. Great stuff, Mr. Glass.

Cartoons of Racial Types Form Newspaper Game

A newspaper tie-up featuring "We Americans" and based on a series of cartoons showing various racial and national types proved a highly successful exploitation stunt for the Roosevelt Theatre, and stimulated reader interest in the Chicago Evening American.

The newspaper printed a series of sixteen pictures of various nationalities which the readers were to identify. When all sixteen were submitted, a letter of 100 words on which race has contributed most to America was to be sent to Rob Reel, of the American. Thirteen cash prizes, from $25.00 to $5.00 apiece, and fifty tickets to the Roosevelt were offered for the correct answers.

Key City Reports

New York City

INTENSE heat, a mid-week holiday and a general scampering off to cooler spots by all those fortunate enough to get away from a blistering city, took severe toll from some of the Broadway houses last week. Three specials called it an end on the street and moved out, and some of the weaker two-a-days took smart cracks on the chin which left them rather wobbly for the time. No particular highlights among any of them, excepting the Capitol, which can be credited with a better showing for a two-weeks' run than this house has had in a long time.

"The Cossacks," (M-G-M) with John Gilbert, is the picture which gave an excellent two-weeks' business to the Capitol—a good picture combined with the Gilbert pulling power did the trick. The Paramount did not do so well, in comparison with other weeks, but still managed to show a profit with "The Big Killing" (Par.) the week was fair. At the end of the week Tom Meighan's "Racket" came in and big business is looked for during the current week. There is some talk of putting talking parts in some of the effective dialogue in this one.

The Roxy again went along to a below average pace with "The Michigan Kid" (U) but trade is expected to pick up at this house with the advent of a stronger array of feature pictures. This week's newspapers carry an ad announcing a number of them which will shortly be shown.

The Strand continued to show the stronger attendance which has marked the change of policy in recent weeks. The picture, "The Wheel of Chance" (F.N.) and another talkie program again brought this house a week that no one can kick about. The Talkies are getting a good play on Broadway, as is evidenced by a consistent showing being made by "The Lion and the Mouse" (W.B.) at Warners. The one possible danger is over-feeding the public at the present stage of the game.

Three pictures, "Potemkin," "The Last Laugh" and "Shoulder Arms," a real bargain for the patrons of this theatre, failed to get anything but ordinary business at the Cameo and both the Rivoli and Rialto played to below average trade. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" (U) at the Rialto, eased out, after a mediocre two weeks, to let "The King of Kings" (Pathe-deMille) come in. "The Drag Net" (Par.) let go after a three-weeks' stay and this house took on Universal's "The Man Who Laughs."

Most everything among the specials took a decided drop with the exception of Paramount's "Wings" at the Criterion, where this popular aviation film continues to near its fifty-second week. Good business here in spite of the torrid weather. At the Astor, "The Trail of '98" (M-G-M) is still holding on after a month's stay, but is destined to go out in a few more weeks. The hot weather also took a sock at the Embassy where "The Tempest" (U.A.) is staying, and the public found the hot Fox film "Fazil" too hot for this season at the Gaiety. Some folks say that the title of this one is not so good. Don't know what it's all about or how to pronounce it. It probably will not be there much longer, and will be set in line with the rest of them to go into the Roxy. Another Fox picture, "The Red Dance," along with the Shaw Movietone reel, also took a slump for the week, but will undoubtedly stay on for a time.

Concerning the departed ones, "Dawn" left the Times Square after a run of a month and one-half, and the Hammerstein film, "The End of St. Petersburg," called it quits at Hammerstein's theatre. The latter made it five weeks in all.

Tampa

THE 4th was a surprise for the showmen of Tampa. None expected much of a matinee, with the hot weather calling for a "dip in the Gulf" and the beaches advertising their attractions. However, plenty of people decided in favor of the "cool and comfy" theatres and all houses enjoyed a good business, both matinee and night.

The Victory business held up fine this week. "If I Were Single" was the feature attraction, though the real card of the bill was Al Jolson in his singing Vitaphone act. Besides these two features there were three other Vitaphone acts, the Movietone News and three Movietone acts.

Colleen Moore, in "Happiness Ahead," did not come up to expectations at the Tampa. This former Tampa girl usually pulls better business. The heat may have been responsible for the slight slip from her former records. "A Certain Young Man" the feature of the last half, was well liked and held the business up to average.

The Strand had a satisfactory week. "The News Parade" and "The Hawk's Nest" were featured two days each and both pictures drew about average business.

"Why Sailors Go Wrong," used for three days and given a special lobby flash, pulled a little better than average.

Since the Franklin switched to four changes in the week they have been using two first runs and two second. The second runs have been pulling better than the firsts and this week they had three second runs and but one first. "The Showdown," "Hold 'Em, Yale," and "Speedy" were the second runs used last week and they gave the house very good business. "The Breed of Sunset" used but one day did about average.

Indianapolis

BUSINESS was unusually good in Indianapolis picture houses last week. July 4th holiday crowds and heavy morning rains swelled attendance at downtown houses, making a satisfactory week in all.

Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob" did satisfactory business at the Indiana. Charlie Davis' stage band in "Swanee Moon" and Stuart Barrie at the organ were other features.

Corrine Griffith in "The Garden of Eden" at the Palace drew heavily last week at the Loew house. Emil Seidel's stage band presented "Odds and Ends." Harry Fox has taken over Seidel's work as master of ceremonies, Seidel continuing as musical director.

The Circle did a good business with Arthur Lake in "Harold Teen." Dick Powell, master of ceremonies, continues popular in stage presentations. "Revue in Blue" was last week's show.

Will Rogers in "The Texas Steer" did good business at the Ohio, which closed Friday for installation of Vitaphone. Will reopen this fall.

Stock companies sold out several days last week but additional business failed to detract from movies. Neighborhood houses reported gain in business.

Milwaukee

BUSINESS in the downtown Milwaukee theatres was at a low ebb throughout the entire week, and the hot summer weather with its mid-week holiday no doubt was partly accountable for the poor results the box offices turned in. The summer season seems to be here to stay and only a break in the weather will help the theatre business.

The Wisconsin featured "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." A new stage director was also introduced at this week's showing which helped to swell business somewhat at this theatre. The picture drew fairly well.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" played to very mediocre houses at the Strand.

Very slim patronage was accorded the Merrill, where "Honor Bound" was the week's feature.

"Partners in Crime" at the Alhambra drew fairly well.

Business was a little more brisk at the vaudeville theatres.

The Orpheum enjoyed very good patronage with "Hold 'Em, Yale" as the photoplay feature.

The Riverside offered "Three-Ring Marriage."

"Tenderloin" was held over for a second week at the Garden and business continued to be unusually good.

Neighborhood theatres also experienced a slump in business.

The Milwaukee did fairly well with "Why Sailors Go Wrong."

"Harold Teen" was offered patrons of the Garfield and Uptown with fair results.

"Diamond Handcuffs" played at the Oriental, Tower and Modjeska to moderate houses.

Salt Lake City

THE first run theatres of this city report fairly good attendance records as a rule although the real summer weather seems to have set in.

The rather unusual photo play "Diamond Handcuffs" drew very satisfactory crowds at the Pantages theatre in conjunction with the regular vaudeville bill offered at this house.

"United States Smith" played to fairly crowded houses at the Capitol theatre, with the Fanchon & Marco stage presentation "Japa Knees," also proving to be a good drawing card here.

Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob," with Richard Arlen, went over very good at the Paramount Empress.

The Victory theatre, which is presenting the Vitaphone and Movietone in connection with the picture performances, reports that the present showing of "The Lion and the Mouse" is keeping pace with the record breaking run of "The Tenderloin" at this house a few weeks ago.

"My Lady's Lips," featuring Clara Bow, proved to be a very good drawing card at the American this past week.

The Gem theatre presented the second run of Harold Lloyd in "Speedy" to good sized houses.

Two second runs, namely "The Raider Emden" and Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus," were offered as a special holiday program at the Rialto theatre last week.

The State theatre featured Antonio Moreno in "Nameless Men" as their holiday program.

Alice Terry in "The Garden of Allah" did a very good business at the Tower, a suburban house

Portland.

A WEEK of cool weather, a series of pictures far above average, and a considerable increase in the population, due to the Fourth of July, brought up the receipts at all houses, although two of the pictures were running for second and third weeks.

Fildom's sensational love team, John Gilbert and Adoree, drew exceptionally well at the Portland in "The Cossacks," one of the most attractive of the summer shows. The stage offering "Pagodaland" was also given an ideal setting headed by Phil Lampkin and his band.

The Blue Mouse went into second week with "Lion and the Mouse" with no let-up in enthusiastic crowds, and from all indications the picture will continue to draw heavily for at least another two weeks.

Pantages featured "Chicken a la King," which many voted to be an exceptional picture on account of being partially burlesque, pantomime and straight comedy, the bill ending with Raymond Fagan and his 18 aristocrats of music. The cashiers were kept mighty busy annexing the sheckles for Alexander.

Especially appropriate for 4th of July week was "A Ship Comes In" at the Oriental as was also the patriotic musical offerings by Josef Srodka and orchestra. Glenn Shelley, organist, contributed "Spirit of America," and good business was enjoyed during the bulk of the week.

Billy Haines dropped in again with "Telling the World" and found a packed house to greet him. This reception, of course, was expected as Haines always registers well here. Sally Rand of screen fame flew up from California and headed the stage show, accompanied by a dozen boys in "Sally from Hollywood. Fox Movietone, headed by Al Smith, proved attractive.

The Columbia continues to show "Ramona" for the third and last week, and with Rosetti, a favorite with Portland audiences, made new friends with the novel introductory prologue "Pale Moon" and "Ramona."

Both Movietone and Vitaphone scored with good business at the Hollywood, the eastside suburban house. "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath" drew only fairly well.

The Peoples and Rivoli, second run houses at 25c top, did good business with Emil Jannings in "The Last Command" and Clara Bow in "Kid Boots."

Cleveland

LAST week was the first week of continued hot weather, and the result was sadly evident at the box office. Business fell off everywhere, some places to the vanishing point. The houses with cooling plants installed suffered the least. Matinees downtown were not bad, due no doubt to the cooling devices, but the evenings were disastrous, except in a few instances.

"The Cossacks" did very well at the Stillman in spite of the continued heat. This picture was well liked, and both John Gilbert and Renee Adoree were hits. It is being held another week.

"Ladies of the Mob" brought out good summer attendance at the Allen. Clara Bow, a great favorite here, always draws well. In addition the story is interesting.

"The Big Killing," clever and amusing burlesque of Kentucky Mountain feuds, did fairly well at the State. The picture was favorably reviewed and well liked by those who saw it.

"The Port of Missing Girls" did well at the Cameo. A sensational picture, with a timely theme, it provoked considerable argument and held up well under the heat. It was held over for the second week.

"A Ship Comes In" a good character play, did just so-so at the Palace. The theme was too familiar to attract great interest.

"Chinatown Charlie" made a good showing at Keith's East 105th St. and was given high comedy honors by patrons and critics alike. Good audience comedy, was the unanimous verdict.

"A Thief in the Dark," shown at Keith's East 105th St. the last half of the week, was well liked, but failed to compete with the outdoor entertainments.

"Wings" made a record in Cleveland by completing a run of 13 consecutive weeks at the Colonial theatre at road show prices. Previously the record was held by "Way Down East" which played here for twelve weeks.

San Francisco

(Previous Week)

EXTRA pleasant weather, neither too cold nor too hot, during the past week, sent the San Franciscans to the Beach, which naturally affected the motion picture business. However, business was good for this time of year.

"Bringing Up Father," as shown at the Loew's Warfield theatre, together with presentation acts and the orchestra, was considered the outstanding show of the week. The house was crowded all week, both evenings and afternoons at every performance.

Business at the Granada theatre picked up considerably. "The Vanishing Pioneer" on the screen, a Publix Revue, and Frank Jenks with his band. Business has not been as good at this theatre at it should be during the past few months and it is thought that the band of Jenks helped to liven things up lately.

"The Four Sons" continued on the screen at the St. Francis theatre, drew well. The acting is boosted by all who see this picture and even though war pictures are not so popular here, this picture draws the crowds very well.

"The Lion and the Mouse," shown at the Embassy, while considered a very good picture, has not been drawing as well as contemplated.

"Hold 'Em Yale," shown on the screen together with vaudeville acts at the Golden Gate theatre, drew big crowds in the evenings. The same can be said of the Union Square theatre, which presented the pictures "Nameless Men" and "Freckles," together with vaudeville acts.

"The Crowd," shown at the Alexandria theatre, and "Good Morning, Judge," together with presentation acts shown at the Coliseum, well filled those theatres.

Los Angeles

THE interruption of a national holiday, resulting in numerous people leaving the city for the beaches and nearby resorts, apparently resulted in an undesirable effect upon motion picture houses throughout the city.

However, excellent business is reported at Loew's State, where the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Cossacks," opened to good business and local newspapers report favorably upon the attraction.

"The Toilers," supplanted Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus," and at the United Artists Theatre beginning last Wednesday. The Chaplin attraction drew well.

At Warner Brothers Theatre in Hollywood, "Tenderloin," continues to draw crowds, and to sustain interest. It will close July 21.

The Metropolitan opened last week with "Telling the World," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product, starring William Haines. Good business is reported.

"Lilac Time," which will succeed "Fazil," at The Carthay Circle, will open July 16 and advance publicity is already current on the event. Mayor James Walker, of New York, will act as master of ceremonies.

Grauman's Chinese continues dark and as yet no definite date of re-opening has been announced.

Albany

THE summer slump is on at the motion picture theatres in Albany and Troy. With the mercury in the nineties, the theatres could not stand up under the heat of last week and win the crowds. Fourth of July was as hot as they come and this, together with a program of racing on the Hudson River, with fireworks at night, left the theatres in a stranded condition over the holiday. Many of the exhibitors, however, say that they have had a good spring and that they are now prepared to take things a bit easy and shape their program for the fall and winter.

The Leland, in Albany, with "Don't Marry," played to just fair business throughout the week, although managing to keep on the right hand side of the ledger.

The Mark Strand, with "Circus Rookies" and Vitaphone presentations, got by to ordinary business.

The Clinton Square, using "The Clown" and "For Ladies Only," held up fairly good, although it should be considered that the house is a small one.

The same may be said of "Sally of the Scandals" at the Mark Ritz.

Joseph Saperstein handling Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, and coupling his picture program with numerous side issues as drawing cards, stating that business was off, added that he had no kick coming.

Proctor's Grand, in Albany, used Lew Tellegen, the motion picture star, and found it a paying venture. These personal appearances will be continued with more or less frequency throughout the summer.

Albany's neighborhood houses, with one or two exceptions, are finding the going rather hard.

In the neighboring city of Troy, "Drums of Love" went over just fairly well for the first half of the week at the Troy, while "Detectives," the latter part, fell down.

The Lincoln used double features for the last of the week, this being the first time this had been tried this summer. The double features for the price of one appeared to appeal to a considerable extent. The two features were "Bachelor's Paradise" and "The Matinee Idol." The first of the week was given over to "Fools for Luck" and ran to fair business.

Proctor's Troy Theatre used Elliot Dexter in a personal appearance and played to good houses.

Pittsburgh

LOEW'S PENN had a big week. William Haines in "Telling the World," going over in fine style. Stage presentation, "Xylophonia," beautifully dressed and well-trained talent. Overture with M-G-M's Technicolor "The Flag" was prettily done. This house consistently does the biggest business in town, and this week was away above average.

The Stanley had a fairly good week with Milton Sills' "The Hawk's Nest," this one getting good writeups in the papers. The stage presentation, "Eight Bells," according to the Sun-Telegraph was "good on account of its brevity."

The Davis had an average week with "A Thief in the Dark" and five Keith acts, headed by Wagner's Big Side Show. The house closes for the summer with the end of this show.

At the Liberty, Beery-Hatton brought more than average business with "The Big Killing." This team is a real "draw" here. The Liberty discontinues stage attractions this week and is substituting two-reel comedies. Which is all for the better, inasmuch as the majority of the acts which played this house did not click.

The Alhambra did but fair with Norma Shearer in "The Actress."

Harrisburg, Pa.

HEAVY rains on the Fourth of July turned many persons away from the outdoor attractions arranged for the holiday to the material benefit of the theatres, and the result was that the first week in July, despite extreme though seasonable heat, was far from disappointing to the picture houses as viewed from the box office angle.

Especially at Loew's Regent, where the principal attraction all weeek was William Haines in "Telling the World," was the attendance exceptionally large. This play gained in popularity as the week progressed, due to the fact that it was so favorably talked about following the early performances. The show also had additional appeal to Harrisburgers for the reason that the book was written by Dale Van Every, a former Harrisburg newspaperman. Manager McCarthy, of the Regent, emphasized this fact in his advertisements.

Tom Mix, in "Daredevils's Reward," brought a good slice of the week's business to the Colonial, and Thomas Meighan, in "The Racket," drew considerably more than average July crowds to the Victoria.

At the State the film attraction the first half of he week was "The Sporting Age," with Belle Bennett, while on the last three days the screen feature was Rex Bell in 'Wild West Romances."

The Broad Street Theatre had good success with a double bill consisting of Bob Reeves in "Fighting Luck," and Creighton Hale in "Thumbs Down," while the Royal offered Tom Tyler and his pals in "The Phantom of the Range."

Bob Custer, in "Fighting Hombre," pleased the patrons of the Capitol, while "Shanghaied" drew average hot weather crowds to the Grand.

The National offered Ken Maynard in "Gun Gospel," and the Russell scored with Buck Jones in "The Branded Sombrero."

Kansas City

DESPITE a good lineup of pictures the attendance at Kansas City first run houses dropped again last week as the temperature soared above the 100 mark on several days in the streets.

At Loew's Midland, Emil Jannings in "The Street of Sin" drew fair crowds, which is more than can be said of business at the Newman, which was showing "The Vanishing Pioneer," featuring Jack Holt, or Tom Mix in "Painted Post" at the Pantages, although the latter drew better than the former.

At the Mainstreet Richard Barthelmess in "The Wheel of Chance" did a fair business, but not up to the usual standard, while the Liberty theatre, which was showing "The Road to Ruin," was forced to close its doors indefinitely because of poor business.

Nothing unusual in the way of exploitation was used by any of the houses, who employed only the ordinary newspaper advertising space.

Cincinnati

OLD Sol, who was on the job constantly and unmercifully during the major portion of last week, dealt the exhibitors a solar plexus blow in the box-office receipts. Business was poor, and how! Even the Independence Day holiday failed to bring in the regulars, who preferred the vast open spaces of the local amusement parks, all of which did a thriving business.

The most satisfactory returns are reported from the Albee, where Clara Bow regaled the customers with "Ladies of the Mob," and where a six-act vaudeville performance, headlined by Nan Halperin, held sway. The gross, however, was not up to normal.

Milton Sills, in "The Hawk's Nest," at the Lyric, had only a fair week, despite the fact that he is considerable of a favorite with local audiences.

The Capitol, with "Hold 'Em, Yale," together with Vitaphone and Movietone features, had a rather sluggish attendance, as compared with the normal receipts for this house.

Keith's, with Billie Dove in "The Play Girl," while on the black side of the ledger for the week, had quite a struggle to remain there.

"The Heart of a Follies Girl," at the Strand, didn't do a land-office business, nor did the Family, with "Buck Privates," for the first half, and "Brass Knuckles," for the remainder of the week.

The local critics were rather liberal with their "panning" of most of the week's attractions, especially decrying the tactics of the exhibitors in the quality of the pictures which they offered for summer entertainment, and while this should not, ordinarily, cause a decided depression, it, no doubt, had some weight, although the exceptionally torrid spell of weather made it decidedly uncomfortable in the theatres, even bearing in mind the usual "20 degrees cooler on the inside" signs.

Minneapolis

SWELTERING weather struck Minneapolis last week and the theatres which were without refrigerating systems, including some of the neighborhood houses, found business off color.

The Minnesota, after establishing a house record with Paul Whiteman the previous week, saw the crowds dwindle some, but nevertheless Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob" proved a pretty good business-getter. "Hula Blues," a Publix unit show, was the stage attraction.

John Gilbert in "The Cossacks" was panned pretty badly by the critics, but the State found the Gilbert name, plus a cool house, a good hot weather drawing card.

"Road to Ruin," which had run two weeks at the Strand, held over for an additional two days, and then the Strand closed up.

Pantages was fortunate in having a Tom Mix picture for the week. "Painted Post" undoubtedly helped to counteract the influence of the awful weather.

The Lyric did only a fair business with "The Big Killing," and the same can be said for Lon Chaney in "Laugh Clown Laugh," a second run picture at the Grand.

"If I Were Single" was the picture at the Hennepin-Orpheum, but the big drawing card was Jeanne Eagels, who appeared in person.

The neighborhood houses, as a rule, found the going hard, except in occasional spots where an unusually big picture was being shown. Fourth of July, of course, saw a general exodus from the city, and the day was generally a tough one, theatrically speaking. The N. E. A. convention brought about 5,000 educators into town, and that lifted the general level of business slightly.

Des Moines

"THE VANISHING PIONEER" showing at the Capitol Theatre did a satisfactory business although the heat wave arrived in full force. The cool theatre drew in patrons who do not usually attend. Jack Holt is generally well liked and the audience reaction was good.

"Harold Teen" at the Strand got a splendid reception. Everybody liked it and said so. The "Our Gang" comedy in which the kids do some inventing got plenty of laughs.

At the Des Moines the Vitaphone showed some of the novel stunts which can be done with "The Lion and the Mouse." There was some criticism of the picture as drama and the Vitaphone effects can be improved. It drew well for the week.

NEW YORK

SEASON 1928-29

Seattle

WITH "Harold Teen" on the screen and Fanchon - Marco's "Diving Venus Idea" on the stage, the Fifth Avenue theatre chalked up one of the biggest weeks in the history of summer season show business in this territory. It was a bill that pleased in every regard, even to the orchestra concert arranged by Hermie King, master of ceremonies, which was the highlight of the stage presentation. A very good week, building every day of the engagement.

Second in the running came "Ladies of the Mob" at the Seattle theatre, in which Clara Bow again demonstrated her title as one of the strongest drawing cards on the screen today. The audience seemingly liked this new type of Bow film, too. The Publix stage show "Pagoda Land" was well received. A week above the average of past weeks at this house.

"The Lion and the Mouse" opened the first week of a long run engagement at Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre to very strong business. It was widely advanced and heavily advertised, and is doing a fine box office business—the best in many weeks. Vitaphone and Movietone attractions form a strong supporting program.

Just as strong as were these three major attractions, the remainder of the first run films in downtown houses were almost equally as weak.

"The Whip Woman" at the Columbia was a very mediocre box office film, and business was noticeably off.

"The House of Scandal" at the Embassy was an average attraction only.

"Alias the Deacon" at the Orpheum and "Hangman's House" at Pantages were just fair films, used to bolster up fair vaudeville programs.

The United Artists theatre, reopening under a "25c. at any time" policy after having been dark for several weeks, played "Burning Daylight." The picture was put on without a day's advance advertising, and considering everything, did fairly well. This 25c. policy bids fair to work out in a resultful way for this house, if judgment in booking is used.

Dallas

EXTREMELY hot weather failed to keep patrons away from the Dallas theatres the past week and receipts went up at practically all first run houses. Good publicity helped turn the trick aided by good pictures.

At the Melba, "Telling The World," with William Haines proved a good draw and business was good. An unusually good lobby display and good publicity gave a boost and the picture proved to be the most popular one of the week.

The Majestic had a good week with "Love Hungry," starring Lois Moran and Lawrence Gray and Interstate vaudeville. The picture was an improvement over those shown the last two weeks and comment was good.

"Happiness Ahead," with Coleen Moore and Edmund Lowe checked off a good week for the Palace. Matinees were unusually good and the early matinees generally produced a full house. The night business was off some but the totals for the week were very satisfactory. Lou Forbes the stage band leader is given the credit for building up the afternoon performances.

The Capitol showed an increase over last week with "Steamboat Bill," starring Buster Keaton and Ernest Torrence and they turned the patrons homeward with a satisfied feeling. Buster Keaton has his fans in Dallas and a Keaton Show is a good bet.

"Vamping Venus," with Louise Fazenda, Charles Murray and Thelma Todd brought average business to the Old Mill. The Old Mill seems to have an average business rut which it is not anxious to get out of as the past weeks show that they are getting a black figure each month and of an appreciative size.

"The Road to Romance," starring Ramon Novarro and "Hold 'Em Yale," with Rod La Rocque filled the house at The Arcadia, the aristocrat of the Dallas suburban houses. It is customary for the Arcadia to fill them up every night as this theatre has more than filled the wishes of it's owners since being erected several months past.

Baltimore

BETWEEN the terrifically hot weather and the Fourth of July holiday coming during the same week beginning Monday, July 2, business at the first-run moving picture houses here with the exception of Loew's Century and Valencia and Warners' Metropolitan, was extremely poor.

"The Cossacks," co-starring John Gilbert and Renee Adoree, played to excellent business during the entire week at Loew's Valencia while "Telling the World," starring William Haines, with Anita Page in her first movie role proved an extraordinarily fine attraction at Loew's Century, with a stage presentation act headed by Ted Claire and his orchestra.

"The Lion and the Mouse," co-starring Lionel Barrymore and May McAvoy, went over good during its third week at Warners' Metropolitan where it was presented with Sound, music and dialogue and other Vitaphone presentations.

"His Tiger Lily,"—starring Adolphe Menjou, with Evelyn Brent in the leading feminine part, proved only a fair patron puller at the Stanley with Graduation Days, a presentation act on the same bill headed by Buddy Page and the stage band.

Business at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome was poor despite that "Skinner's Big Idea," with Bryant Washburn, was the feature film on the same bill with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden theatre, "Alex the Great," starring Richard Skeets Gallagher, proved only a fairly entertaining picture with Gallagher doing his best work to date. Business was only fair during the week with Charles Ray heading the vaudeville of six high class acts. People gave Ray a big hand but his act was very weak.

The Little Theatre, 250 seats, did very poorly during its second week with "Kriemhild's Revenge," a UFA production

Atlanta

KEITH'S Georgia literally walked away with business last week playing Gilda Gray in "The Devil Dancer." The SRO sign took its place at the first performance and held it steadily throughout the week. As the fourth of July came in this week, all records were smashed for this theatre. A good vaudeville program aided materially.

The other houses reached only a fair peak.

"The Escape," with Virginia Valli, plus the Eviston-Napier stock company presenting "Little Nellie Kelly" drew well, considering the average of all houses for the week.

Loew's Grand came next with "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," claiming sizeable houses.

The surprise of the week was the poor drawing power Colleen Moore proved to be in "Happiness Ahead," showing at the Howard. It was a flat week for this house, even on the holiday.

The Rialto with "Their Hour" enjoyed very good business, while the Metropolitan with Milton Sills in "Burning Daylight" came out fairly well.

Three westerners held the Tudor at a steady gate and the New Alamo with three second runs and "Pretty Clothes" and "Royal American" continued with good business.

St. Louis, Mo.

WITH Old Sol getting into Mid-Summer form the airdomes and other outdoor amusement places of St. Louis and vicinity had a real good play during the week ending on July 6.

The first run houses equipped with modern cooling systems were also desirable spots in which to spend an hour or so with the temperature above the 90 degree mark, and such houses as the Ambassador's, Loew's State, Missouri, Grand Opera House and St. Louis had an increase in what may be termed casual callers—persons who were not so desirous of seeing the entire show as they were to cool off.

The Municipal Opera in Forest Park after being handicapped by the coolest and wettest June since 1873 came back very strong beginning the week ending on July 1 by piling up the third best attendance record in its ten year's history and followed the week just closed with a total attendance and receipts mark that will come very close to the record for all times.

The neighborhood airdomes had fairly good business the past week although still somewhat below what should be expected at this season. The cheaper priced down town houses had good business on the extremely hot days.

At Skouras Brothers Ambassador the film attraction was Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob." She does her part well, if you like that sort of picture.

"The Actress" was on view at the Loew's State with Norma Shearer in the role of Rose Trelawney. It is a delightful picture and proved a popular attraction during a very hot week.

"Wheel of Chance" was on the screen at the Missouri Theatre Grand and Lucas avenue. In it Richard Barthelmess plays the dual role of twin brothers. Harry Nie in the P.D. was so enthusiastic about this one he predicted it will be listed among the year's ten best.

"A Ship Comes In" was on the screen of the St. Louis Theatre and was well received.

"The Lion and the Mouse" the Vitaphone talkie continued its successful run at the Grand Central Theatre.

Los Angeles

(Previous Week)

THEATRE business in Los Angeles could be characterized as not up to standard during the past week, due, perhaps, to a number of legitimate stage attractions at various playhouses which seem to have been interfering with patronage of the motion picture houses.

The attraction at Warner Brothers' theatre leads as a box office bet and "Tenderloin," with Vitaphone accompaniment, in its second week continues to hold the attention of all people connected with the motion picture industry. Capacity business is reported for every performance and during the first week, the theatre showed to sixty thousand patrons.

Grauman's Chinese is dark and no announcement has been made as to the next attraction. However, announcement is current that the house is being equipped for talking pictures and that the next feature to play there will undoubtedly be one with sound accompaniment.

"Fazil" at the Carthay Circle, closes this week after four weeks' run. Business held up moderately. "Lilac Time," with Colleen Moore, a First National attraction, will take ts place.

At the United Artists, Charley Chaplin in "The Circus" is doing good business.

Fair business is reported for "The Hawk's Nest," the attraction for the week at Loew's

Only fair business is reported for the Metropolitan, where Clara Bow showed for the week in "Ladies of the Mob."

Opinions on Pictures

The Racket

Fine Entertainment in This Melodrama

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S been a dog's age since Thomas Meighan has had such a good picture as this silent version of a very successful Broadway hit. One can even go so far as to say that it is an improvement on the original. That's how well it's done—and also how capable the screen is in capturing detail and incident that cannot be expressed on the stage. It is skilfully acted and directed with an eye upon story progress, action and suspense, as well as characterization.

The play was perfect meat for the movies. And the director hasn't missed a thing. He's enlarged on it to make it more atmospheric. And the idea itself is so common with the folks who read the newspapers (gangsters and bootleggers simply eat up space) that it should strike a popular fancy everywhere.

Here we have the conflict of an honest cop and a powerful crook, a conflict which is always good for a story provided it is colored with realistic detail. This "The Racket" had in abundance. The locale is Chicago and the cop for interfering too much with the Organization is transferred to an outlying precinct. His menace vows to get him. And it's a battle to the death eventually when the racketeer is bumped off. The camera captures some fine incident.

Meighan is excellent as the officer. No better type could have been selected. And Louis Wolheim as the big racketeer also makes a good impression. Other roles are neatly taken care of by Marie Prevost, Richard Gallagher and George Stone.

Drawing Power: Source of picture. Title and star. For any house. Exploitation Angles: Feature title and fact that play was prominent hit. Bill as true picture of big city life. Tell that Meighan has best picture in months. Feature Louis Wolheim and Marie Prevost.

THEME: Melodrama of police officer who vows to get man and succeeds even when the cards are stacked against him.

Produced by Caddo. Distributed by Paramount. Length, 7,646 feet. Released, June 30, 1928. The Cast: Thomas Meighan, Louis Wolheim, Marie Prevost, George Stone, Richard Gallagher, Lee Moran, John Darrow. Director, Lewis Milestone.

The Actress

Fair Enough Offering—Has Its Moments of Interest

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE taken an old one here for the screen—the picture being a version of Pinero's famous play, "Trelawney of the Wells," and did a fair enough job of it. The piece goes costume and arouses interest through the gowns sported in another age (call it the gay nineties or staid eighties). There will probably be many who will find more appeal from the costumes and settings than they will from the story. It isn't so new and it has served the movies under various guises for several years.

Norma Shearer plays the title role, that of the coy Rose Trelawney, who falls in love with a scion of aristocracy and proceeds to invite scandal in his household. The part gives the star good opportunity to be whimsical, playful and sentimental. It also gives her the opportunity to dress up in hoop-skirts, pantalettes, etc.

It's no great shakes as a story and builds along a solitary groove straight to its finish. But it throws out some sparkle on its journey. There are some poignant touches in the romance—and these find the star at her best. The humor is quaint as furnished by O. P. Heggie, one of the most-seasoned troupers of the stage. Ralph Forbes has the romantic role and does fairly well by it. He should practice overcoming his stare.

Drawing Power: Title and popularity of star and leading man. Suitable for high class houses. Exploitation Angles: Bill as story of actress who scandalizes society. Feature star in her hoopskirts, etc. Use plenty of stills. Play up Ralph Forbes, who has become extremely popular.

THEME: Romantic drama of actress who falls in love with artistocratic youth and scandalizes his household.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, 6,998 feet. Released, April 28, 1928. The Cast: Norma Shearer, O. P. Heggie, Ralph Forbes, Roy D'Arcy, Owen Moore. Director, Sydney Franklin.

How to Handle Women

Light, But Fast Moving Comedy—Good for Summer

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S not much to it which is sufficient reason why it should prove popular with those whose summertime war cry is—"Gee, it's hot!" The heat should pass unnoticed when Glenn Tryon starts his antics in the role of a country boy about to tackle the big city.

One may be astonished to find the youth so adept at selling himself, but the astonishment will be quickly forgotten in the rush of gags and hokum. Our hero meets the girl friend aboard a city-bound train, and the romantic opportunity established, he seizes the business opportunity when he encounters a Prince trying to wheedle a loan from American bankers. The royal visitor from a peanut-growing country is refused the loan. So the young rustic plants his personality with the Prince in the position to making peanuts popular.

There is your plot. The loud pedal note in this farce is thumped when the villian (one can be found in any Prince's entourage) tries to queer him with the girl.

Its denouement uncovers the hero fleeing from arrest for posing as a bogus Prince. Eventually his pursuers surprise him when offering him the job of publicity.

There are a goodly number of laughs here and Glenn Tryon rates well as a light comedian. Marian Nixon as the girl friend is charming, and the others are O. K.

Drawing Power: Title and zippy quality picture. Suitable for summer trade anywhere. Exploitation Angles: Tease the title and feature star as comedy find. Tie up with peanut distributing campaign.

Theme: Farce-comedy of youth who shows 'em how to sell peanuts.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, 5,591 feet. Released, Oct. 14, 1928. The Cast: Glenn Tryon, Marion Nixon, Raymond Keane, Robert T. Haines, Bull Montana, Cesare Gravina, Leo White, Violet La Plante, Mario Carillo. Director, William J. Craft.

"Listen Children"

(Educational—One Reel)

HAM HAMILTON, of the gentle expression, exaggerated walk and the purely dumb manner, is still very much in the parade of comedians. Though, for the most part, the comedy consists in the situations that arise rather than in Ham's efforts to amuse, it is still a fact that whatever bit of funmaking is delved into by the big comedian is rendered effective as rib-tickling matter. Ham is "there."

Ham's monicker is Everstrong Beardsley and he is an instructor at a military academy for children. The children just dote on him because of his dumb ways. They (there are almost a score of them) use him as the butt of their jokes. The figures of the little tots make the comedy doubly appealing and Ham is ably abetted by their presence. He very considerately gives them the limelight whenever possible.

In this comedy you will find some funny stuff. One of the gags, way above the average, shows the comedian riding an automobile minus every portion of the wheels except the hubs. The other has Jack Miller unconsciously trailing behind him a cannon pointed at the upper extremity of his body.

Norman Taurog deserves most of the praise for the ideas and their execution as he both wrote and directed the comedy. The players, who were photographed by Leonard Smith, include, besides Hamilton and Miller, Jackie Levine and Al Thompson.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Hard Work"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS Cameo has its moments of fun ladled out with a great deal of generosity and to a greater extent than is generally the case with a one-reel comedy. There are some effective gags, some funmaking from the three leads and a noticeable zip and dash vitalizing its length. In short: a good comedy.

Wallace Lupino is seen as the perspiring husband and victim of all the "hard work" that is called for in the picture. Betty Boyd is his pretty young helpmate and little Jackie Levine his troublesome son. These three attempt to clean up a farmhouse and what fun there is develops from their exertions in this behalf and their endeavors to undo the havoc their young son wreaks on their work. A good time is had by all looking at this little laugh express.

Newsreel Resume

Paramount

The reception of New York to Miss Earhart and her fellow aviators led the events recounted in Paramount News No. 99. Bathing scenes at Coney Island, the unsuccesstul attempt of Germany's rocket car, an army blimp fleet in manoeuvres, the president at vacation home, the two Italian aces who flew from Rome to South America, and the Arctic search for Nobile survivors are the other important items. The Grand Prix at Paris and a vast flock of pigeons at Rome were additional bits.

Mexico's new president, athletes competing for places on the U. S. Olympic team, impressive display of England's air power, the arrival of the Southern Cross in Australia and a speedy power boat race on the Mississippi were some of the interesting sights offered in No. 100. Included also were scenes of ranch dwellers in pilgrimage to open range lands, Gene Tunney, John D. Rockefeller, Sr., Al Smith and Senator Robinson, and the world's largest plane in test flights in England.

Pathe

The president's successful fishing activities at Brule, the German rocket car in disaster and rescue parties leaving Spitzbergen to aid missing Nobile fliers were the highlights of Pathe News No. 57. There were also on hand views of Gov. Smith, swift race dogs at Tia Juana, and a tryout of a fast boat in England.

The Democratic nominees at Albany, the Bremen fliers in Germany, final U. S. tryouts for the Olympics, the Pope, England's giant 20-ton bomber, Gene Tunney, and yachts sailing from New York on race to Spain were the stories in No. 58.

Kinograms

Miss Earhart and her companions in New York, the Prince of Wales reviewing old English regiment, fast dogs breaking records at Mexican race track, Secretary Wilbur visiting the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the unsuccessful spin of the rocket car, and a graphic account of an auto spill in England in which one of the occupants was killed were on view in Kinogram No. 5411. Some fine shots of a horse race also played a part in the reel.

The Southern Cross in Australia, England's gigantic air display, yachts starting their race to Spain where the final trials were held were the principal picture accounts in No. 5412. Other scenes told of ceremonies in France honoring memory of girl heroine, the annual pony and donkey show of London's costers, and Mexican motorcycle cops showing their prowess.

M-G-M

The president fishing, Miss Earhart in New York, a picture record of Nobile's Arctic disaster, rocket car exploding, and the record crowd at the Grand Prix in Paris were some of the shots in Vol. I No. 94 of M-G-M News. Included also were the women's Olympic tryouts, canoeists shooting a waterfall, and pigeons in race from Rome.

Tunney and Heeney in training, Britain's mammoth airplane, Helen Wills, thousands at Coney Island, the Pacific fliers warmly welcomed in San Francisco, French riding cadets in spectacular drills, daredevil going over the Niagara Falls inside a rubber ball, and the U. S. athletes battling for a place on the Olympic team were in No. 95.

International

The Grand Prix in France, President Coolidge's fishing prowess, pictures of General Nobile's disastrous Polar flight, racing greyhounds at Tia Juana, girl athletes in final Olympic trials, Miss Earhart in New York, and the feat of young daredevil in Oregon who plunges over 184-foot falls in a frail canoe made up International News No. 54.

"Ride 'Em Cowboy"
(Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL TERRY uses a comedy take-off on the old Western train robbery gag, to supply the fun in this animated cartoon. The release is good and up to standard.

The Fable story this time opens on Milton Mouse's wedding day, and the happy Milt is seen riding jauntily along to collect his bride. The pair hie themselves to the Justice of Peace, where they are knotted, and then board a fast flyer for their honeymoon, taking with them the good steed Horace. As the crack express speeds through the mountain wilderness, two daring bandits stage a holdup and kidnap Milton's spouse. Milt and Horace set out in hot pursuit, and finally with the aid of Horace's trusty heels the outlaws are beaten into submission, and happiness restored to the newlyweds.——GEORGE J. REDDY.

"The Huntsman"
(Pathe—One Reel)

ALTHOUGH this Aesop Fable offering does not feature anything new in animated "gags," it is in keeping with the usual Paul Terry style of good filler entertainment, and will draw the chuckles.

Old Farmer Al goes wild game hunting, and instead of shooting his first jungle customer, a disabled lion, he befriends the beast. After many adventures with monkeys, squirrels and a bear, the farmer encounters a nasty wild hog. Al screams for help and the lion comes to his rescue. The lion and the hog wage a battle inside a cave, from which Leo emerges the victor. Al fades out of the picture on the back of his rescuer.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Leaping Luck"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ONE of those downright nutty comedies in which almost every one is crazy, this Mermaid bids fair to win the grins and chuckles. So goofy are the events that there is no doubt of its ability to arouse and satisfy the universal urge to laugh. Monty Collins and George Daffy are the co-starring team working fast and furiously and getting in laugh results in a generous measure. At times, though, their gags are of mummified visage, as in the latter half of the comedy where, instead of the old studio lions running about the scenery terrifying everyone in sight, you have several crocodiles providing the terror.

Collins is a gob and Davis a marine. They cut up a bit aboard ship, some good laughs being the result, but then their scene of action is submerged in a regular studio atmosphere of dark and mysterious caverns, crocodile dens, the hidden temple of some fanatical sect. The boys land on a mysterious isle to search for the survivors of a missing yacht and they fall into the hands of the islanders. The rest is a regular rigmarole, a hodge-podge of slapstick, vaudeville falls. Crude but effective.

Beauteous Estelle Bradley is seen as the fair captive of the islanders. Other supporting players are Ray Turner and Philip Sleeman. Stephen Roberts did the directing and Dwight Warren cranked the cameras.

"He Tried to Please"
(Educational—One Reel)

HAND this Cameo a rich bouquet of creditable adjectives. It deserves them. Nice comedy all the way through, fast action, excellent trouping, a fine fun flavor—many are the virtues of this little number. They tapped the barrel of humor and made a good job of it.

The versatile Monty Collins is the starring player and pretty Lucille Hutton is the girl. These two play the roles of man and wife—a young couple preparing a dinner for expected guests. Their temperamental cook having quit, they are hard put to do culinary work. Everything goes wrong and hubby's and wifie's nerves become sadly frayed. Monty's heroic efforts to prepare the meal show that young comedian as clever and competent and steadily enlargening his bag of tricks.

Harry Sweet directed and Jack Lloyd is the only supporting player. Sweet, responsible for some of the best Cameos recently produced, has fashioned very well indeed.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Conquering the Colorado"
(Educational—Two Reels)

EXCERPTS from the film record of a successful expedition along the length of the Colorado River make of this Hodge-Podge number a very enjoyable ten minutes or so. Described as "the world's most dangerous river," the pictures of the turbulent stream give every assurance as to the truth of this statement. The Colorado sweeps forward wildly and unchecked, a dangerous death-dealing stream whose more than 600 rapids and thousands of jagged rocks projecting in mid stream offer every hindrance to those who would successfully navigate it. Some of the pictures were taken from the shore and others from the boat itself. These latter shots show the momentum of the river, its wicked speed and overwhelming strength.

The expedition, whose adventures are caught here, is that of Clyde L. Eddy. His party launched their three ships at Needles, Utah, and after 758 perilous miles, finished successfully at Needles, Cal. It is an adventure to travel along with them via the camera.

An exceptional short and one of the best from the Lyman H. Howe Studios.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Central Penn

NOTWITHSTANDING much unemployment in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania during the past winter and spring, the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of Shamokin controlling a big chain of theatres in the anthracite belt, was able to announce on July 5, that for the fifty-eighth successive time quarterly dividend checks were mailed to the shareholders of the corporation, on the seven per cent profits-participating preferred stock. Motion picture theatre owners of Pennsylvania view with satisfaction the action of the mayors of at least three cities who have banned the holding of marathon dancing contests, which constitute a source of serious competition with the theatres in some sections. Mayor T. L. Blair, of Oil City, turned down two requests for permits for the holding of "Bunion Derbies" in his city, and a like number of similar requests were quashed by Mayor C. O. Morris, of Kittanning. The mayor of Leechburg likewise refused to sanction the marathons.

Ritter, president of the Second National Bank. The purchase was made through M. A. Reinsmith, real estate dealer, for the Hamilton Realty Company. The building is forty feet wide by 170 feet deep and while the purchase price was not divulged it is understood to have been about $5,000 or $6,000 a front foot.

The interior is to be rebuilt, redecorated and refurnished throughout. New Carpets and tapestries will be provided and modern folding theatre chairs installed. There will be a rearrangement of the lighting fixtures and the front of the building will be repainted and redecorated.

R. A. Steele, of Carlisle, who recently sold the Strand theatre there to the Comerford chain, spent the Fourth of July in Chambersburg where he formerly owned the Rosedale theatre which he sold a year or so ago to Luke Gring. He was accompanied on the trip by his son, Robert whom the Comerford interests have retained as manager of the Carlisle Strand.

The Ezra F. Griffin Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Scranton, passed a resolution thanking M. E. Comerford, head of the Comerford chain of theatres, for courtesies extended to the Civil War veterans during the recent encampment of the Pennsylvania Department of the G. A. R. held in Scranton.

Pittsburgh

FIRE, of undetermined origin, completely destroyed the Cameo theatre building in downtown Pittsburgh, early in the morning of July 4th. The fire originated on the third floor of the building, which was an old six-story structure. The Cameo, a 900-seat theatre, owned by Universal, had recently given up first run showings and turned to the policy of grind runs with daily change. Rowland Lee Barton, manager of the house, has been instructed to stay on the job until further notice, but no information regarding amount of the damages, or as to whether the house will be rebuilt were forthcoming from Universal.

This stunt is to invite the public into his lobby to cool off from the heat on the street. People take advantage of the offer and stand around in the lobby looking at the announcements and the pictures. While cooling off, they are learning what the future attractions at the Allen will be. Many are intrigued into buying tickets and going into the theatre to enjoy more cool breezes. Manager Haynes used this stunt last summer with great success. The pictures were "Partners in Crime," which was to have been opened at the Palace on Saturday, "Walking Back," which was billed at the Capitol, and the Vitaphone short, "The Foreigner," which was to have been shown at the Melba. The picture "Walking Back" was censored on the grounds of objectionable sex morality. The Liberty, which was managed by Samuel Carver, is the second oldest first run house in Kansas City. The Liberty, while having a cooling system, did not have the modern equipment with which to combat the intensive heat which has prevailed in the last two weeks.

Negotiations for the Grubel Brothers theatrical properties with a national theatrical syndicate, involving a total of $1,500,000, has become known in Kansas City and admitted by the parties interested, although details are being withheld. When the plans, which are said to be nearing completion, are announced it will mean a new theatre for Kansas City, Kansas, costing approximately $200,000, and the "re-vamping" of the Electric theatre, owned by Grubel Brothers in Kansas City, Kansas, for combined vaudeville and first run pictures. The deal includes theatres in Kansas City, Kas.; Joplin, Mo.; Springfield, Mo.; and St. Joseph, Mo. Under the proposed plan it will mean that Kansas City, Kansas, will be on a national vaudeville circuit, something it never has had, despite the fact that the city has a population of 125,000.

Edward J. Grubel, president of the Electric Theatre Co., and Frank C. Grubel, his brother, reported the deal had been under consideration several months, but they said they were not at liberty to divulge the name of the theatrical circuit involved. Under the proposed plans the Grubels may maintain part interest and continue management of the houses, but under different standards from which they are now operated.

The new theatre, the Grubel brothers said, would be on one of three sites between Seventh and Tenth streets on Minnesota avenue. Strange things happen in front of the box office of a theatre as well as in the scenarios of a film.

Just twenty years ago Mr. and Mrs. H. Wagner opened the Bijou theatre in Lamar, Mo. It was then that James Gregory, a citizen, bought the first ticket. The other day the theatre was sold to A. J. Simmons and Thomas Edwards. When the house was opened twenty years ago the picture was "A Voyage Around the Stars." Oddly enough, on the closing night last week that same picture was selected as the closing picture for Mr. and Mrs. Wagner. Then came the coincidence. The last person to buy a ticket to see the picture was the same James Gregory, who had seen it twenty years previous.

The exhibitors contend that their houses were opened in compliance to an insistent public demand, and to meet competition from nearby cities where Sunday performances are maintained. Snell Renews Contract

The contract of Earle Snell, staff writer of Universal's scenario department, has been renewed for another long period. As a reward for his continuous two years' service, which is longer than that of any other of Universal's contract writers, Snell is also being given three weeks vacation.

For the past year Snell has been specializing in stories for Reginald Denny, including the original "On Your Toes," and the continuities of "That's My Daddy," and Denny's current starring vehicle, "The Man Disturber."

10 M-G-M Films in Work

Ten pictures are in various degrees of production at the M-G-M Culver City studio. They are: "A Little Angel," starring Norma Shearer; "West of Zanzibar," with Lon Chaney; "The Mask of the Devil," featuring Jack Gilbert; "War in the Dark," with Greta Garbo; "A Single Man," co-starring Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle; "Excess Baggage," with William Haines; "The Cameraman," featuring Buster Keaton; "Her Cardboard Lover," with Marion Davies; "Morgan's Last Raid," a new Tim McCoy vehicle; "Brotherly Love," co-featuring Karl Dane and George K. Arthur.

Seiter and LeRoy

William A. Seiter has been assigned the direction of Corinne Griffith in "Outcast," on which preliminary work has already been started by First National.

Mervyn LeRoy, youthful director, will again direct Alice White, this time in "Bluffers," her second feature vehicle of the year.

Cameras

A battery of 38 cameras were concentrated on the naval battle scenes of the First National special, "The Divine Lady," when the celluloid version of the famous Battle of Trafalgar was enacted under the direction of Frank Lloyd. The numerous cameras included electrically automatic machines stationed in different ships of the English and French fleets.

Born in Canada

John S. Robertson, one of the foremost directors of motion pictures, was born in London, Ontario, Canada. He began his successful stage career with two years in stock and after becoming a star and matinee idol was forced, by ill health, to refrain from constant traveling. However, it appears that his temporary misfortune was a blessing in disguise, for only because of his inability to continue on the road, did the actor seek an engagement which would permit him to locate permanently. He sought a directorial assignment and got it. Gradually, his talent in directing developed with the growth of the industry and today he is unquestionably a permanent success as the long list of box office successes to his credit illustrate.

Josephine Lovette, in private life, Mrs. John S. Robertson, is eminently successful as a writer as her husband is a director and practically all of the adaptations for photoplay productions assigned him, have been prepared for the screen by her. Among John S. Robertson's outstanding successes are "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," "Annie Laurie," "Captain Salvation," "Classmates," "Shore Leave" and score of others.

More than twenty years ago, Robert F. Hill, born in Port Rohen, Ontario, Canada, started his professional career which eventually landed him as a director of motion pictures, in the somewhat lowly capacity of dresser for Vaughn Glazer. Glazer, at that time, was star of a stock company. Seven years later, Robert F. Hill was Glazer's stage manager and an actor of importance in his company and during all these years Bob had spent his spare time writing. He was ambitious to write plays and stories. He did—and succeeded in marketing many of his wares and his talent in this line served to introduce him into the production end of motion pictures wherein he has become a director of prominence. It was Robert F. Hill who wrote and directed "The Adventures of Tarzan," and he was the author, also, of "Almost a Husband." Others to his credit are "Water, Water, Everywhere," "Jubilo," "Upstairs," and "Doctors Disagree." He directed such photoplays as "Robinson Crusoe," "The Radio King," "The Social Buccaneer," "Jack o' Clubs," "Crooked Alley," "The Dangerous Blonde," and many others, including "Blake of Scotland Yard," and "Silks and Saddles." Bob Hill is conceded as a permanent fixture at Universal Studios. Except for a contract with Pathe, which separated him from his studio home several months, he has been with Universal consistently.

THE PACE THAT THRILLS

Yesterday, the auto. Today, radio and airplanes. Tomorrow—who knows what? Travel by rockets? Conversation with Mars? Whatever it is, it will be faster. Don't call it the pace that kills. It is the pace that gives life. It makes our lives better, fuller than any before in the world's history, because it stimulates us to pack every minute with action! The entertainment you offer your patrons must keep pace with the times. No wasted moments! They want speed, action in their play and entertainment as well as in their work. To please them now, of course, your show must be quick-moving, snappy, exhilarating. And you may be sure that it will be if you build a show that has plenty of good short novelty, comedy and news subjects selected from the Educational Pictures line-up. Because a Short Feature HAS to be crammed with action, and HAS to reach the highest level of entertainment quality, to carry the Educational trade mark. You know what fun Lupino Lane, "Big Boy" and the other popular Educational Pictures comedy stars add to your program. Their pictures for the new season are faster, funnier. And typical of what Educational has in store for your box-office are the new "Russ Farrell, Aviator" pictures with Reed Howes. Watch for these flying thrillers. There's speed, action, excitement for you! Don't forget that Educational is the world's greatest producer-distributor of Short Features; the only big company dealing exclusively in this type of entertainment. Educational Pictures always make a good show better.

THE Pathé Rooster is the most widely known trade-mark in the world.

For more than a quarter of a century this bird has heralded deluxe entertainment in motion picture houses everywhere within the boundaries of civilization.

Millions upon millions of theatre-goers have seen this proud Pathé Rooster strut his stuff in the titles that precede Pathé pictures of every type.

No trademark of any organization has been seen by so many eyes. No trademark has registered so forcibly and no trademark is more of a guarantee to the public of satisfaction in the merchandise it represents.

This Pathé trademark has feathered the nests of more showmen than any other screen symbol.

HERE'S a publicity tie-up and ready-made audience that means dollars at your box-office. "Smitty and His Pals" are seen daily in the New York Daily News, Chicago Tribune and 50 other great newspapers throughout the country. Interpreted on the screen by a gang of real, lovable kid actors.

Why does Pathé crash the publicity barriers?

Here's the Answer-

PATHÉ has the merchandise. Pathé has the stars, the directors, the studios and pictures. It's Pathé's year. The whole country is talking about "The King of Kings", the most publicized film drama in all history. "The Godless Girl" has aroused wide comment even before its release. "The Red Mark", "The Cop", "A Ship Comes In", "Tenth Avenue" and two score of other super features have so many noteworthy ingredients that they stand out from the common run of pictures like a lighthouse in the fog. Names like Grantland Rice, Mack Sennett are constantly before the public in various mediums. The Sennett bathing beauty is an American institution and more space is devoted to her than to any other star. The coming Pathé stars like Phyllis Haver, Lina Basquette, Jeanette Loff, Sue Carol, Robert Armstrong, George Duryea, Eddie Quillan and John Mack Brown are good newspaper "copy". There are no more popular stars than William Boyd, Rod LaRocque, Leatrice Joy, Marie Prevost and Jacqueline Logan. The press always recognizes and appreciates leadership and Pathé has jumped the field this season—Pathé is out ahead going strong, and editors see real news in its activities.

UNIVERSAL Serves 10,327 Exhibitors Every Week!

No. 595—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

MORE THAN TEN THOUSAND EXHIBITORS IN THE UNITED STATES and Canada get their pictures—all or part of them—from the Universal every week! To be exact—10,327.

NEARLY A THIRD OF THIS VAST ARMY OF THEATRES USES EVERYTHING UNIVERSAL RELEASES!

TO KEEP THESE THOUSANDS OF THEATRES SUPPLIED, OUR EXchanges in the United States and Canada carry over 161,000,000 feet of positive film. And to this we add every week the steady flow of 2,400,000 feet of new positive prints.

NEARLY 900 EXPERTS GIVE ALL THEIR TIME TO THE SHIPPING AND inspecting of these miles and miles of film—that it may reach our customers on time and in good condition. They inspect and ship 79,426 reels of film every week!

WHILE THE FILM IS INACTIVE IT IS STORED IN 110 FIRE-PROOF vaults in all parts of the country.

I COULD GIVE YOU OTHER INTERESTING STATISTICS, BUT THESE will be enough to show you what a vast machine has been geared up to handle your business.

THE AMAZING FEATURE OF THIS STORY IS THE FACT THAT although more than ten thousand customers are taken care of every week; and although more than 79,000 reels of film are inspected and shipped every week; and although millions of pieces of advertising accessories are delivered to our thousands of customers —the mistakes are so few as to be almost unworthy of notice.

THIS SAME EXPERTNESS, THIS SAME EXACTING CARE IS EXERCISED BY UNIVERSAL OFFICES IN EVERY OTHER CIVILIZED PART OF THE WORLD. DELIVERIES OF GOOD PICTURES ARE PROMPT AND IN GOOD ORDER IN SPITE OF THE FACT THAT WE HAVE TO USE EVERY KNOWN FORM OF TRANSPORTATION INCLUDING RAILROADS, AUTOMOBILES, AIRPLANES, HORSES, CAMELS, WHEELBARROWS, AND EVEN THE STURDY SHOULDERS OF HUMAN RUNNERS.

WHILE THIS TREMENDOUS AND INTRICATE MACHINE IS PERFORMING its functions 24 hours of every day, the Universal studios—by far the largest and best equipped in the world—are feeding it its needed supply of fine pictures of every type and length and description, from the mightiest of super-productions down to the one-reel comedy.

IF YOU ARE NOT A MEMBER OF THIS FAR-REACHING FAMILY, WHY don't you join it and partake of its strength?

An Innovation in Trade Paper Journalism

A Survey of Theatre Conditions by an Exhibitor

MOTION PICTURE NEWS takes pleasure in announcing that Charles E. Lewis, Editor of "The Manager's Round Table", is starting this week on a trip into the Middle West, where he will study exhibiting conditions first-hand.

His observations will be incorporated into a series of articles, written from the exhibitor viewpoint by an exhibitor. Particular attention will be given to the sound picture development as it affects all classes of theatres.

Exhibitor friends of Motion Picture News in the Middle West will, we know, be glad to welcome Mr. Lewis and co-operate with him in bringing to the attention of the whole industry the truth about theatre conditions, at this critical juncture in the history of the screen.

We believe this is the first time a trade paper has undertaken a survey through direct personal contact by an exhibitor with exhibitors.

For that reason, among others, we regard Mr. Lewis's trip as of great importance.

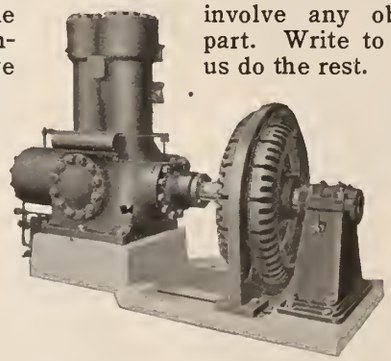
How many motion picture theatres shut down in summer?

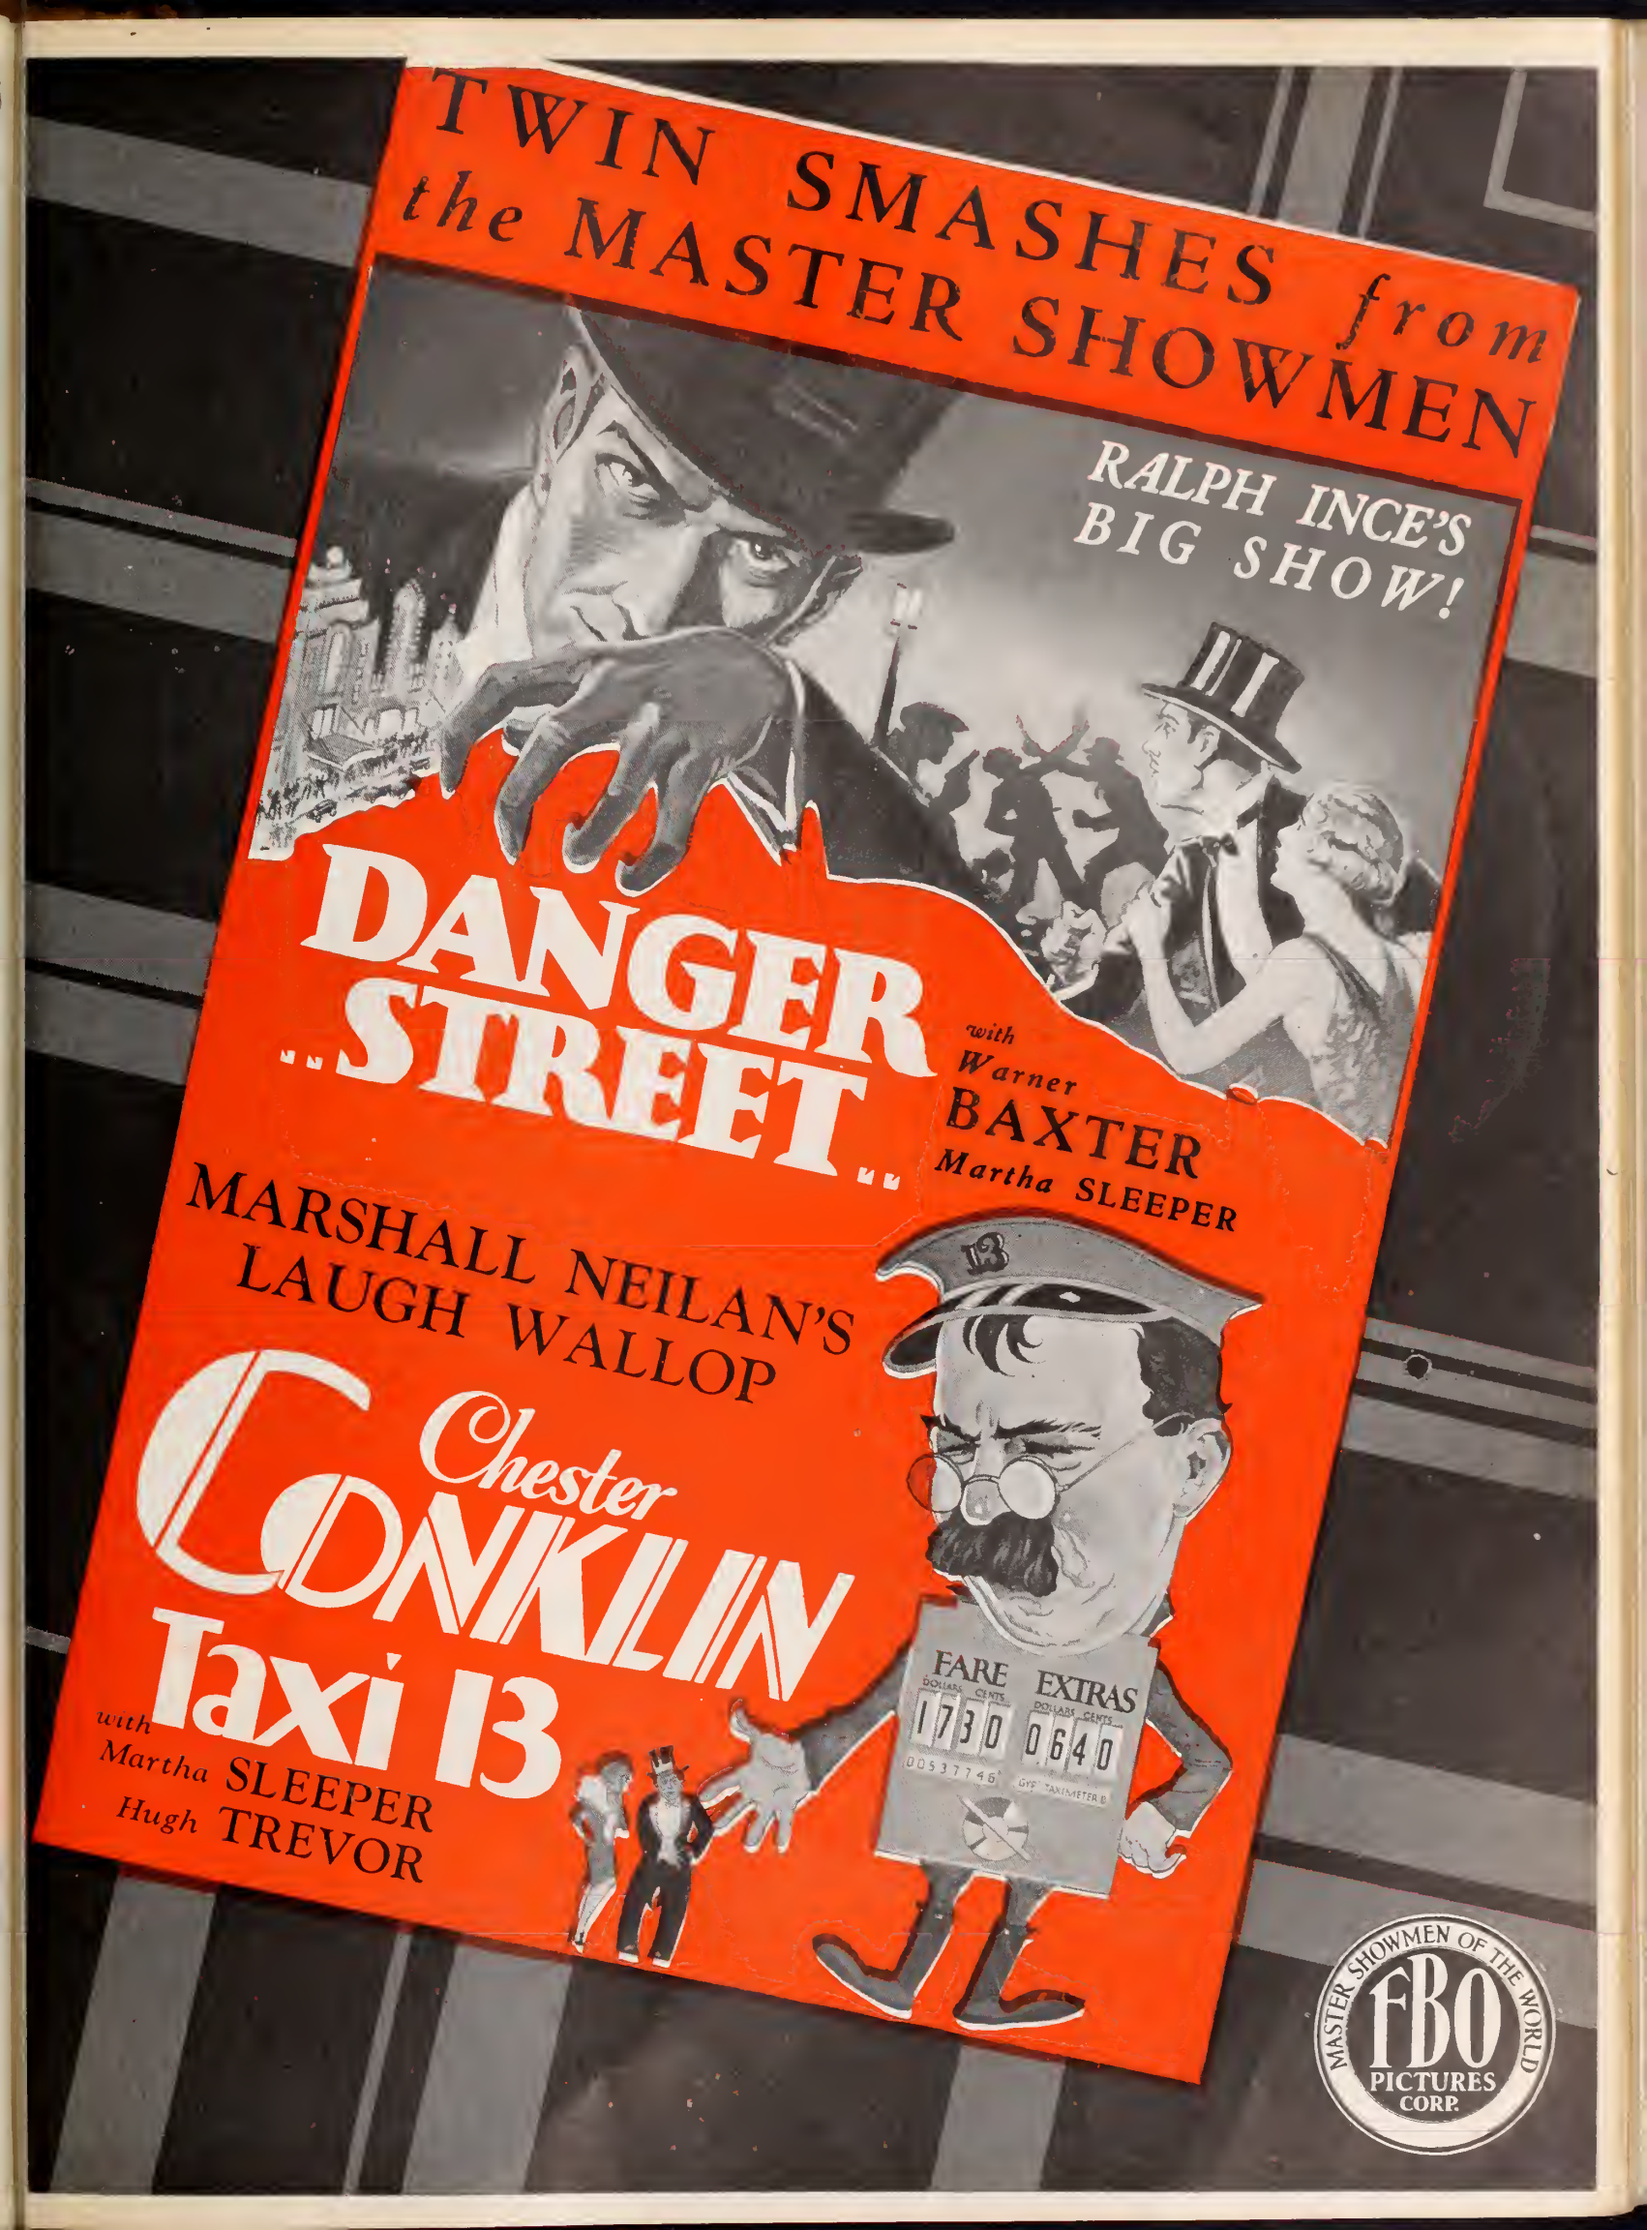


Earle Theatre, Philadelphia, Penna., is kept comfortable in hot weather by its YORK air-cooling equipment.

"Closed until September" is a sign which is becoming a less familiar sight as theatre owners are turning more to air-cooling and air-conditioning. On hot nights a cool, comfortable theatre is more tempting to a fan than a production featuring his favorite star.

There is one certain way to keep your house cool during the hottest weather. YORK air-cooling and air-conditioning equipment will do it—and do it economically, too. Many of the leading theatres throughout the country have turned to YORK for the answer to profitable summer operation.

The YORK engineering organization has had many years of experience in analyzing the requirements of various types of theatres and installing equipment that can be depended upon to keep the temperature down. We offer you the benefit of this long experience.



A YORK engineer will be glad to talk the matter over with you and such a consultation will not involve any obligation on your part. Write to us today, and let us do the rest.

The "Sound" Crisis

An Exhibitor's Pointed Query and Our Reply

By William A. Johnston

"I AM only a small town exhibitor," writes W. J. Powell in a notable letter in this issue; but, he adds, "it seems to me that the frantic scramble on the part of the leaders of our industry to get on the 'talkies' band wagon at the present time is writing into the history of the 'movies' the most ridiculous as well as the most serious situation thus far presented."

"Am I too pessimistic?" he concludes. "If so, what in your opinion will the next two years bring for the small town exhibitor?"

I am only an editor, Mr. Powell, but I cannot find myself in agreement with you on most any point.

And, just as I recommend your letter to the thoughtful leaders of the business, so do I put down here my own conception of the situation.

You say that it is inconceivable that a single picture—"The Jazz Singer"—should have so disrupted "a smooth running industry."

Singularly enough, a sales manager of one of the big companies made that same remark to me—and with a groan and a curse. He doesn't like the upheaval any more than you do. Yet he admits that the sound pictures are here to stay; and somehow the situation with all its glaring abstacles must be faced, and faced by showmen.

"The Jazz Singer" was such a sensational success that it caught the industry at large unprepared. Hence the hysteria. And it is hysteria. But with it all, and with all the headaches and the chaos immediately ahead of us, I am confident that as you look backward two years from now, your theatre investment will look better to you than it has heretofore as a part of a "smooth running" industry.

Whenever a show industry gets to be "smooth running" it is time to watch out. That's the big danger signal. It is the public you must consider, not the wheels of the show business itself. The legitimate was running most smoothly when the movies came along and wiped the road show business off the amusement map. Burlesque was running very smoothly when the loss was twenty-five thousand a week. Vaudeville was one of the most smoothly organized industries, so much so that dry rot set in.

It is only the public fancy that counts.

The movie business was decidedly better off when it was kicking and squealing with infant pains. For the past two years there had been downright apathy, deadly apathy, as compared with the booming past; I mean so far as concerns giving good entertainment to the public and telling the public it is good. The industry may have ordered itself within, but it forgot all about the public without. It went into Wall Street and then into committees of the whole for purposes of inner economy and various agreements. It built theatres, too big and too many for its own entertainment appeal and then proceeded to chain them up as though they sold groceries at bargain prices. And, in general, it devoted itself to making or saving dollars regardless of making entertainment.

But what has the public been getting?

Exhibitor after exhibitor has told me that until "The Jazz Singer" came along, he did not have a single week's entertainment that rang the bell with his public loud enough for him to hear a tinkle.

Editorial By Willliam A. Johnston

For fifteen years the American public has been looking at flat surface black and white silent pictures. Out of an annual output of some eight hundred features a score or less of definite box office successes appeared and were then taken out of the program for Broadway runs. That's just what the legitimate producers did; concentrated on Broadway and let the road show business get what goods were left. And that was the movies' great opportunity.

But is it conceivable that the public should go on forever paying to see standardized black and white pictures?

No. And the public did not.

Two years ago it became evident that the big palaces with their first run prices would have to add something to their program movies. So we reverted to the stage we had so successfully licked and gathered in vaudeville, bands, jazz leaders, big names—personalities and music, in other words to add to the declining realism and vitality of the silent film.

And now we have these same elements coming out of the film itself!

The sound movie! The first real, definite technical improvement in the motion picture since it was born.

The processes are crude—now. It is the novelty of the thing, the amazing novelty, that is packing the people in. It's new, like the movies were once new. And mysterious. It's an illusion!

Next, and quickly, we must have realism. We call it quality. The realism of music, of the human voice, of the human figure with natural color and depth. And these improvements, I am confident, will come.

Then there's the story, the lines, the stage technic. As Robert Sherwood well says: the films are now talking. But the question is: what will they say?

You are right when you say "The Jazz Singer" is not a "talkie." But you are wrong, I believe, in your criticism of "Tenderloin" and "The Lion and the Mouse." To me, as one of the public, the voice and acting of Lionel Barrymore was masterful and enthralling. It carried the entertainment just as the big scene has made great many an otherwise doubtful picture.

It is idle, I think, to criticize these first efforts, when the public is knocking on the door, Let's criticize to help, if we can, the producers.

As for your fear that the talkies will either monopolize or eliminate the present box office stars, please read the review of the Hollywood situation by Edwin Schallert, in this issue. It is a clear cut appraisal and the best of its kind to date.

Now as to the "small town" exhibitor and the sound picture, I agree with you that the first run will grab off the installation and attractions. At first they will. But consider also this salient fact: the sound picture is going to bring to you in the film what the first run formerly had on the stage and in the orchestra pit, namely music, acts, personalities, etc. In other words, all the dressing of the picture show, whereas you had only the picture show. It would seem to me that the big city theatre is the one to worry over the sound movie. And that's the opinion of a few of the shrewdest observers here in New York. They contend that the sound movie will prove the salvation of the smaller theatres.

While all this is materializing, however, you cannot, as you say, hold your people if the silent drama is to be cheapened. You will need the very best attractions you can get. And also at this critical juncture the producer will need to sell his regular output of silent film as never before. It is a crisis; no doubt about that. And, for once, distributor and exhibitor ought to work together to help each other out. The plain fact is that silent pictures have got to be sold to the public. It's going to take advertising, ingenious effort, untiring zeal,—in other words, Showmanship. One thing is certain; a smooth running industry won't do it.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

BRUCE GALLUP having declined re-election as President of the A.M.P.A., despite the unanimous desire of the members that he continue in office, it seems appropriate at this time to call attention to the remarkable record made under his leadership.

The membership has been greatly increased; trade paper folk have joined as associate members; the annual dinner was a big success, handled as the occasion deserved; and, most important of all, the whole organization has been inspired with a new enthusiasm.

The new spirit of the A. M. P. A.—and it is unmistakable—is due to the simple fact that Gallup is a real leader, plus the whole hearted co-operation given him by his members. Leaders, of course, are intensely practical men, but they also have, and hold to, their ideals.

Bruce Gallup's ideal was, and is, to dignify the work of advertising and publicity men, and bring about its recognition as a profession in this industry. He has gone a long way toward achieving this end. He has shown rare courage, tremendous energy, and real insight in the handling of his task.

Nobody would claim that the goal has been entirely reached. It remains for his successor to carry on the good work. Of course, Mr. Gallup is to be active, as before. And this in itself is a happy augury for the future.

* * * *

IT is a fact, too, that recent years have seen a great improvement in the work of publicity men in the picture business. Almost without exception, they attend to their jobs in a workmanlike fashion. The results obtained in the publicizing of pictures to the public are too well-known to need enumeration here. Standards are higher, and the entente cordiale with such great news agencies as the Associated Press and the United Press is a matter of first rate importance. The chief difficulty in the way of still better work is the insistence of some film executives upon glorifying themselves in publicity copy at the expense of real news. There is still too much of this sort of thing; but the wise and able publicity man is in no way to blame for it, and knows, as well as anybody else, that the waste basket yawns deep and wide for bunk.

THE Voice of the Public, speaking through Grant Showerman, in the Portland (Ore.) "Journal": "The public is usually compared to a 16-year old when it does not appreciate some particular play, book, or movie. The insinuation in the comment always is that the public is a boob; the fact being that the public knows its onions so well that it is not moved to patronize mediocrity.

"Portland knows a good show and will patronize it; but first Portland must know beyond doubt that it is a good show—then watch the purse strings dangle. Every honestly deserving show, legitimate or movie, which the writer can remember has been liberally patronized in Portland.

"It is true that some less praiseworthy shows have been well patronized, but only because Portland was desperate for entertainment, and hoped for the best. There is a minor element in the city which follows particular stars, but these are not in sufficient number to assure a profitable showing."

ACCORDING to Frederick Zelnik, director of First National German productions, the recent American financing of the German film industry has resulted in an intensifying of German production activity, with the products given a better place on the world market, and also the exchange of goods and ideas to the ultimate benefit of the financial situation.

"German films react upon the various industries which supply articles necessitated in every-day life," he said. "The intensive activities of our film industry react favorably upon our general economical position, and since this intensive activity has been advanced by these American means it is but an easy conclusion that the American financing of the German film industry had its influence upon the whole general situation in Germany.

"So far as the actual results of German-American cooperation go the first results were looked at with a certain pessimism. The problem developed at that time has now been solved favorably, and the facts established during this period have justified the co-operative measures.

"A certain fear that through the American influence German film production would go down to a cheap level, that we would produce the so-called contingent films only, has not come true. For this we have to thank the heads of the German industry, who, even under severe financial strain, developed the necessary ambition. In their efforts, however, they have been ably assisted by the American financier, who realized in time that it would only pay to make contingent films which could also be placed successfully on the international market. Efforts were made to secure the widest possible sale for pictures made with simple means and without much expense. We know now that these efforts have been successful. It could be proven that the high amount put into the production of a film does not have any influence upon its marketability.

UNIVERSAL has a most unusual serial in "Tarzan the Mighty," which was previewed at the home office of the company this week.

It is a combination jungle picture and serial thriller and because of that should hold more than the usual of audience interest. To those who care for serials it promises thrills in abundance. To those who are not partial to the serial it offers rare picture values with some exceptional shots of wild animals in their native habitat.

And these wild animals dominated by Tarzan as their king are as individually a part of the story as are the humans of the cast. It is all so out of the ordinary that it should carry as much appeal as the quality feature pictures.

Billy Dooley exudes goofiness in Paramount-Christie comedies. He is one of the few experts in the art of being silly. He's never serious, for which statement the above picture will vouch

Pretty girls are a powerful magnet. And you must admit these girls have attractive knees. They are Amber Norman and Muriel Evans and they appear in Educational comedies

Great naval battles will be a feature of "The Divine Lady," the First National special in which Lord Nelson figures. The scene above depicts activity during the battle of Trafalgar

Billy the Kid—as posed by little Sunny McKeen. He's not a bad gunman and perhaps Universal can borrow him from Stern Bros. for featured western parts. This young chap is still working industriously as the lovable Snookums

A new Latin makes a gesture towards stardom. She is Raquel Torres, whose first big part is in M-G-M's "White Shadows of the South Seas"

Frank Capra's youthful talents have won him the Columbia assignments to direct "It Is to Laugh" and "The Younger Generation." They should boost his stock

Monte Blue, Warner Bros. star, returns from a European trip to make his first Vitaphone special. It will be called "Conquest" and will also have H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson in featured roles

Buck Jones turned aviator for "The Big Hop," his first independent production. Here he is seen with Mrs. Jones and Dick Grace, who appeared in an air circus sequence in connection with the picture

Johnnie Walker, star, and Nat Levine, producer of "Vultures of the Sea," a Mascot serial of the briny. It will be ready for release in September

A chain of circumstances seems to be hesitating here. If—Neil Hamilton clouts Dick Arlen with the gloves, he, in turn, will precipitate a knock from Charles Rogers. Wonder how it ended?

Coast Analysis of Situation in "Sound" Field

Critical Survey of Exactly What Is Happening and What May Be Expected in Production Center

By EDWIN SCHALLERT

[Copyright, 1928, by Motion Picture News, Inc.]

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—First—Musical accompaniments. Second—Sound effects. Third—Talking pictures. This is the order of progress as outlined for synchronized motion pictures. I have just finished a survey of conditions in the revolutionizing innovation in movie entertainment at the various studios—and these are the findings. It might be added that short subjects will receive primary attention.

Much has been said haphazardly about the "talkie" situation in the studios, and many half-baked opinions have been expressed both inside and outside the industry. It is perhaps time for some clarification of the exact status of this turn of affairs whose effect is pervading all branches of the film business.

I have talked to nearly every producer regarding the present position and probable advance in the use of the various devices within the next six to twelve months. The general sentiment is that progress can only be made slowly. The first and most serious problem faced is distribution. That remains definitely an obstacle toward sweeping and immediate changes, such as have occasionally been forecast, though the changes in prospect will be marked enough. It particularly precludes for the time being any superabundance of all-talking productions. They will be made, of course, but only experimentally.

However, installations are going ahead rapidly, and will acquire increasing momentum. General opinion is that 1,000 theatres will be provided with reproducing apparatus for sound films by the first of the New Year. There are a few who are inclined to believe that this figure will be attained much earlier. At present, equipment is going in at the rate of about 125 theatres monthly. That is the way the thing is geared up.

Problems to Be Met

There are other physical problems to be met. First of all, stages must be constructed. For all the hullaballoo, there is only one company that has such stages in operation—Warner Brothers. The Fox Film Corporation is bringing theirs to completion. They have, of course, been making short films in the open-air, and very successfully, judging from the initial instance of "The Family Picnic," which is enjoying acclaim.

There is, in addition to the western activity, the eastern synchronizations—a field in itself. This is mainly devoted to accompaniments and short subjects. In Hollywood it is regarded as a temporary phase, and subsidiary to the main issue of feature-length films.

As to stages—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is building. Paramount already has an establishment for experiments, and is arranging for further construction. The Fox stages, two in number, will probably be in use within a month or so. An interesting feature of them is that they are pentagonal in design. The form chosen is based on certain acoustic considerations, elimination of possible echoes in large scenes, and control of sound, particularly its modulation.

First National's sound future will be settled during the vist of Joseph P. Kennedy. Their tie-up with the Victor Talking Machine concern presents important aspects, as growing out of this may come a record-handling plant in Hollywood. Shipments have in the past been made to Oakland, Calif., 400 miles away the nearest complete plant equipped to turn out finished discs. Warner Brothers will have one of these plants independently.

United Artists' stage is under way. All musical accompaniments for this organization's film are to be made there in the future. Hugo Riesenfeld will supervise this operation. Meanwhile, he is in New York synchronizing "Two Lovers" and "The Tempest." Until the stage is completed a few other synchronizations may be made in the East.

Riesenfeld told me just prior to his departure that he considers it far more satisfactory to work on the musical score while the picture is actually in the filming. "It will be possible in this way to get the feeling of a production," he said. "Scoring is nowadays more or less a matter of scratching one's head and trying to think up something suitable to fit the occasion. It is far from an inspirational system of working."

Dialogue a Form of Close-Up

Samuel Goldwyn expresses the belief that many original scores will be used in the future. "The best musicians in the world will be attracted to Hollywood," he declared. "They will compose directly for the screen."

Goldwyn does not believe in the early development of all-talking films. "I consider the spoken word to be chiefly a new form of close-up, and like any close-up it must be used with much discretion," he said. "I see a great field for talk-recording in the short subjects. I believe that it is going to give new life to the two-reel comedy."

It is interesting to note that the plans of the Christie company are already formulated for the building of two stages at the Metropolitan studios. These will probably be used not only for their own pictures, but on a rental basis for the assistance of other units. In view of the fact that Harold Lloyd works at the Metropolitan it is probable that sound effects in his films will be made in the Christie establishment, on account of their mutual release through the Paramount company. Harold is known to have a vital interest in the new development.

Sound and Talkie Films Break Records at N. Y. Houses

THE talkie and sound pictures have sent box office grosses sky-high at the Paramount and Strand theatres in New York City. At the Paramount, Richard Dix has been seen in "Warming Up," a feature with synchronized music and sound effects, while at the Strand the attraction is "Lights of New York," Warners' first all-talkie picture.

Whether it is because of the novelty of the all-talkie or the actual popularity of a picture of this type, the fact remains that the Strand has not experienced such business in a long, long time as that done at the box-office last week, the first for this Warner feature. The gross for the week ending last Friday is said to have been approximately $50,000.

This would be considerd remarkable business at any time of the year for the Strand, but last week it was accomplished under the most distressing conditions. Not only is the vacation period at its height, but excessive heat and rain prevailed throughout the first seven days of the showing. The picture was retained for a second week with indications that there would be little if any falling off in receipts.

"Warming Up" is Paramount's first feature picture with sound accompaniment and it is reported to have broken all existing week-end records for this popular house over the past week-end. The gross for Saturday and Sunday, including midnight performances, which are a regular feature, is reported to have been $30,861. This total is said to exceed the former record for similar performances by about $900.

This Paramount feature has no dialogue, but it has sound effects incidental to the playing of a world series baseball game, and such other effects as are necessary. Business is reported exceptionally good at the Paramount for the first days of the current week.

Skouras Expanding Activities Into Kansas and Missouri

THE Skouras Brothers circuit of theatres is being expanded. Deals are under way, it is said, to expand the number of theatres in Missouri and Kansas. Negotiations for a chain now operating throughout Missouri is now about completed, it is reported. The Skouras interests are now operating the Robert Lieber theatres in Indianapolis and further moves are reported in progress to complete the chain between that city and St. Louis, where the bulk of the Skouras houses are located. Skouras holdings will be tri-state in scope, it is thought, and will embrace Indiana, Kansas and Missouri.

Ohio Exhibitor Given Stay Against Board of Trade

Temporary Federal Injunction Restrains Cleveland Body from Enforcing Cash Deposit Clause

GEORGE SCHADE of Schade Theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, was granted a temporary injunction by Federal District Judge John Jones against the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland and fifteen distributor members of the board restraining them from enforcing the cash deposit clause of the standard exhibition contract. Schade in his petition charged conspiracy and restraint of trade, and further stated that he was denied the right under the arbitration clause, to seek legal remedy. In granting the temporary injunction, however, Judge Jones ruled that Schade pay cash upon delivery of the film delivered to him under the contracts referred to in his petition. The cash deposits demanded were approximately $8,000.00.

This injunction grew out of case against George Schade by United Artists. In a contract with United Artists for four pictures, Schade claims that he played three pictures at a substantial loss and refused to accept the fourth picture of the contract. He refused to pay for the second one which he had played. The United Artists Corporation cited him before the Joint Board of Arbitration for failure to pay for the one picture, and failure to accept the last one of the group, for which he had contracted.

Schade at all times refused to arbitrate the questions under dispute. He also refused to acknowledge the award made by the Joint Board of Arbitration. Thereupon the other members of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade with whom Schade had outstanding contracts sent him cash deposit letters. This, according to Schade's petition, was an act in conspiracy and in restraint of trade, inasmuch as he would have to close his theatre and suffer irreparable loss if he could not secure pictures to play at his theatre.

Schade has asked to have the injunction made permanent. Judge Jones has ruled that the hearing upon the order to make this injunction permanent must be upon affidavits and briefs by both parties.

It is expected that no hearing will be called for at least a month. Schade is represented by the law firm of Day and Day and Joseph Aekerman.

New Admission Tax Goes Into Effect

THE new admission tax exemption of $3.00 went into effect at midnight June 28, it has been announced by the treasury department in Washington, D. C. Under the new regulations just issued by the department, however, tickets sold by theatres prior to midnight, June 28 for more than 75c will be taxable under the 1926 act even though for performances to be held after that date.

As a result of the revenue act passed at the last session of Congress the exemption for admission is increased from 75c to $3.00 practically eliminating the motion picture industry as a source of this revenue.

Practical Perfection in Color Predicted

Within five years the screen will produce the closest possible imitation of human life; talking, natural-color, stereoscopic pictures, according to John Nickolaus, laboratory head at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, who discloses that for more than a year experiments in a new and improved color-process have been under way at the plant, with other experiments for adapting them to "talkies."

"The color picture," said Nickolaus, "is now close to the attainment of practical perfection. For more than a year we have been experimenting quietly here with a three-color process, and in the Eastman laboratories important developments of a similar process have been under way. The Technicolor process, a two-color system, has also been so improved that perfect correctness is practically assured."

H. J. Castle, Oklahoma Showman, Killed

Practically all of Oklahoma City's "film row" last Monday morning attended the funeral services of Harry F. Castle, whose sudden death July 6th was a great shock to his friends in Oklahoma City.

Mr. Castle has been director of the Majestic Amusement Company of Tulsa since 1912 and was probably one of the most widely known exhibitors in the territory.

He had been suffering from sinus trouble for several months and had gone to Kansas City to receive medical attention and had taken an apartment at the Hotel Ambassador. On Friday morning he had gone to the roof of the hotel alone to rest and before relatives could join him, he fell from the roof to the ground being killed instantly. Mrs. Castle, with their four year old daughter had just returned to Tulsa from Kansas City, leaving Mr. Castle's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Castle with Mr. Castle.

Fannie Hurst Collaborates on Plot of "Lummox"

Fannie Hurst, author of "Lummox," which director Herbert Brenon is about to bring to the screen as a United Artists production, has written her own version of the continuity of her story and has submitted it to the director. In the photoplay treatment 96 of the episodes in the book have been condensed to 42, it is said. Elizabeth Meehan and Brenon collaborated with the author in the treatment.

The director will soon cast the leading role of the hard-working Swedish girl. He has about finished with "The Rescue," another U. A. picture.

George Brown Joins W. B. Advertising Department

The latest addition to the advertising and publicity forces of Warner Bros. is George Brown, whose affiliation with the company was announced this week. Recently he has been associated with M-G-M and prior to that he was in charge of Universal advertising for seven years. He will handle advertising details for the new Warner Bros. schedule of productions.

St. Louis Threatened With Blue Law

ST. LOUIS is threatened with a strict enforcement of the existing ancient Sunday closing laws that have been permitted to remain dead letters for almost a century. The laws require that everything with the exception of drug stores must close on Sundays. Only domestic servants are permitted to work.

When Mayor Victor J. Miller last week vetoed a bill which would have permitted delicatessens to remain open all day Sunday, contending that the measure discriminated against other merchants, the delicatessen owners asserted that if the Sunday closing laws were strictly enforced against them they would insist that all other Sunday closing measures should be equally enforced. If necessary, they said, they would mandamus public officials to force them to proceed against Sundays shows, baseball and other amusements.

Reed Howes Working on First Aviator Film

The first of the Russ Farrell Aviator pictures is now in work in Hollywood. Reed Howes is starred, while Marjorie Daw is his leading lady and Tom Santschi is the menace. Others in the cast are Henry Barrows, Roy Stewart and Buck Black. This same cast will be used in the six pictures that will make up the first series and, with the possible exception of Santschi, will also be seen in the second series.

Lieutenant Earl Robinson, who was technical director of "Wings," is in charge of the technical work in the Russ Farrell series, in which air sequences will be featured prominently. Howes will perform his own flying stunts in the series, it is said. Thomson Burtis is reported to have his stories on the series in good shape now.

Rossheim Issues Report

Stanley Head Tells Stockholders of Company's Progress; Lists Circuit's Theatre Holdings

AT the annual meeting of the Stanley Company of America held at 11 o'clock last Monday morning in the offices of the organization in the Earle Theatre Building in Philadelphia, Irving D. Rossheim, president of the organization, declared in his report to the stockholders that a saving of $800,000 had been saved by means of the plan of reorganization now in operation. The greater part of the profits has been effective as of last May.

Mr. Rossheim's statement was chiefly a resume of his term as president, since the resignation of Mr. McGuirk. Among the topics he touched upon was the election of Waddill Catchings to the board of directors to fill the vacancy caused by the passing of George H. Earle. He also mentioned the fact of the Stanley company obtaining a large financial interest in First National, of which company he was last month elected president.

At the present time, Stanley is moving to list the company's stock on the New York stock exchange. The increased cost of doing business, he laid at the door of the reduction in dividends and their subsequent discontinuance. The increase in rental costs, as a result of contracts made in 1926 for the 1927-28 season, he termed as the chief item in the increase in business overhead. However, Rossheim stated that these onerous contracts will have been worked out by September and that the Stanley executives are now negotiating for their product for the new season on terms that will be favorable to the stockholders.

All pains are being taken said Mr. Rossheim, to effect economies in operation. Indications are he said, that the profits to date will not compare favorably with those of last year. With the better half of the year arriving and with the economies in operation proving effective, the coming of cooler weather, and improvement before the end of the year is expected, said Mr. Rossheim.

The theatres acquired since the last meeting either by fee or lease which are now being operated by Stanley were listed by Mr. Rossheim as follows:

Erlanger, Philadelphia; Wynne, Philadelphia; Kent, Philadelphia; Waverly, Aronomink, Pa.; Manor, Norwood, Pa.; State, Hartford, Conn.; Stanley, Baltimore, Md.; Stanley, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Roxy, Maple Shade, N. J.; Stanley, Jersey City; Central, Jersey City; National, Jersey City; Ritz, Jersey City; Lincoln, Union City, N. J.; Roosevelt, Union City; United States, Hoboken; De Witt, Bayonne, N. J.; Strand, Bayonne, N. J.; Opera House, Bayonne, N. J.; Butler, N. J.; Oxford, Little Falls, N. J.; Montclair, Montclair, N. J.; Wellmont, Montclair, N. J.; Bellevue, Montclair, N. J.

Under construction or alteration, preparatory to their operation by the Company, are:

Mastbaum, Philadelphia; State, Philadelphia; Circle, Frankford, Phila.; Commodore, Philadelphia; Sedgwick, Philadelphia; Uptown, Philadelphia; Metropolitan, Philadelphia; Opera House, Philadelphia; Embassy, East Liberty, Pa.; Stanley, Utica; Embassy, Atlantic City; Fabian, Hoboken; Stanley, Bridgeton; Villa, Collingdale, Pa.

Jannings Is Not Returning to Germany

Emil Jannings does not intend returning to Germany in the near future as he has issued a denial of recent reports to that effect. As an indication of his intention of remaining in the California city, he points out the fact that he has just taken a long term lease on his Hollywood home.

Profits of Loew's and M-G-M for 40-Week Period Show Increase

AN increase in the profits of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is shown in the statements of net profits of both companies.

Loew's, Inc., profits for the 40 weeks ending June 3, 1928, totaled $6.377,101 as compared with $5,404,899 for the same period in 1927 and $5.244,193 for the same period in 1926. According to these figures the current profits are $972,302 ahead of the figures of 1927 and $1,133,003 ahead of those of 1926. The current earnings are equivalent, after allowing for the dividend requirements on 150,000 shares of the new $6.50 preferred stock, to $5.64 a share earned on 1,060,925 no-par shares of common and compares with net profit of $5,404,899 or $5.09 per share in the corresponding period of previous year. A 25 per cent dividend in common has been paid on the common stock since the end of the 40 weeks' period.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's profits for the 12 weeks ending June 3 are $1,325,254, equal, after 7 per cent cumulative preferred dividends, to $2 per share on the 620,000 common shares outstanding. These figures compare with the $1,136,490 or $1.60 per share on the same common share basis in the same period of 1927.

The M-G-M current earnings compare with $1,136,490 for the same period of 1927, an increase for this year of $888,764.

Next M. P. T. O. A. Meet

Organization Decides on Toronto, Canada, as Scene of 1928 Gathering on October 16-18

THE 1928 Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held in Toronto, Canada on October 16th, 17th and 18th. This was decided at a meeting held at the King Edward Hotel July 17 in which the national officers of the organization participated. Those present at the meeting from the New York office were National President R. F. Woodhull, Executive Secretary M. J. O'Toole. The Canadian representatives included Regional Vice President J. C. Brady who is also President of the Canadian organization and several other Canadian leaders.

The vote of the National Board of Directors was practically unanimous for Toronto. Other cities considered were Philadelphia, St. Louis, Detroit and Buffalo. The decision to hold the convention in Toronto was arrived at largely because of the insistence of Canadian Theatre Owners, led by Mr. Brady, supplemented by the direct efforts of the Mayor of Toronto, the Board of Trade and other civic and fraternal bodies in that city. The matter of selecting a place for the Convention was left to the National Board of Directors at the last meeting in Columbus, Ohio in 1927 with the implied understanding that Toronto was to be given very favorable consideration.

Arrangements were perfected in Toronto, whereby the Canadian Theatre Owners will join forces with other motion picture interests there and also with the official and civic bodies. Special lines of entertainment will be provided and every effort exerted to add to the dignity and usefulness of the gathering. The Special Convention Committee of the National organization consists of the Administrative Committee members as follows: L. M. Sagal, M. E. Comerford, J. W. Walsh, Jack Miller, Jules Michael, William James and Nathan Yamins.

Members of the National Board of Directors and National Executive Committee are also auxiliary members of this Convention Committee and will have charge of the work of making arrangements for the same in their various localities.

Schulberg Coast Manager

AMONG the several Paramount West Coast studio executives who have been promoted is B. P. Schulberg, hitherto an "associate producer," but who now fills the seat of general manager of production on the coast. After a recent series of conferences in New York with Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent, Jesse Lasky and other home office officials, the raise in rank was awarded to Mr. Schulberg.

Other Paramount workers at the studio on the coast who have been advanced are B. P. Fineman, Louis D. Lighton, J. G. Bachmann, B. F. Ziedman and David O. Selznick, who now become associate producers instead of supervisors.

Roy Pomeroy has been made director of sound activities and will head the recently created studio sound department where he will supervise technical work on Paramount's program of sound pictures. Succeding him in charge of the department of special effects is Oren W. Roberts.

Will Offer Music Free of International Tax

WORLD WIDE MUSIC CORPORATION, headed by Irving Mills and located in New York City, announces that it will soon offer producers a music library which will be free of foreign copyright restrictions and which, when used, will be proof against the danger of lawsuits when the pictures are exhibited in Europe. The organization is said to have compiled a catalogue of orchestrated wroks to which has been added original compositions by composers engaged to produce exclusively through World Wide, it is announced. Negotiations are also reported to be in progress to secure world rights on popular numbers heretofore denied to motion picture scorers. When the work has been completed World Wide will guarantee universal domain on all numbers listed, assuming sole responsibility in the settlement of all claims, it is said.

In addition to the library service, World Wide is prepared to do scoring and synchronizing, the company states.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

60% of Players Have Stage Training

Talking pictures are the pre-eminent topic discussed in the colony. The opinion prevails among the executives that they are already giving new stimulus to the industry. The upward trend naturally will be gradual, because of its very fundamental character, but it is spelling psychological betterment.

The reaction among directors and players is perhaps less unanimous. At first, there was a marked sentiment against the innovation. It meant an overthrow of all set rules of procedure, and naturally also easy to understand this personal equation—particularly in Hollywood where hysteria on various topics is always imminent.

It may be said very definitely that the feeling is gradually changing. I would even go so far as putting it that the film colony is taking the talking revolution quite calmly; what has to be done to accommodate oneself to the change can be done; there is plenty of time to do it.

60% With Stage Experience

While comparatively few stars, for instance, are actually studying voice culture, the number is steadily increasing, the most significant thing of all is possibly that sixty per cent of all players may be accredited with some experience in the use of their voice in a professional way, for approximately that percentage have had stage experience.

Here, for instance, is a list drawn from some of the leading studios:

	Players with stage experience	Players with none
Paramount	24	13
M-G-M	23	11
First National	8	6
Fox	13	14
Universal	10	11
Pathe-De Mille	7	3
Total	85	58

The percentage of men with stage experience is greater than women by about 20.

Actors express a variety of views on the importance of voice and voice training in talking pictures. Lionel Barrymore, who has made one of the greatest sueeesses so far in "The Lion and the Mouse," is of the opinion that brains will go a lot farther than mere vocal flourishes. "More actors have been ruined by thinking about their voices on the stage than have ever succeeded," he said. "Consider our great attorneys—mental giants of law and brilliant in achievements. Most of them have mediocre voices, still they sway juries by the mentalities behind those voices—the gray matter in their noodles.

"Many old-time bartenders had the Chesterfieldian voice and manner of a Joseph Choate, the famous lawyer and diplomat, but inasmuch as they didn't have what was in Joseph Choate's head, they became soda boys when prohibition hit us.

"A voice that is not harmonious can be made so by the personality of the one using it. The success of the actor depends on his talent for drama and his interpretive faculty. This counts as much in the sound pictures as in the spoken drama."

Views of Players

Conrad Nagel, whose experience covers several different pictures, declares that "new players will have considerable work ahead of them in voice training—for it is no job to be done in a couple of days.

"But most of them will doubtless succeed," he continued. "There are no insurmountable difficulties. After all, training the voice is no harder work than acting in silent drama, which in itself requires a very special faculty. What is more, stage players may have much to unlearn, for the talking picture medium and the footlight drama are so entirely different. The novice will not be faced with this particular difficulty."

George Fawcett, an old-time stage actor, has this to say on the subject. "The talking picture is doubtless the greatest boon ever given the former stage actor now in pictures. By virtue of the training of years in the use of the voice, the former speaking actor has an enormous lead over the player who must train in this work.

"I can give the stage actor on hint, though. While he may have a lead in the beginning there is the fable of the rabbit and the turtle to be considered. The rabbit thought he was so far ahead that he went to sleep on the job and the turtle caught up.

"The screen artists who are not yet used to vocal work are serious and earnest people who will make an intensive study of the new art, and after all it will not take long to develop the voices of most of them. I think that many of our so-called silent stars today will become very great artists in the spoken picture."

The Stumbling Block

Foreign distribution will be the great stumbling block to the production of many of elaborate "all-talking" pictures. Expense precludes anything but world distribution being thought of in connection with extremely costly features. Douglas Fairbanks, for one, has taken this seriously into account in planning "For All Eternity," his sequel to "The Three Musketeers." This picture will have a musical accompaniment. It will probably include such sound effects as the clashing of sword blades in battles and duel scenes. Some words like "touche" from the fencer's vocabulary may be spoken to increase the dramatic intensity. A scream or a cry may be used when justified. But as for spasms of conversation, unless things are altered very materially, these will not be incorporated.

Fairbanks represents the more conservative viewpoint. It is natural in his case since his films are among the greatest in international appeal. I believe this same conservative attitude will be adopted by all companies regarding their larger pictures. If talking sequences are used, the film will also be so made that it can be exhibited without them, and lose as little as possible. There will be many lesser pictures made all or partly talking, and there will by the first of the year be the theatres to display these for a large audience. Novelty alone assures huge profits in such houses, for it is certain that "talking films" will draw the audience almost regardless of their merit during the earlier stages.

Somebody recently remarked that "it was the year one again" in motion pictures. Practically this is true. There is a stimulus to public attention wherever sound films are shown that is very much like that prevailing in the period when people went to see the films simply because they were something that moved. Novelty is going to carry a long ways, but a technique will have to be developed.

The best minds in the industry believe that it is foolish to look to the stage for this technique. That would only be hampering the future of a new evolution that already shows the beginning of an individuality. A new type of writer will have to be groomed to find the proper mode of expression. It will need a new type of director, and it will mean many changes in the acting personnel.

De Mille's Position

But nothing is going to occur with lightning-like swiftness. Many feel that the novelty of talkies as talkies will wear off very quickly. No less a director and producer than Cecil B. De Mille entertains this opinion.

"While it is my present feeling that people on the whole and in the long run prefer to see and hear living persons speak, their admiration for pictures is based on a quite different thing—namely, the panto-

Exhibitor's Warning on Talking Films

Sees Dangers to Small Town Theatre in Present Hysteria

Mr. William A. Johnston,
Motion Picture News,
729 - 7th Avenue,
New York, N. Y.
My dear Mr. Johnston:

I am only a "small town" exhibitor. My investment in the fourth largest industry in the U. S. totals less than thirty thousand dollars. It would seem, therefore, that if my judgment and foresight were actually as keen and accurate as I believe them to be in this instance, that during the past nine years I would naturally have assumed a much more important position in the industry than that I now occupy.

Frantic Scramble

However, discounting my judgment as you will, it seems to me that the frantic scramble on the part of the leaders of our industry to get on the "talkies" band wagon at the present time is writing into the history of the "movies" the most ridiculous, as well as the most serious, situation thus far presented. It makes one think that these people whom we have so highly admired and esteemed might, after all, be nothing more than "accidents" and not the efficient, clear-thinking, far-seeing executives we are prone to consider them. Over and over I find I am asking myself the question "Why do our film officials permit themselves to be stampeded like so many cattle into a situation that will come little short of wrecking the industry?"

A Year from Now

One year, I prophesy, from now they will look back over the ruins and wonder how such a thing could have happened; how they could have been so blindly misled; how one picture such as "The Jazz Singer" could have so completely disrupted such a smooth running business as the picture industry of today.

"The Jazz Singer," I must admit, was a wonderful picture; but it was not the short talking sequence, by any name, that made it great. The picture's success is accounted for in the singing, acting and personality of Al Jolson. But how many Al Jolsons are there in the entertainment world? How many stars in either the movies or on the legitimate stage could successfully replace Jolson in "The Jazz Singer?" I can think of none. He can repeat in a similar picture —and probably will.

But such pictures as "Tenderloin" and "The Lion and the Mouse," aside from the novelty of the speaking voices, are mere crude imitations. Compare, if you will, the entertainment values of the stage play of "The Lion and the Mouse," aside from the of the same name. A talking movie can be, and will be, no matter how well presented, nothing more or less than a mediocre imitation of the legitimate drama.

Many of my patrons who made an especial trip to Cleveland to hear (I use the word "hear" advisedly) "The Tenderloin" complained that it made them nervous and that they had no especial desire to attend a "talkie" again. I sat in the Stillman theatre yesterday at the first performance of "The Lion and the Mouse" in Cleveland and saw more people leave the theatre before the picture was over than I have ever witnessed in any theatre on any picture. tI is true that the picture was doing a splendid business, but this business was merely the drawing power of a novelty. I was personally relieved when it was over as it affected me nervously. Not only that, but I was disgusted with the crudeness of the picture and the voices of the stars. Oh, yes, of course, Lionel Barrymore was wonderful, but the remainder were pitifully weak in diction and in expression—and the direction was little short of terrible. One review of the picture recently stated "good with or without the Vitaphone." I am very frank to say that if I were compelled to show my patrons slow-moving, stilted, obvious pictures such as "The Lion and the Mouse" for the next year that I would have to do so with some kind of subsidization, as it would not be self-supporting.

During the next twleve months I predict that my patrons, and the patrons of other small-town theatres, will rush to the cities and big centers where the new novelty "sound pictures" will be shown, and that our business will be conducted at a terrific loss. The stars that lead in drawing patronage for us will either be in the "talkies" or gradually drop from sight, depending upon whether or not they can "talk." The big money and most talented directors will be engaged in turning out "talking pictures" and the supply of pictures for the "silent drama" will consist of mere program offerings of the cheaper sort. How many small-town exhibitors will be able to weather a year of this? I know I am one that can't. If I am unable to make a living in the picture business I will have to enter some line of activity which will enable me to support myself and family. And the Lonet theatre will be converted into a garage, or house some other profitable business. I further predict that at the end of a year or two the novelty of the "talkies" will have ceased to draw patronage and the picture theatres, even in the large cities, will be face to face with the greatest crisis of their careers.

Even for those exhibitors who are able to weather the storm and survive the next two years, I see a heavy expense for installation of talking equipment and regular rental, therefore, increased cost of service, percentage pictures, increased admission prices and decreased patronage.

Tell me, please, Mr. Johnston, am I too pessimistic? If so, what, in your opinion, will the next two years bring for the exhibitor in the small town?

Very sincerely,
Your friend,
(signed) W. J. Powell,
Lonet Theatre,
Wellington, Ohio.

"U" to Make "Shannons of Broadway" With Gleasons Starred

UNIVERSAL has signed contracts by proxy with James Gleason, author and star, for the purchase of "The Shannons of Broadway." Both Gleason and Mrs. Gleason, who appeared in the leading roles of the stage production will be seen in the picture version, which in all probability will be a complete talking picture.

By the term of the contract Universal will not be permitted to release the picture before February 1, 1929. Preparations however, have already started under the direction of Mr. Gleason for preparing the script and devising a new synchronizing technique.

Spitz Buys 40 Plays for Sound Filming

Parkell Corporation, a new sound-picture company headed by Eugene Spitz, has entered the field of the talkies. The rights to more than 40 stage plays, musical comedies and dramas, all the work of Jean Briquet and Adolf Phillip, have been acquired for immediate production. The recording system to be used in their production will be supplied by Western Electric.

Jetta Goudal Signed for "The Love Song"

The role of Simone, the Parisian demimondaine in the court of Napoleon III, is the character that Jetta Goudal will interpret in "The Love Song," the United Artists production. In this, also, wil be George Fawcett as a German ambassador.

Labor Trouble Lid Is Due Off Shortly

Nation-Wide Survey Will Be Launched By Federated Musicians

THERE is every indication that the lid will be off on labor troubles when present contracts expire, which, in most cases will be around Labor Day. Rumbling of dissatisfaction on the part of operators are coming from several different states, while a nation-wide survey will be made by the American Federation of Musicians to determine public reaction to mechanical music. Trouble with musicians unions are also looming at several points.

The national survey by the Federated Musicians will be the initial move in the campaign of that organization against pictures synchronized with music. The musicians organization recently raised dues to provide a defense fund of $1,500,000.

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, denied, however, that a clash with theatre interests was imminent. As a part of a lengthy statement issued by him, he said:

"We are not opposed to talking movies because we realize that this synchronization development is a genuine scientific achievement. But if the machines are used as a substitute for vocal and orchestral music in the nation's theatres they will constitute a serious menace to our cultural growth. And that, just at a time when America has gained the rank of undoubted world center of music.

"Music at its best reflects the mood of the artist. You cannot mechanize an art. If synthetic harmony comes to supersede the personal service of musicians the public will be the loser. The gain, if any, will be that of the theatrical enterprise offering inferior entertainment for the old price of admission.

"Literally speaking the 'shadow and echo' form of entertainment amounts to photographing a worker at his task and then compelling him to compete for his livelihood with innumerable prints of the photo."

Practically every de luxe theatre in Chicago is equipped with a synchronizing device or is awaiting installation. Contracts with the musicians' union expire on Labor Day and it is likely there will be a showdown before that time in Chicago. Balaban & Katz show no inclination to comply with the demand of James C. Petrillo, president of the union, that they keep the twelve musicians who were discharged on the payroll to augment orchestras in other B & K houses. The orchestra at the Roosevelt is understood to have been given two weeks notice that Vitaphone and Movietone will supplant it.

Oklahoma City faces the prospect of a walkout of operators at the Liberty, Capitol and other affiliated houses. The crisis is expected momentarily when the contracts between the operators union and the Liberty and Capitol expire. It is understood that the trouble started when the union demanded that two men be employed to operate sound picture devices.

Owners are said to be willing to increase the wages of chief and relief operators, but decline to add two projectionists to their payroll. As a result, an open shop policy is threatened, with the Chamber of Commerce reported to have in readiness projectionists to fill all vacancies.

Plans of the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association and affiliated unions for more music in the St. Louis theatres and more concerts in public parks has been indorsed by the Central Trades and Labor Unions with a combined membership of almost 100,000 men and women.

On Sunday morning, July 15, more than 12,000 persons heard a public concert by a band of 250 union musicians given in the Nathan Frank band stand in Forest Park. The members of the band donated their services in furtherance of the union's campaign to educate the public regarding the advantages of good human orchestral music compared with canned music in the form of mechanical organs, electric pianos, phonographs, Vitaphone, Movietone and similar mechanical musicreproduction devices.

The St. Louis musicians hope to have the taxpayers vote a special tax fund for the financing of more band concerts in public parks. The present Board of Estimate and Apportionment it is alleged, has kept the appropriation for band concerts to the very minimum, the city setting aside less for that purpose than twenty-five years ago.

Theodore Roberts Talkie Advocate

THEODORE ROBERTS, veteran screen and stage star, is a strong advocate of the talking pictures. He sees in them the greatest boost the stage has had for the past twenty years, also a medium for the revival of interest in the motion picture.

Discussing the sound pictures, Mr. Roberts says:

"They will have a great effect on every phase of the industry. Among other results, the 'talkies' will be the greatest boost that the stage has had in the past 20 years. This applies both to New York and to Los Angeles, but especially to the latter.

"'Talkies' are best when they are first rehearsed in entirety and the timing is best done when they are 'tried on the dog' or performed before an audience. As the present supply of stage plays is inadequate, I look for the producers to give a big boost to stage production.

"What I look for in the next couple of years is a new crop of stage plays adapted for talking motion pictures. These plays will be presented on the stage both in New York and Los Angeles, but preferably the latter, with the same cast that will later perform for the screen.

"In adapting stage plays to talking pictures, it will be necessary to shorten most of the speeches. The reason lies in the fact that it is necessary to talk slower for recording purposes than on the stage. Hence the speeches cannot be quite so long.

"Talking pictures will be a great boost for character actors. People who can talk or quickly learn to talk a variety of accents and dialects will find themselves in great demand. Where now an actor has merely to look like a New York tough or a Scotchman, in the future he will have to be able to talk like one, also."

"Trial of Mary Dugan" Is First for M-G-M

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first all-talking picture will be "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Purchase of the screen rights to this popular play, including Movietone and Vitaphone rights, is announced with contracts signed by Al Wood, the producer, and Nicholas M. Schenck, head of the film concern.

Bayard Veiller, the author of the play, will supervise the motion picture adaptation, which will be produced in the near future. Director and cast have not yet been announced.

1st National Signs with W. Electric

Contract Is Closed With Thirty Films to Be Synchronized

FIRST National has definitely signed to use the Western Electric Company device for the production and reproduction of sound in connection with pictures. Contracts were finally signed last Saturday between First National and the Electrical Research Products Corporation, subsidiary of the Western Electric Company.

This announcement came as a surprise as "Lilac Time," the Colleen Moore starring vehicle, had already been scored and synchronized under the R C A system and it seemed almost a foregone conclusion that First National would sign with that company. The producing company had previously given consideration to Western Electric and the announcement was made some time ago that the companies had signed. It developed that they had reached only a temporary agreement, and then First National proceeded with the synchronization of "Lilac Time" with R C A.

Under the now definitely signed contract with Western Electric both the film and disc methods will be used and they will be applied to a minimum of 30 pictures to be produced by First National during the coming season.

According to Irving D. Rossheim, president of First National, the announcement of thirty pictures to be synchonized is a conservative one and that it is likely within a month or so announcement will be made that all of the company's pictures will be synchronized.

Among the pictures already determined upon for music and sound accompaniment are the following:

Three Colleen Moores. "Lilac Time" is already scored.

Corinne Griffith in "The Divine Lady," in which the Battle of Trafalgar will be reproduced in sound.

"The Barker" with Milton Sills, Dorothy Mackaill and Betty Compson, in which all the sounds and dialogue of the carnival will be reproduced.

"The Whip" with Dorothy Mackaill.

A Billie Dove special, directed by George Fitzmaurice.

"The Good-Bye Kiss."

"The Squall," made from the Broadway play.

"Changeling," Donn Byrne's story.

Corinne Griffith in "Outcast," "Paid For," "Saturday's Children" and one other.

Richard Barthelmess in "Scarlet Seas," "Diversion" and two others.

Billie Dove in "The Night Watch," "The Heart of a Princess," "The Other Tomorrow," "Pleasure Bound."

Milton Sills in "Hard Rock," "The Spotter "The Eagle's Trail" and "Captain of the Strong."

Alice White in "Show Girl," J. P. McEvoy's story of back-stage life.

Three mystery dramas, "The Haunted House," "Seven Footprints to Satan" and "Sh! The Octopus."

Joseph P. Kennedy arrived on the coast the first of the week with the intention of proceeding at once with arrangements for the necessary equipment and the completion of sound proof studio stages. This work will be rushed to an early conclusion so that there will be no delay in proceeding with the company program.

Barrymore Is Reported Negotiating Again With Warner Bros.

WARNER BROS. and John Barrymore are reported in negotiation for Barrymore to do pictures for Vitaphone. Details as to the number of pictures and when the first one is to be made have not yet been decided upon. Meantime it is understood that Barrymore will carry out his plans to do "Hamlet" in the Hollywood Bowl and in the Greek Theatre in Berkeley, California, late in the Summer.

Advices from United Artists are to the effect that Barrymore's next story for the screen will be based on a European novel, the picturization of which will be directed by Ernst Lubitsch. The production will be a sound device photo-play, with camera work scheduled to start in September.

In discussing his return to Warners, Barrymore is quoted as saying: "The personal friendship and regard existing between Mr. Schenck and myself is in no way affected by this step. The increased public demand for talking pictures is primarily responsible for these negotiations between Warner Bros. and myself. I feel that my first talking picture should be done with Warner Bros."

Jean Hersholt to Appear in Talking Films

The voice of Jean Hersholt, Universal's character star, is going to be brought to the screen. Upon his arrival in Hollywood after several months in New York, it was learned that he was to re-make a goodly portion of the scenes in which he appeared in "Abie's Irish Rose," for Paramount and the sound device adopted by the latter organization is to synchronize with the actor's action this time.

mimic art. And any talking picture that sacrifices this loved art is likely to disillusion them.

"However, sound is a tremendous thing. We who have been making the so-called epic pictures avail ourselves of its potentialities now and again. Indeed, sound accompaniments to the big pictures intensify emotions most poignantly.

"New science and invention have given us a voice. Frankly speaking, none of us has yet learned how to use it. An entirely new technique must first be built up and complete artistic unity attained. We must save the pantomimic values for the eye, and reinforce them at the right moments with audition values for the ear. We can't make plays.

"In my current production, 'The Godless Girl,' I am introducing accompaniments of sound effects by the new art of Photophone, but without accompanying dialogue. In my next special production which I expect to start next fall, it is probable that speech will be introduced. All of us will know a great deal more about the subject by the summer of 1929 than we know now."

Universal Announced as Signed by Western Electric Company

WESTERN ELECTRIC COMPANY makes the announcement that in addition to definitely signing up with First National for the production of sound and dialogue with pictures, the company has also definitely signed with Universal Pictures. No other details of the contract with Universal are available, nor could the report be confirmed at the Universal home office at the time of going to press. It was said there that word was expected momentarily that the deal had been closed.

Universal has been looking over the different sound devices for some time past and has already had "Uncle Tom's Cabin" synchronized with music and sound under the Movietone system. It has been almost a foregone conclusion that the company would sign with Western Electric.

Ohio Sound Picture Censorship Ruling Text Given

J. L. CLIFTON, director of education in Ohio, and through whose office motion pictures are censored, recently asked Attorney General Turner for a ruling on the censorship of sound and dialogue in pictures. The ruling handed down by the Attorney General says that the censor board has the same privileges as with the ordinary picture films.

The text of the Attorney General's ruling, in part, follows:

"It is obvious that what is hard by the public in the reproduction of the words or other sounds in connection with the projection of a Vitaphone picture show or a Movietone picture show may be as clearly within the mischief which occasioned the enactment of the censorship law as the scenic action or explanatory words made visible to the eye in the projection of the ordinary moving picture. In this view there is no reason to doubt the application of the pertinent provisions of sections 871-48 and 871-49, General Code, with respect to Vitaphone picture films and Movietone picture films, though, as above noted, they are a species of picture films unknown at the time of the enactment of these sections of the General Code.

"I am of the opinion, therefore, that the board of censors has the same right to censor Vitaphone and Movietone picture films and, if necessary, order the elimination of objectionable matter, either seen or heard, that it has with respect to ordinary picture films; and that it may wholly reject such Vitaphone and Movietone films in proper cases.

"As the authority of the board of censors to censor Vitaphone and Movietone picture films carries with it the authority to adopt and use reasonable means to that end, said board may require the exhibitor to furnish continuity sheets showing the words, whether spoken or sung, which are reproduced as a part of the picture and explanatory of or otherwise characterizing the same, in all cases where it is practicable to do so. It is to be recognized, of course, that some sounds which are picked up and reproduced hy the Vitaphone and Movietone might he of such a vagrant and indescribable character that the same could not be portrayed by words. With respect to sounds of this kind, it of course would not be practicable to furnish continuity sheets.

"As in ordinary picture films, the board of censors in censoring the same causes the motion picture film to be projected as it is and thus determines upon the existence or non-existence of objectionable matter visible to the examining hoard, so in the matter of censoring the Vitaphone and Movietone picture films the board of censors is authorized to make provisions for the projection and reproduction of such films and thus determine the existence or non-existence of objectionable matter, whether the same be seen or heard. The authority of the board of censors to examine and censor picture films of the kind here in question authorizzes the department to procure such appliances as may be necessary for the purpose and, if the censorship of Vitaphone and Movietone picture films require the procurement and installation of appliances and facilities for this purpose, the same should be obtained as soon as money is available therefor."

Five Warner Feature Pictures With Sound Now Available

WARNER BROS. are in a dominant position in the talking picture field with five features available for immediate show dates and twenty-seven others in various stages of preparation.

The five Vitaphone features now ready are: Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," Dolores Costello in "Tenderloin," with Conrad Nagel; "The Lion and the Mouse," "Glorious Betsy," starring Dolores Costello, with Conrad Nagel, and "Lights of New York," the latter the first all-talking picture.

Casts for seven more are assembled and all seven are now in front of the cameras, several of them nearing completion. This group includes "The Singing Fool" starring Al Jolson, "The Terror" with May McAvoy, Louise Fazenda and Edward Everett Horton, "My Man" starring Fannie Brice; Dolores Costelle in "The Redeeming Sin," Monte Blue in "Conquest," with H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson; George M. Cohan's "The Home Towners" and "Noah's Ark," in which Dolores Costello is starred with George O'Brien as chief support.

In the preliminary stages of preparation are two more big specials, Schwab and Mandel's musical romance "The Desert Song" and "Is Everybody Happy?" starring Ted Lewis.

In addition to these fourteen Vitaphone specials the eighteen Warner features will all be Vitaphoned with dialogue and sound effects. Six are completely finished: Myrna Loy and Conrad Nagel in "State Street Sadie," Irene Rich and Audrey Ferris in "Women They Talk About," Helen Costello and Antonio Moreno in "The Midnight Taxi," Rin-Tin-Tin in "Land of the Silver Fox," May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel in "Caught in the Fog" and Audrey Ferris and William Collier, Jr., in "Beware of Bachelors."

Effective Campaign in Montgomery

An extensive and effective campaign was put over by the Strand Theatre in Montgomery, Alabama, for the initial sound picture, "When a Man Loves," with John Barrymore and Dolores Costello.

The local newspapers carried the first announcement that Vitaphone was coming seven weeks in advance of the opening. Arrangements were made with every bus line running into Montgomery whereby each vehicle carried a banner announcing Vitaphone, tied up with the slogan, "See and Hear."

Through cooperation with two railroad lines, stations all over the section were heavily placarded and special excursion rates were arranged. Banners were placed outside of hotels and public buildings and many merchant tieups were negotiated. Nearly every soda fountain in the town featured Vitaphone Sundaes and many restaurants devised special Vitaphone dishes for their menus.

The slogan, "See and Hear" was tied up with cooperative advertising pages in all the local papers and a special editorial section explaining the marvels of Vitaphone, was published in the Montgomery Advertiser. The campaign was the work of Managers M. C. Farley, of Publix Theatres Corporation, assisted by Hugh J. Smart, house manager of the Strand.

Collins Named to Handle Movietone Prints

E. H. Collins, supervisior of Fox Film Exchange operations, has been appointed by General Sales Manager, J. R. Grainger to the post of supervising of booking and distribution of all Fox-Movietone feature prints. At the same time Mr. Grainger announced the division of the United States into twelve zones, each having its own key point where synchronized prints will be stored, inspected and shipped. These shipping points include the following cities:

San Francisco, Cleveland, Boston, Seattle, Washington, Dallas, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Indianapolis, New York, Omaha.

"Hell's Angels" to Have Talkie Sequences

Final sequence of United Artists "Hell's Angels," which Howard Hughes is producing and directing, will be filmed with talking and sound effects. Equipment for the synchronizing is already being installed at the Metropolitan studios, and actual filming of the talking scenes will begin next week.

A portion of the picture has already been filmed in technicolor. The additional time required to shoot the vocal sequences may delay release, but under latest plans the picture will go into a New York theatre for its world premiere in November.

Richard Bennett Signed for Warner Feature

Richard Bennett, famous stage actor, has signed a contract with Warner Bros. to appear in their next all-talking Vitaphone production, George M. Cohan's "The Home Towners." Doris Kenyon also has a principal role.

Vitaphone for 18 New England Publix Houses

Eighteen Publix theatres in the New England territory will open with Vitaphone during the coming two months, according to the announcement of Paul J. Swift, general sales manager of the Vitaphone Corporation.

The theatres and their opening dates are as follows:

Fenway and Olympia theatres, Boston, day and date policy, July 8; Strand, Newport, R. I., July 8; Capital, Pittsfield, July 8; Alston, Alston, Mass., July 22; Central Square, Cambridge, July 22; Stadium, Woonsocket, July 22; Opera House, Bangor, July 23; Strand, Brockton, July 23; Scolly Square, Boston, July 22; Olympia, Lynn, July 29; Merimac, Lowell, August 19; Strand, Pawtucket, August 5; Salem, Salem, August 19; Strand, Dorchester, September 2; Field's Corner, Dorchester, September 2, and the Publix theatres in Chelsea and Haverhill, September 2.

Movietone Experts Off to Fox Studios

Ben Jacksen, in charge of Movietone production at the Fox West Coast studios headed a large delegation of Fox officials, engineers and sound technicians and their families to Hollywood from New York last week. The party occupied two special Pullman cars on the Lake Shore Limited and will remain in Hollywood permanently to launch Movietone production on a large scale.

In addition to Jacksen, those who made the trip included Fred Schader and George Schneiderman, assistants to Jacksen, and Messers Balsey, Hausen, Akin, Silver, Larsen, Kroeger, Tsehaegle, Friedman, Schuster and Irvin. All of the latter are engineers and sound experts.

Astor Theatre Installs a Movietone Device

"The Trail of '98," the picture version of Robert W. Serviee's story of the Alaskan gold rush, concluded its five-months' run at the Astor Theatre, New York, Sunday evening, July 15.

The Astor will now remain dark for as long a period as may be required to complete the installation of Movietone effeets for "White Shadows in the South Seas," which will have its Broadway premiere soon.

"White Shadows" will be the first M-G-M film with sound accompaniment and a synchronized score. Praetically all the scenes for the production were made on the island of Tahiti under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

Many Illinois Theatres Already Equipped

The installation of Movietone and Vitaphone eontinue in Northern Illinois and Chicago theatres and it is reported that the number now equipped to show talking or synehronized sound pietures is thirty-two. It is estimated by those in close touch with the situation that by September 1st, one hundred de luxe houses will be fully equipped for the exhibition of sound pietures.

George White Says Talkies Are Not Ready for Big Shows

GEORGE WHITE, producer of the "Scandals" is of the impression that sound pictures have not yet progressed far enough to be taken too seriously, nor does he think they are going to impose any great handicap upon the legitimate stage of Broadway. According to this young producer there are not more than a dozen legitimate players on Broadway who eould suceessfully meet the requirements of the speaking movie; they either could not register satisfaetorily with dialogue or they could not come up to the standard required for the screen.

"It may be," said White, "that for a time the movies will cause a slight eommotion with the legitimate stage, but it will only be a temporary one. There are not enough players on Broadway to meet all the requirements neeessary to handicap us greatly. I do not believe there are a dozen in all who will get by in the talking pictures.

"Maybe the picture people will take some of our big stars for a while, but what if they do. We will get other people to fill in for them and those we get will prove satisfactory on the speaking stage. No matter who we get to take the places of our stars they will be better on the speaking stage than the stars will be in the talking movies.

"I saw these talking movies when I was a kid eight or ten years old, and giving them all that is coming to them, they are not much better now than they were then. They have smoothed them out a bit so they are not as crude as they were then, but they have not improved them enough to interfere any with the legitimate stage.

"Even if the talking pictures eventually do all that is claimed for them now, they are never going to seriously effect the speaking stage; the latter will always have the human appeal that is laeking in these mechanical devices. They are never going to send mash notes to these mechanical actors, and mash notes are a big faetor in the success of the legitimate stage.

"I have been approached by Warner Bros. to make a talking pieture of the Scandals, but they'll have to show me something more than they have now in these talking pictures to make me consider the matter seriously. Sure it would be nice to have the Scandals produced as sound pictures wherever they are not played legitimately. I'd like to be able to show them in every part of the United States, but they haven't shown me enough yet to warrant my taking the matter too seriously. If they ever get the devices perfected it will be a great thing for pictures, but it won't hurt the stage any. The big stars may reap a harvest for a while, but don't ever think they won't come back to us. They'll be back. They like the glare of the footlights and the applause too much to stay away for any great length of time."

Detroit Orders New Installations

A recently compiled survey of Detroit theatres shows that sound films will be installed in sixteen houses, in addition to those now "wired" in the downtown section. In the list are several containing small seating eapacities, yet their managers appear optimistic that the heavy investment will prove a shrewd bit of business.

Theatres other than the pioneering Madison and State, that have already signed eontracts for the Vitaphone-Movietone, together with seating capacity are as follows:

United Artists, 1,800 seats; Michigan Theatre, 4,100 seats; Adams Theatre, 1,770 seats; Grand Riviera Theatre, 2,800 seats; La Salle Garden Theatre, 1,190 seats; Hollywood Theatre, 3,436 seats; Ramona Theatre, 1,997 seats; Tuxedo Theatre, 1,726 seats; Annex Theatre, 1,750 seats; Rialto Theatre, 1,334 seats; Lakewood Theatre, 1,270 seats; Uptown Theatre, 3,070 seats; Gladwin Park Theatre, 994 seats; Plaza Theatre, 825 seats; Harmony Theatre, 1,322 seats; Ferndale Theatre, 995 seats.

Substitution Case Settled in Favor of Exhibitor

Judge Maintains Right of Showman, Plaintiff in Suit Brought Against Vitagraph

IN the case of Waldo Ives, Anacortes and Mt. Vernon exhibitor, against Warner Bros. which involved the right of substitution on the part of the distributor, Judge Gilliam, in the Seattle court, settled the dispute in favor of the exhibitor, declaring the original arbitration decision stands.

Originally, Warners brought suit against the Seattle exhibitor covering unplayed contracts at the Empire Theatre, Anacortes. Evidence was introduced in the form of the Warner Bros.' campaign book, and the claim was put forth that "Simple Sis," "Bitter Apples," "What Happened to Father," "The Gay Old Bird" and "Dearie" were substitutions and that the exhibitor could not be held to account for not playing them.

Award was made to Ives to cancel the pictures in the first hearing of the case before an arbitration board. At the request of Warners, the case was later reopened by another board and a decision was rendered favoring the distribution concern.

By this time the case had attracted nation-wide notice and all eyes of distributors and exhibitors and others were centered on the next move. Ives lost no time in bringing the case into the courts where he was awarded a temporary injunction restraining all exchanges demanding a guarantee deposit and against the Warners from enforcing the second award.

Academy Plans Production

20 or More Stars Will Appear in Picture to Aid Relief Fund; Will Be Sold on Straight Rental Basis

PLANS under discussion for the past two years have come to a head in the announced intention of the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences to produce a feature film containing 20 or more motion picture stars for the purpose of aiding the Motion Picture Relief Fund. The picture will be sold to exhibitors on a straight rental basis, it is said.

The committee in charge of the production enterprise is made up of the following: Harry Rapf, chairman; Reginald Barker, Jane Murfin, Hallam Cooley and Fred Pelton. Vice-president Fred Niblo and Secretary Frank Woods are ex-officio members.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has decided to award 13 trophies for the outstanding work in picture productions released between August 1st of this year and August 1st of next. These Distinctive Awards will be given in the fields of acting, story writing and adaptation, direction (for the best dramatic photoplay and the best comedy), photography, art direction, technical effects, production (for the outstanding production and for the most unique original picture without reference to cost and size).

The awards will be made in the form of a bronze statuette, the particular achievement for which it is awarded to be engraved on its base. There will also be awards of honorable mention, diploma or other forms of recognition. By means of nominations made by each member of the Academy and the selection by a committee of five judges the decisions will be arrived at. The ten receiving the highest number of nominating votes will be reviewed by the judges after which they will choose the three nominees for each award in their order of excellence. It is proposed to bestow the awards at the annual meeting of the Academy late in October.

Gold-Hawk Gets Film Rights to Big Bout

MOTION pictures are to be taken of the Tunney-Heeney world's heavyweight championship bout to be held at the Yankee Stadium in New York on the night of July 26. Picture rights have been purchased by Gold-Hawk Pictures, Inc., for a reported price of $50,000.

It has not yet been definitely determined whether sound will be applied in the reproduction of the bout on the screen, but it is likely that it will. This matter is still under consideration by the officials of Gold-Hawk. Charles N. Jawitz is vice-president and general manager of Gold-Hawk, W. Comfort, vice-president and export manager; Cy Braunstein, foreign sales manager, and P. A. Zizleman, attorney for the company.

"Lilac Time" Premiere at Carthay Circle

Advent of First National Special a Gala Affair; Many Notables Share the Limelight

HOLLYWOOD, July 17.—A brilliant opening was enjoyed last night at the Carthay Circle Theatre by the First National special, "Lilac Time, starring Colleen Moore. The film world was represented by many prominent folk, the star and her husband, John McCormick, Will Hays, George Fitzmaurice and others, and the world of politics had as its representative Major James J. Walker of New York.

Mayor Walker acted as master of ceremonies and was greeted warmly. He posed in the lobby of the Carthay Circle with Miss Moore and McCormick before the cameras. The star and her director, Fitzmaurice, were accorded prolonged applause when they made their appearance on the stage.

There were numerous stars, directors, producers, city officials of Hollywood, and members of the social elect in the audience. Altogether it was a brilliant gathering and one of the finest among the many that the movie city has witnessed.

Finished "U" Films

Among the pictures completed at the Universal studio are "The Night Bird," Reginald Denny's latest starring comedy the final scenes of which are now in the cutting room. The comedian goes back to his prize-fighter roles in this story.

The two short subjects recently completed are "The Junior Year," second picture in Universal's new Collegians series, and "Hollywood or Bust," the first of a comedy series called "Horace in Hollywood," starring Arthur Lake.

Scouting

Miss Katherine H. Nolen, secretary to Gloria Swanson, arrived last week at the Briarcliff Lodge in Westchester County, N. Y., where she is taking note of the points of interest about the Lodge. It is possible that Miss Swanson is considering that locality of Westchester's Hills for one or two settings.

Christie Recruits

Raquel Torres, signed by M-G-M recently and given the feminine lead in that company's "Southern Skies," is a former recruit from the studio of Christie Brothers. The studio has supplied rich finds for other producers. Doris Dawson, a Christie girl, has gone to First National. Ann Christy is now outside the fold also, her last role being opposite Harold Lloyd in "Speedy." Natalie Joyce and Caryl Lincoln have both gone over to Fox.

Signed

Lorayne Duval, discovered by Carl Laemmle, Jr., while playing minor parts in "The Collegians," has been placed under a long-term contract by Universal. She will play prominent parts in features. She is five feet, five inches all, with chestnut hair, blue eyes and is regarded by Universal executives as extremely talented.

Next Tryon Comedy

A little over a week after finishing "The Gate Crasher," Glenn Tryon was started on "The Kid's Clever," a new Universal comedy on which William James Craft is wielding the megaphone. Ernest Pagano wrote the story and continuity.

Garnett's New Assignment

Tay Garnett, Pathe scenarist turned director who so capably handled "Celebrity," has been tentatively chosen to direct "The Flying Fool." Hal Conklin is now preparing the story, in which Garnett will later assist him.

Night Watch

The company making Billie Dove's "The Night Watch" literally became a night watch last week when they worked through an entire night to complete the picture.

Included among the pictures that were started at the Burbank plant last week were "Do Your Duty," "Waterfront" and "Hard Rock."

Now Paramount Scenarists

Two more products of Professor George Pierce Baker's drama class at Yale—T. J. Ahearn and James Clark—have arrived in Hollywood to sign contracts that will make them members of the Paramount staff of scenarists. A few weeks ago Paramount signed another Baker student—Leo B. Pride.

Besides Yale, Columbia is also represented on the Paramount writing staff, Norman Burnstine representing the New York university.

Paramount has also signed Ben Grauman Kohn as a scenarist and title writer.

The Fox Laboratory

The spot where years ago the first two reel comedy ever made on the Fox lot was started, was, recently, the scene of the laying of the cornerstone of the new Fox Films laboratory. The building, representing an investment of $500,000, was begun on June 4 and it is scheduled to be completed the first week of August. The comedy referred to above was started late in the fall of 1916, Henry Lehrman being the producer, the director and the leading man.

Future W. B. Features

The schedule of present and future feature productions at the Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood already includes the following line-up:

"The Home Towners"—George M. Cohan's stage play; "Conquest"—Monte Blue's next starring vehicle; "Noah's Ark"—with Dolores Costello and George O'Brien; "The Singing Fool"—with Al Jolson; "My Man"—with Fannie Brice; "The Desert Song"—with a singing and acting cast; "The Terror"—starring May McAvoy and to be made entirely in Vitaphone; "The Midnight Taxi"—with Helene Costello and Antonio Moreno; "Caught in the Fog"—co-starring May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel; "Beware of Bachelors"—with Audrey Ferris and William Collier, Jr.

William Collier, Jr.

Three features among which "Lights of New York," an all-Vitaphone picture, has had its premiere showing in New York, have been set for release. The other two are "Women They Talk About" and "State Street Sadie." The latter is a crook drama.

Directors Signed

Charles Klein, Ray Cannon and Norman McLeod are three new directors on the Fox studio staff. With their addition, the Fox number of directors on the coast is swelled to 21. Michael Farley is announced as assistant to Sol Wurtzel in the post of supervisor of western production.

F B O Directors

Two F B O directors have been assigned pictures for the near future. Ralph Ince is scheduled to start production at an early date on "Singapore Mutiny," a story of the Far East by Norman Springer. Leon D'Usseau has been given "Fury of the Wild," a Ranger the dog vehicle, to direct. Barbara Worth has been engaged for the feminine lead in the Ranger picture.

Greene's Seventh for Fox

Alfred E. Greene has started his seventh Fox Films production, "Making the Grade," with Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran in the leading roles. This picture is a film version of George Ade's latest story of the same name which ran in Cosmopolitan Magazine in March.

Trip Abroad

When June Collyer plays the leading feminine role in "Chasing Through Europe," a new Fox picture showing further adventures of "Newsreel Nick" Stuart, she will take a trip to Europe as a part of the role's requirements. In company with Stuart, she will leave Hollywood in the near future.

Nears Finish

Thomas Meighan's "The Mating Call" is in its final week of shooting. This production, the star's second under his contract with Howard Hughes, will be edited and titled in time for August release by Paramount.

Mix Stories Under Consideration

His tour of the K-A-O circuits completed Tom Mix has taken up residence at the F B O studio in Hollywood where three stories are now being considered for his first western under the Kennedy banner. No director has been definitely assigned to direct Mix.

Back to Safety

Fox Film Corporation officials heaved a sigh of relief when word was received from Alaska that Charles G. Clarke and R. S. Merrill, cameramen, arrived safely at Point Barrow, Alaska, after a 150 mile trek across the frozen wilderness following the fall of their plane, caused by engine trouble. Virgil Hart, who was sent by the Fox company to hunt for the two lost cameramen, also became stranded in his attempt to reach them.

Pathe Features in Work

The four features in production on the Pathe schedule are: "Celebrity," "Annapolis," "Craig's Wife" and "Show Folks," a special in which Eddie Quillan, Lina Basquette and Robert Armstrong will be prominent; "Sal of Singapore" and "Marked Money," Junior Coghlan's new vehicle in which Alan Hale and George Duryea will also appear. In editing at the present time are: "The Godless Girl," and "Love Over Night." Scenarists are now working on "The Flying Fool," "The Office Scandal," for Phyllis Haver, "Square Shoulders," Junior Coghlan's second picture, and "The Spieler."

Burbank Active

At the First National picture plant at Burbank, things are coming along at a fast clip. Within the next month or so eight features are scheduled to enter production. The First National cutting rooms are now working on eight finished features, and will soon be engaged on another six which are now occupying the various stages.

The eight which will soon be launched are: "Show Girl," "Waterfront," "Do Your Duty," "Outcast," "Hard Rock," "The Haunted House," "The Wrecking Boss," "Scarlet Seas" and "The Squall," and a new Ken Maynard western. Working on these are James T. O'Donohue, "Show Girl," Tom Geraghty, at "Waterfront"; Julian Josephson, at "Do Your Duty"; Agnes Christine Johnson, at "Outcast," Charles Kenyon, at 'Hard Rock"; and Gerald Duffy, at "Scarlet Seas," One of the above-mentioned films, "The Haunted House," will be directed by Benjamin Christensen.

The features in work are: "Oh, Kay," "The Divine Lady," "Out of the Ruins," "His Wife's Affair," "The Glorious Trail," and Harry Langdon's new comedy. MacLean's footlight success at the Morosco and other theatres before entering the movies has not been in vain, because carefully worked out lines are now being polished up for him by Henry McCarty, the continuity writer.

Two stages now being equipped for the talkies Western Electric talking processs will probably be used for the first time when production starts on "The Carnation Kid." This should be in about four or five weeks, possibly sooner. Although the contracts for the equipment have just been signed, technicians are already preparing the installation.

Born in Oklahoma

Albert Rogell is one of the youngest successful directors in motion pictures. He is only 26 years of age and has been identified with the film industry in various capacities since he was 18.

There was no good reason why Rogell should have become interested in pictures in the first place. Graduating from the high school at the place of his birth, Oklahoma City, and also from the school of music, he had had no experience in a business way when he turned his attention to pictures nor had any member of his family been identified with motion pictures or the theatre.

Since his advent into the picture industry, there are few angles of it that Rogell has not turned his attention to. He has been a producer, director, scenic artis, grip, transportation department—or what have you.

Rogell has directed Ken Maynard in several of his most successful pictures for First National release and is still actively identified with the Maynard unit.

There are few screen writers qualified to handle as wide a range of motion picture subjects as is Finis Fox, who for the past ten years has been preparing stories for the screen and now adapts those designed to serve as starring vehicles for Dolores Del Rio.

The career of Mr. Fox has been a colorful one. Born and raised in Oklahoma he ran up against many of the rough edges of life in his youth and has been studying life ever since. He served in the Spanish-American war when he was 15. He was a newspaper editor at 19 and a state legislator at 21.

While Fox has confined his time largely to the writing of plays for the screen, he has also directed and produced six pictures. Among these was "A Woman Who Sinned," with Mae Busch, Irene Rich and Rex Lease.

Oklahoma—take your bow!

Author Contracts With Fox

Ben Markson has just signed a one-year contract with the Fox Film Corp. and has completed his initial story for director Al Green. It is called "Romance of the Underworld." Sidney Lanfield collaborated with Markson.

Billy Leyser with Inspiration

Inspiration Pictures, Inc., have acquired the services of the publicity man and exploiteer—Billy Leyser, who has joined the Inspiration company as director of publicity by arrangement of J. Boyce Smith and E. J. Jensen.

Stunt Flyer Loses Suit

John G. Montijo lost his suit for $12,500 against Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., when the jury decided that stunt flyers in pictures must abide by the chances incident to their work. Montijo was employed to fly at an automobile and to zoom up just as the two were about to crash. Something went wrong and a collision resulted, in which the flyer was severely injured.

Carewe Obtains a "Find"

Edwin Meyers, known in his native land as Ezra Mir, and who was formerly associated with the Madan Company of Calcutta, India, is listed among Edwin Carewe's recent "discoveries." Meyers has been placed under contract to handle stories and treatments for Dolores Del Rio's future screen material.

Taylor Scenarizing "Love Song"

Sam Taylor, director, is also Sam Taylor, scenarist. Few know that the youthful director of John Barrymore's "Tempest" and Mary Pickford's "My Best Girl," is also a screen writer of more than passing note. Taylor, who will direct "The Love Song," is hard at work on the script for this picture which will be his third consecutive feature for United Artists.

Mary Nolan Borrowed

Mary Nolan, heroine of "Sorrell and Son," "The Foreign Legion," and various film plays since her sojourn to America from Berlin, is to be Lon Chaney's leading woman in "West of Zanzibar," in which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture Miss Nolan will play the ward of the African "white voodoo." Tod Browning will direct.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
The Clearing House for Box Office Problems and Theatre Operation

By Charles E. Lewis

Managing Director, Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., and Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Jack Sanson

In the language of the sporting element, and because in our estimation it best describes him, we must refer to Jack Sanson as a "Natural." Jack is the resident manager of the Hoffman Brothers, State Theatre located in So. Manchester, Conn., and like all the other Hoffman managers, he is tickled to work for such "regular" bosses. And that also holds good for Mr. Needles, their genial general manager, and just as "regular."

Finding myself but a short ride from So. Manchester I could not resist the temptation to return a long promised visit and at the same time "see what it's all about."

Sanson has a "bag o' tricks" that would make most of us small towners turn green with envy. He never misses a single chance to kick up some extra business and even at this time, when most of us are content to sit back and watch the usual slow summer business, Jack is busy on his annual Summer Kiddies' Frolic.

Kiddies Frolic Annual Event

But this Frolic is not like the regular run of kiddie shows. Every year Sanson writes an original plot with all the necessary musical and dance trimmings, and he himself stages the entire proceedings. At this time he is holding rehearsals every morning of the week and using more patience than the average man would use in working with children. That his yearly Frolic is a success, not only from the business, but from the entertainment standpoint, speaks volumes for his methods and ability. The show, when ready, will run for three days, matinee and night, and those of us who have ever put on anything with kiddies know that his house is in for three corking days, weather notwithstanding.

But the kiddie show is only one of Sanson's many tricks. He also runs a regular presentation once a month, and his patrons know the quality of these extra stage attractions so well that business is bound to take a jump with it every time.

Of course, Jack Sanson has one advantage over the majority of us, he is an old-time performer and has had stage training.

He also showed us many other "stunts" which we cannot describe here, but we suggest that you write him a letter and ask him to send you some information on his "Butchers' Night." I'm certain Jack will be most pleased to hear from brother members and will give you many splendid tips.

Good luck to you Jack Sanson, we want to hear from you again, and soon.

Sound Pictures

WHAT subject commands more attention at this time than sound pictures? Therefore, members or non-members, are urged to send in their views on this topic as soon as possible. The eyes of the industry are focused on every expression regarding this latest offspring of the so-called silent drama. Only an open discussion can bring the true state of feeling before the industry.

What have you to say on this subject?

Talkies and the Average Theatre

It was inevitable that sooner or later the Managers' Round Table Club would have to get into the discussion regarding the uppermost topic in the business today: "Talkies."

Members of the Club and the large number of readers of the Club pages in the NEWS have been eagerly awaiting some word on this all-important subject.

Since the Club was originally intended for the benefit of the smaller town exhibitor, it is to him that we express ourselves on the subject of Sound Movies. Take any average theatre in any average medium sized town and figure the cost of installing the better known synchronizing apparatus, plus the added cost for operators, maintenance, "acts" and synchronized version of features, and you have a "tough" problem to figure out whether it is going to be a paying proposition even if it does increase new business or stimulate the old business.

The candid advice of this writer, especially to exhibitors in the smaller towns and cities is: Go Slow. There should be no particular rush at this time. Better to wait a little while.

Reader opinions on this subject will be welcomed for publication. This invitation is not only extended to those who can talk from their own experience, but also from those who have some opinion on the subject. There is nothing that can throw as much light on this important subject as the voice of the man who must eventually decide whether THEY will have to install sound equipment and run such pictures.

Timing the Drive for "Big" Films

An open discussion of any subject is good for everyone concerned and for this reason we seek the opinion of our members on the following subject: In preparing the advance campaign for a "big" picture, is it advisable to start the advertising too far in advance?

By "too far in advance" we mean three or four weeks ahead of the actual play dates. The picture, the theatre and the town are all contributing factors in a discussion of this kind and what is good advice in one place may be bad in another. But there must be a law of averages and that is what we are looking for.

On certain pictures, we ourselves, began a very early teaser campaign and gradually worked up to about a week before the opening of the attraction, only to find that for some reason it had grown a little stale. The edge, so to speak, had sort of worn off.

At other times we withheld all advance advertising on a big picture other than the usual "coming" note on our program and in the lobby. But about a week to ten days before the opening we went at it in a big way, with very successful results.

Don't "you" think that too much plugging, too far in advance on a picture is apt to make your patrons go to some other town to see the picture? That is, if there is "some other town" for them to go to. Especially if you are within twenty-five miles of a larger city.

I have had a lot of letters on this subject and would like to publish your opinion for our members on this subject. Let me have a line or two, either giving your own experiences or your opinion on the matter. It will be appreciated.

To Build or Not To Build Stars

Here is a subject that we know will bring down a flood of protest, criticism and "what not." But we are torn between our own views and loyalty to the Club.

First: if we advise taking some unknown star and build her up in our own towns, then the exchanges may be asking a big price the next season for this star.

Box Office Problems

Second: if we have bought a block of pictures in which some comparatively new star is being featured, and we do not build up a following for her among our patrons, then we are neglecting to make the most of the pictures in which she (or he) are featured.

So we risk "our all" (sounds dramatic) in order that this very important question should find some sort of an answer from the members of the Club.

What do you think?

"We" found ourselves with Glenn Tryon due to make his appearance in quite a few pictures this past season and had to build him up with our patrons, knowing full well that perhaps next season the other house might buy Universal and cash in on what we had done for Tryon. But as we live in the present, and money in the bank is worth more than money next season, we went after Glenn and plugged him until every trailer announcing him brought a round of applause from the audience.

Were we right or were we wrong?

If the response is as lively as the discussion which started last week when we talked this over with a dozen exhibitors, then the Club pages are going to ring with the various ideas and opinions that our members have on this subject.

We await "your" own reaction to this question.

City Censors Cannot Use Police to Prevent Shows

City boards of motion picture censors are without authority to use police power to prevent the showing of films, according to a decision handed down last week in Camden Chancery Court. The decision affects the entire state and was the result of an injunction sought by a lawyer representing a Camden theatre adjoining the police department and the Camden board of censors from interfering with the showing of a picture which was said to be unfit for exhibition.

The contention of the lawyer representing the theatre that the legislature of the state had given the cities no authority to use police power to stop showings of motion pictures and that boards of censors being creations of the city, were without power, was upheld by the court.

Friends of M. C. Upchurch, old time exhibitor in Oklahoma, were saddened by the news of his death which occurred Tuesday, July 3rd at the home of his son, Leo, in Walters, Oklahoma.

Mr. Upchurch has for a number of years been connected with the Empire Theatre, Eldorado, Liberty Theatre, Lonewolf, Rialto Theatre, Fletcher and Empire Theatre at Olustee. He had recently disposed of his theatre interests and had gone to Walters to assist his son in opening a new house at that place, The Grand, after which he had planned on an extended vacation.

U. P. Papers Aid Drive

Exhibitors Using Cooperative Stunts as Main Feature of Campaigns to Feature "Telling the World"

A MAJORITY of the campaigns in Key Cities for "Telling the World" have been built around the cooperation which newspapers using the U. P. Service have accorded theatremen. The main interest of these newspapers is based on the fact that the story visualized in the film was written by a U. P. writer, Dale Van Avery.

This newspaper cooperation has proved especially effective to exhibitors located in towns where there is a paper taking the U. P. news or feature service, as the majority of such publications have extended great assistance to the exhibitors in putting over "Telling the World."

Thus far the eampaigns have followed along three lines: the publication of the serial version of the story; the running of Anita Page Resemblance Contests and the display of printer-telegraph machines in the lobbies of theatres, wherever this is practical.

At the Pantages theatre in Salt Lake City, Utah, the Salt Lake Telegram, a U. P. newspaper, tied up to Manager Pemberton's campaign for some very effective publicity for both the theatre and the newspaper. The Western Union Company, which does a great deal of the U. P. work, also assisted in this campaign.

A printer-telegram machine and operator were installed in the lobby of the theatre during the run of the film. The operator of the machine typed off the news notices as they came over the wire and this attracted great crowds to the front of the theatre. The printer-telegraph machine, familiarly known to newspaper men as "the iron mike," was in the lobby for a week in advance and during the run of the picture. A square place was roped off in the midst of the lobby and furnished in real newspaper style as a city room with dummy editors and reporters. A humorous twist was made to this display and it went over very big in connection with the printer.

The San Diego Sun is also arranging to use this stunt when the film reaches San Diego, and in New York the U. P. people plan to put a set of machines to work in this exploitation work. Were it not for the difficulty of obtaining "iron mikes" this same stunt could be done in every town where there is a paper on the U. P. service, but, even as it is, this exploitation idea can be used in many towns.

In Cleveland they also used the "Anita Page Resemblance Contest" with marked results. This contest is merely to find the girl who most resembles Anita Page, the leading lady of "Telling the World." To the ten girls most resembling Anita Page in Cleveland, they gave autographed pictures of Miss Page. Other prizes have been used in other cities. The Cleveland Press, the newspaper with which the theatre made a tie-up, reported a great increase in circulation, due to this contest and serialization. The theatre also benefited materially.

War Scene Staged as Advance Ad for "Patent Leather Kid"

IN addition to his trailograph announcement of the coming of "The Patent Leather Kid," W. H. Cornwell, manager of the National theatre, Marysville, Calif., "advanced" the picture with a special stage display of unusual value. Against a printed heavy paper backdrop of mountains and trees he constructed on the stage a section of a battle trench, with barbed wire, sacks of sand for the parapet, etc. At the right were five figures of Richard Barthelmess, cut out of the 6-sheet posters and mounted, each carrying a rifle, advancing to the attack. After showing the trailograph, the screen arose upon the above scene, with the sound of a motor tractor to represent a tank off stage. The National Guard helped stage the display, furnishing nine men. One came out in advance of the tank, with eight following it across the stage. In the turret of the tank, Cornwell placed a shot gun and five blank shots were fired from this while the tank was in sight of the audience. In the dug-outs were two machine guns which fired 200 rounds of blank shells.

The display was exhibited for four nights previous to the opening date and was witnessed by about 4,000 persons. It received a big hand at every showing. Cornwell placed the tank in front of the theatre during the day, but without running the tractor. Above the marquee were the five cutout figures of Barthelmess used in the stage setting.

Gets Display for "Warming Up" with Ball Bulletin

Russell B. Moon, director of publicity for the Paramount theatre, New York City, designed a special baseball bulletin, featuring Richard Dix in "Warming Up," Paramount's first sound picture, with which he obtained displays in several sporting goods shops and soda fountains. The bulletin, 14 by 20 inches, contained scenes from the picture and the type matter, in two colors, gave the current week's schedule of baseball games, descriptions of the "Warming Up" scenes and theatre play dates.

Showmanship

H. D. GROVE, manager of the Riviera Theatre in Waterloo, Ia., recently gave the people of that town opportunity to to try their skill at letter writing for valuable awards of merchandise and theatre passes. The contest was built up around Grove's presentation of "Telling the World." Local merchants joined heartily in the enterprise, which proved a good business builder for all concerned. Nine merchants cooperated with Grove in the contest, in which there were 10 prizes, each valued at $25 for the best letter lauding the merchandise of the merchants participating. A person could write a letter to each of the nine merchants and theatre with the possibiliy of winning all the prizes. The contest was announced in a double-truck ad, in which "Telling the World" was prominently featured.

CAPITALIZING on the great amount of public interest that has been aroused locally in the Shamokin, Pa., baseball team, the management of the Stanley Theatre in that city has offered to entertain the entire team at picture shows in the theatre whenever they vanquish a particularly formidable rival. On occasions when the team has been entertained, following a victory, there has been a marked increase of paid admissions from enthusiastic baseball fans.

THERE is a lively summertime contest on among theatres of Shenandoah, Pa., to hold juvenile patrons at weekly Saturday afternoon matinees. Three theatres are specializing on such attractions and charging ten cents admittance. The Strand advertises that it will present a package of "Chicken Dinner" confections to each child attending on Saturday afternoon. The Capitol is luring the kiddies with gifts of "novelty jumping frogs," and the Lyric also is offering special inducements to the youngsters.

MANAGER GUY A. KENIMER planned an unusual ballyhoo some two weeks prior to the showing of "Ladies of the Mob" at the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville. Free tickets were given to the school children good only if the holders participated in a parade that was to be held the Saturday afternoon prior to the picture's opening. Two cut-outs of Clara Bow headed the parade, followed in order by four banners reading, "Here We Are, Ladies of the Mob, "Starting Tomorrow," and "Florida Theatre." The parade was given advance publicity by throwing a slide on the screen.

BIG BOY, INC., Sandwich Shops and Restaurants, New York City, feature half-column star cuts of "Big Boy" Educational's four-year-old star, on their printed menus and also on their checks. In addition, a sandwich is featured as a "Big Boy Special," while further credit is given "Big Boy" elsewhere on the menu.

THE children's matinee at the Palace Theatre, Jacksonville, Saturday morning, under auspices of the Better Films Committee, is steadily increasing in attendance, according to report. A contest each Saturday adds to the interest.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Announcement advertisement featuring sound pictures at the McVickers theatre, Chicago. The line "the screen will come to real life" was featured in the advance campaign

Selling Sound Pictures in Newspaper Displays

ILLUSTRATED above are newspaper displays which show various ideas employed by first run theatres to sell sound pictures. Up to the present there has been little in the way of either newspaper ideas or exploitation stunts for talking pictures that differs greatly from the routine type of motion picture exploitation.

The vast majority of the theatres featuring sound films adhere to the slogan "See and Hear." The State theatre in Detroit, however, appears to have struck upon a more vigorous line with the slogan "The State Screen Speaks." As an effort to visualize screen dialogue the ads for the Stillman theatre illustrated above are the most successful of any which have come to the attention of this department.

The ads shown have been collected over a period of several months, and they illustrate practically all of the layout and copy ideas developed by theatre advertisers up to the present.

Key City Reports

New York City

SOME rather sensational performances at the box offices of Broadway houses over the past week-end—though they will figure in the totals of the current week, and this report is concerned with business done the previous week—insinuate themselves into the lead of this recital of events occurring at the theatres along the Great White Way. Thus we are led to record first the fact that Paramount's first sound picture, "Warming Up," crashed through for the biggest week-end figures the Paramount theatre has known since its formal opening in the fall of 1926; that the Roxy with "Street Angel, sound equipped also, had a take of over $50,000 for the first two days of the current run; that the second week of "Lights of New York," the first all-talkie, duplicated its first week-end; and that "Telling the World" at the Capitol started off with a rush. The weather over the week-end, rainy on Saturday, must be credited with contributing something to this happy state of affairs, but the fact remains that there appears to be a renewed interest in the films as a result of the publicity written around and about talking pictures.

The week starting July 7 brought many disappointments and only a few totals that were better than merely satisfactory. The Strand on its opening week with "Lights of New York" scored heavily, bringing in at the box office a total, when the receipts from a special midnight opening are included, that climbed close to the $50,000 mark—a splendid showing for a house of that capacity. The Paramount, with "The Racket," did an excellent business—the Thomas Meighan vehicle showing so well that it goes into the Rialto on Saturday for two weeks or more. "The Actress" at the Capitol showed strength, and succeeded in running up a total that was considered quite good in the face of the adverse theatregoing weather which prevailed.

The Roxy fared not so well, dropping well under $80,000 on the week, which brought "Hit of the Show" as the main attraction. This represents poor going for an enterprise with such an overhead as the Roxy has. The Rialto did a satisfactory business with "The Man Who Laughs" in its first week. The picture closes there Saturday. "The King of Kings" hardly shapes up as the sort of picture that would lure patrons during hot weather, and that is the way it went in its first week at the Rivoli. The De Mille spectacle had a sound accompaniment (not so successfully rendered in the early days of the engagement owing to some difficulties arising over the use of a Photophone recorded film in a Movietone machine).

A German production, "The Loves of Jean Ney," and a revival of Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" were the features which the Cameo held forth to invite the customers, but there was little response, and the little house on 42d street got nothing in particular in the way of income.

Among the two-a-day film houses on Broadway one is now dark—"Trail of '98" closed Sunday, after 17 weeks at the Astor. That house is now being wired, and will reopen with M-G-M's "White Shadows," with a synchronized score. The Gaiety, where "Fazil" is hanging on merely to keep things running while the rent goes on, is to house an Arctic tale now being synchronized.

Even "Wings," the old boy of the two-a-day films, has felt the pinch of hot weather and the effects of a long stay on Broadway. The Criterion box office has not been rushed these past few weeks.

On the other hand, the Embassy up the street a ways, did very well with "Tempest," originally booked in for ten weeks—which conclude Saturday—but now due to be held over. The Globe, with "The Red Dance," is holding its own, and the same may be said of Warners, where "The Lion and the Mouse" offers sight and sound dramatics.

Los Angeles

COOL evenings and numerous tourists visiting in and near Los Angeles have served to boost business in general. A marked improvement over several previous weeks is reported and it is not uncommon to see long lines of people waiting for admission in front of down-town and Hollywood houses.

Loew's State packed them in during the run of "The Cossacks" with Jack Gilbert's name in electrics on the marquee. Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "The Detectives," followed and opened to good attendance.

"The Racket" succeeded "Telling the World" at the Metropolitan and opened to splendid business. Thomas Meighan is the star and it appears Meighan's name, coupled with the satisfaction the thriller is giving, is keeping the box-office lively.

The opening of "Lilac Times," Colleen Moore's latest, was an event. The Carthay Circle sold out several days in advance and seats for the second day went on sale as soon as the sell-out prevented the accommodating of numerous patrons who applied for first night seats. Indications are that "Lilac Time" will clean up on the engagement.

There was no falling off of business at Warner Brothers theatre in Hollywood during the run of "Tenderloin." It packed them, and much interest is evidenced in "Women Men Talk About," another Vitaphone attraction which opened there on Monday.

United Artists theatre, which played the world premiere of "The Toilers," opened to big business and continued at above the average.

Indianapolis

BUSINESS generally picked up in Indianapolis houses last week. Downtown houses had a very satisfactory business for the seven day period.

Richard Barthelmess in "The Wheel of Chance" at the Indiana Theatre and Lionel Barrymore in the Vitadrama "The Lion and the Mouse" at the Apollo drew heavily.

The Barrymore picture was held another week at the Apollo because of its extreme popularity last week. The Indiana is understood to be planning installation of Vitaphone in a few weeks, probably maintaining the stage band policy only at the Circle.

Norma Shearer in "The Actress" did good business at the Palace in connection with Harry Fox's stage production. Fox has been retained for a four week engagement, it is understood.

Ramon Navarro in "A Certain Young Man" was the Circle attraction and played to fair crowds all week.

Neighborhood houses reported a slight gain in box office receipts. The weather was favorable for movies all week.

Cincinnati

DESPITE a short break in the excessively hot weather which prevailed for a continuous period, business in Cincinnati during the past week is characterized as being "even," which means that it was worse than the preceding seven days.

Norma Shearer in "The Actress," at the Lyric, got probably as good a break as any of the opposition attractions. The all-star revival of "Trelawney of the Wells" which played here last season, left a big following, and this, undoubtedly, helped put the picture over, especially as the management was particular to impress upon the public that the picture was based on the stage play.

The Albee, with Richard Barthelmess in vaudeville acts, did a fair business throughout the week, although the Sunday opening promised a much better week.

"Hangman's House," together with the "talkies" as added attractions, did not set any new attendance records.

Keith's, with Meighan in "The Racket," was practically on a par with the week previous, which is referred to as not "such a much."

"The Silver Slave" at the Strand had only medium returns, which is also true of "Fleetwing," first-half at the Family, and "Bare Knees" for last half at same house.

Palace, vaudeville and pictures, maintained a reasonably steady flow, while the neighborhood houses report that there was nothing to cause undue hilarity when checking up the box office for last week.

The outdoor resorts, all of which have been greatly improved this season, had good crowds for the entire week, which causes managers to feel that the weather alone is responsible for the present slump.

Atlanta

ALTHOUGH predicted to have a poor week due to continuous rains, Atlanta theatres went one better than the previous week, a 100 per cent sunshiner. Honors were about equally divided among the larger houses.

John Gilbert and Renee Adoree brought good houses to Loew's Grand with "The Cossacks."

Next door at the Howard, although not doing capacity, Richard Barthelmess in"The Wheel of Chance" drew well.

"The Grip of the Yukon" plus the Eviston-Napier players offering their version of "Not Tonight Dearie" enjoyed good houses.

Keith's Georgia had a creditable week showing Florence Vidor in "The Magnificent Flirt" plus good vaudeville.

A return engagement of "The Jazz Singer" to the Metropolitan was so successful that it is scheduled for a second week, making a two months' run for that picture in Atlanta, by far the record run for a single picture here. Two weeks usually usher out the most talked of gem.

At the Rialto Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in "Lady Be Good" proved popular.

Three westerners. "Men of Daring," "Wizard of the Saddle" and "Riding for Fame" held a strong fort for the Tudor, while a second run week brought the usual large box-office for the New Alamo.

Cleveland

THE hottest week of the summer, with the temperature hovering around 90 degrees most of the time, was not conducive to big attendance at the local theatres. All of them suffered in proportion to the quality of the attractions on display. Of course, the house with cooling plants suffered less than those without this equipment. Most of the downtown business was attributed to the lower atmosphere in the theatres rather than a picture urge.

In spite of the heat, and with the addition of cooling system, the Stillman did satisfactory summer business during the second week of "The Cossacks." The last few days cooled off and business jumped correspondingly. This picture was universally pleasing.

"The Wheel of Chance" did fairly well at the Allen, also artificially cooled. The picture is a great character study and has considerable appeal. Richard Barthlemess does the dual role in interesting fashion. Fine entertainment.

"Steamboat Bill," Buster Keaton's latest picture for United Artists, is among the best comedies on the market, according to local critics. Business was fairly good, considering the heat. The State is also artificially cooled, which accounts for even a fair report.

"Hangman's House" was just moderately successful at the Palace, where artificial breezes and a good vaudeville bill should have drawn crowds. The picture is beautiful and has charm.

"Under the Tonto Rim" and "Midnight Madness" shared the week's honors at Keith's East 105th Street, each with moderate success." "Under the Tonto Rim" proved an average western made up of action and love interest, supplied in equal parts according to the accepted formula. "Midnight Madness" was satisfactory as a program picture.

The Park offered first-run neighborhood runs of "Street of Sin" and "Detectives,' both with just fair success. Neighborhood house business was negligible.

Seattle

A WEEK a little above the average for this time of year was reported by the first run houses of this city last week. Topping the list for the second consecutive week was the Fifth Avenue Theatre. The attraction was "Telling the World," which did a fine business, due to "Haines' popularity and strong exploitation. The stage show was Fanchon-Marco's "Bird Idea." It was the weakest in some time, but Hermie King and the Fifth Avenue Band put across two musical specialties that stopped every show and went for four and five encores. Business very good.

At the Seattle Theatre, runner-up, the attraction was "Diamond Handcuffs." The picture was not strong, but it was different and pleased most audiences. The box office was helped very much by the personal appearance of Lena Malena, one of the stars of the picture, who enacted on the stage the dance she did in the film, and then appeared briefly in the Publix stage show, "Roman Nights," which was well received. A week a bit above the recent average.

The Blue Mouse Theatre continued to play to capacity evening houses and strong matinee business with "The Lion and the Mouse." It was the second week for this film, and it goes into a third week with very little apparent decline in the box office. Supporting Vitaphone acts leaned a bit too much toward the dialogue, as opposed to musical numbers, but got a few laughs. Movietone and a color film rounded out a bill that is still clicking big money.

At the United Artists Theatre, "The Raider Emden" was the attraction, and it played to very pleasing business. It was a very interesting film, and was well liked by every audience. Strong press reports and exploitation at the theatre helped put over a good week's gross, considering the 25 cents policy.

The Columbia Theatre fared only to a mediocre stage with "Rose of the Golden West." It was a fairly good film, but lacked any great appeal and played to just average houses.

At Universal's Winter Garden Theatre, "The Patent Leather Kid" at 25 cents, second run, went over for a very good week, and was held over for a few additional days. The musical score with Jan Sofer conducting the enlarged orchestra was a drawing card in itself. Good business.

The Orpheum celebrated the inauguration of its return to the $1 top, reserved seat policy, with "We're All Gamblers" on the screen and Lerdo's Mexican Band on the stage. The stage bill was superior, but the film was a welcome improvement, though not strong, over the former pictures that this house has featured.

Pantages fared not so well with "Don't Marry," which was not a very strong box office title or film.

The Embassy Theatre and other downtown first and second runs played to average business, and neighborhood houses continued below normal.

Albany

THE Vitaphone proved its drawing power in the hottest summer weather Albany has seen in many a day. The Mark Strand theatre using "The Lion and the Mouse" with Vitaphone synchronization during the past week, when the mercury stood in the nineties day after day, filled the house each evening, something that no other motion picture house in Albany found itself able to do during the week. The picture started off well on Monday and received much favorable comment in the newspapers, which, of course, helped out. In addition to the feature, there were two Vitaphone presentations, one by the Brox Sisters and the other by Cruse Brothers. The fact that the Vitaphone was able to successfully combat torrid weather has set many of the other owners of first run houses in Albany to considering the advisability of Vitaphone or similar installation.

The Mark Ritz theatre in Albany used "Freckles" to a fair business throughout the week.

Business fell off at the Leland, where George O'Brien in "Honor Bound" was used as the feature. It was simply too hot

Business was also off at the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, where double features are the rule and where "Ham and Eggs at the Front" and "Wandering Girls" were used.

The neighborhood houses report business as having been poor during the past week, although it was noticeable in both the first run and subsequent run houses, that one the one cool evening of the week, business picked up and served as an indication of what can be expected along with the fall days.

In the neighboring city of Troy, "Tenderloin," running the entire week at the Troy theatre, and also using the Vitaphone, proved itself one of the best business getters of the recent months, and in fact the theatre had receipts probably in excess of any hot week in the history of the house. The public took to the picture and both matinees and evenings were well attended.

The Lincoln theatre in Troy used "A Certain Young Man" to rather mediocre business the fore part of the week, and during the last three days, used double features, "Broadway Daddies" and "Green Grass Widows," But without gaining any crowds of which to boast. Neighborhood houses in Troy complained last week, saying that business was decidedly off.

Portland

(Previous Week)

THE continued cool weather last week tended to increase somewhat attendance at the first run houses, and in consequence took considerable business from the outside attractions. This was especially true on the Fourth of July when all houses reported an exceptionally nice business.

"Sally of the Scandals" drew well at the Oriental and Bessie Love interpreted the perfect representation of a "downstage" trouper. On the stage Katherine Laidlaw gave a diverting and spectacular dance the "baloon swirl." "Sunshine" and "Coquette" were featured by the Oriental ballet. Josef Srodka and orchestra and Glenn Shelley at the organ contributed to the musical fare.

Three outstanding artists, Norma Talmadge, Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery, give the best they've got to "The Dove," which was given some novel advertising by Manager Bert Levy, but United Artists have given us much better offerings in the past. Box office reported only fair returns. Atmospheric music by Joseph Sampietro's orchestra was enjoyed, and included Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts."

Another outstanding bill was presented at the Broadway and Bebe Daniels increased her popularity here with "Hot News." Packed houses were the rule especially in evening performances. Fanchon and Marco's "Radio-Television Idea" was by far the cleverest idea they have had yet with a number of enjoyable stars in the cast. Georgie Stoll and his band provide an excellent musical backing.

Lena Malena in person on the stage and also on the screen at the Portland, in "Diamond Handcuffs" made a double attraction and pleased many. Box office returns showed slight increase over previous weeks.

Pantages did a nice week's business with Fagan and his Band as headliners and on the screen "Chicken a la King" with our old friend Ford Sterling furnishing a host of laughs.

"The Lion and the Mouse" at the Blue Mouse for the third week, continues to play to good business.

Neighborhood houses report only average business for the week, and this was also true of the second-run houses down town.

Minneapolis

THE weather was cooler last week in Minneapolis, and the pictures were a little bit stronger, so business took a slight turn for the better.

The State did a very nice business with "The Lion and the Mouse," advertising it as the first spoken drama of the screen," and the film seemed to have a very general appeal.

The Minnesota, too, had a picture which drew in the crowds, William Haines in "Telling the World." This film was supplemented by the Publix stage show, "Galloping On."

Zane Grey's "Vanishing Pioneer" pleased the western fans at the Lyric, while Rod La Rocque in "Hold 'Em Yale" seemed a popular feature of the Hennepin-Orpheum vaudeville program.

Pantages showed Lois Moran in "Love Hungry," but the real attraction was the appearance of the four winning couples in the recent Minneapolis dance marathon.

The Lagoon and Loring theatres, neighborhood houses, did good business with Emil Jannings in "Street of Sin," while the other outlying houses were doing about the average trade with such films as "Hangman's House," "Night Flyer," "The Big City," and "Love and Learn."

The Grand, one of the smaller loop theatres, attempted a revival week with fair success, showing such films as "The Gold Rush," "Dream Street," "The Eagle,' and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

Baltimore

THE week beginning July 9 was very hot here, accompanied by plenty of rain, and this weather curtailed business at the first-run theatres here to a great degree.

The best attendance in town was at Loew's Century, where Clara Bow and Richard Arlen appeared in "Ladies of the Mob," with a stage presentation act entitled "Main Street to Broadway" with Ted Claire and other vaudeville headliners. Business throughout the week there held up excellently.

Next in line for good business was Loew's Valencia, where John Gilbert and Renee Adoree were co-starred in "The Cossacks." During the second week of that attraction at that playhouse the patronage held up very well.

"Chained," the Ufa production, starring Benjamin Christiansen and directed by him, did good business at the Little theatre, the Motion Picture Guild's house of 250 seats. It started off poorly but went up very good during the latter part of the week. This picture was billed as the same type of story as "The Captive."

At the 4,000 seat Stanley "Three Ring Marriage," co-starring Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor, proved a fairly good drawing card, while "Eight Bells," the stage attraction headed by Buddy Page, was also on the bill.

Attendance was only fair at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, where "Modern Mothers,' with Helene Chadwick and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was the feature film attraction with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville. The picture was weak, the story being only for about three reels of picture.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden theatre "Buck Privates" held forth with Lya de Putti and Malcolm McGregor playing the leading parts. Business through the week was only fair. The six acts of Keith-Albee high class vaudeville had Silver King, the dog star, on the program in person.

Ottawa

HOT weather with occasional heavy rains did not encourage theatre attendance at Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of July 9, but, at the same time, "Ramona" lived up to expectations and hope for its second week at the Regent theatre. Only one night was there a small attendance and that was due to a severe storm.

Another feature that held its own despite the temperature was "Skirts," starring Syd Chaplin at the Imperial. It was found to be excellent entertainment of a light nature—just what the people wanted, it seemed.

A well-balanced show, having substantial entertainment value, was seen at B. F. Keith's, but patronage was somewhat off. The attraction was "The Showdown," which was a fine dramatic production in itself and pleased the crowd generally.

Manager Dan Stapleton split the week at the Centre with "Figures Don't Lie" and "Nevada." The former was rated highly by patrons and Esther Ralston was well liked as usual. Patronage was only fair for "Nevada," although Gary Cooper was excellent in the star role.

The Columbia theatre gave a big program with "Collegiate," starring Alberta Vaughan, as the feature. The result was fair. The Columbia neighborhood prefers Westerns and melodramas. Other pictures included an instalment of "Masked Menace," comedy and news weekly, with a bit of vaudeville thrown in.

The bill at the Fern theatre looked good to the regulars there and the crowd was up to the summer average. It included "Gun Gospel," a comedy, "Swim Princess;" a chapter of "Hawk of the Hills" and a novelty film.

Tom Tyler in "Tom's Gang" and other subjects, including a serial, comedy and news weekly, drew the usual July audiences to the Rex theatre.

The Laurier theatre in Hull, Quebec, had a double bill that was seen by a fair turnout. "Man and Woman," known as "Man, Woman and Sin," before the censors got busy, failed to arouse enthusiasm, while "The Wife's Relations" was considered better.

"Why Sailors Go Wrong" was the attraction at the Eden theatre and it was a good hot-weather hit.

Chicago

BREAKING of a house record, a very unusual event for several months in Chicago, was reported last week at McVickers Theatre, where "The Street Angel," the feature which inaugurated the new Movietone and Vitaphone policy at this house, the box office exceeding that of "The Big Parade," or the biggest week of Paul Ash's engagement.

Two other loop houses had exceptional weeks, the Roosevelt, which was starting its new era of entertainment with Movietone and Vitaphone, the feature picture being "Sunrise," Fox's Movietone and other good short subjects, and the United Artists theatre with D. W. Griffith's "Drums of Love" as its offering.

"Wheel of Chance," in which Barthelmess pleased critics and public, played to satisfactory business at the Chicago, and the talking picture, "The Lion and the Mouse," ended its extended run at the Orpheum to fair business.

"Bringing Up Father" was the screen attraction at the Oriental, where Al Kvale and his gang headed a peppy stage show.

Outside of the loop, business was deemed satisfactory, considering weather conditions, extremely hot temperature holding down theatre attendance somewhat at the majority of Chicago's houses.

Pittsburgh

FIVE Pittsburgh first run theatres are closed for the summer months, the largest number of theatres ever to be closed simultaneously in this city. Consequently the few houses remaining open for business, are compiling better than average box-office receipts.

Loew's Penn had an excellent week's business with John Gilbert in "The Cossacks." The crowds seemed to like the thrills as well as the love-making of Gilbert and Renee Adoree. The stage presentation consisted of the Publix Unit "Step This Way," featuring Mitzi Mayfair, talented juvenile dancer.

The Stanley had one of their best weeks since the opening several months ago. The screen attraction was "Ladies of the Mob," starring Clara Bow, a big favorite with local picture fans. The stage offering was entitle "All Aboard," and featured Bert Lewis, who made quite a hit with the audience here.

At the Grand, Richard Dix in "Easy Come, Easy Go," got better than average business. One vaudeville act was presented in addition to showing of newsreel and comedy.

The Cameraphone tried a revival week, changing attractions each day. Used films starring Pickford and Fairbanks as well as two of the D. W. Griffith productions. Business was good.

Viola Dana, movie star, was here in person, appearing in a vaudeville skit at the Sheridan Square Theatre the first three days, and at the Harris Theatre the last three days of the week. Miss Dana proved a very good drawing card, and was greeted with much applause upon her every entrance.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE theatre managers are jubilant over the break the weather gave them last week which helped to keep their theatres filled throughout the entire run. The week was unusually cool and as a consequence business was brisk.

The Garden theatre showing "The Lion and the Mouse," was filled at every performance and the picture is being held over for a second week.

The Merrill theatre held them out practically every evening waiting for a chance to crowd in to see the feature "The Cossacks" which will also be offered at this theatre for another week.

Things were not quite so lively at the Alhambra where "Eternal Silence" was featured.

"The Street of Sin" combined with a good stage presentation succeeded in keeping the Wisconsin well filled.

The Strand fared not so well with "Mademoiselle from Armentieres."

The Orpheum as usual enjoyed good business with "Walking Back" as the photoplay feature.

The Riverside offered "The Chorus Kid" to fairly good houses.

The Modjeska, Uptown and Garfield featured "The Yellow Lily" with very satisfying results.

"Road to Ruin" was the offering of the Oriental and Tower. Business here was fair. The Venetian did very well with "The Spotlight."

"The Devil Dancer" drew very well at the Milwaukee and National.

Salt Lake City

THE attendance at the first run motion pictures of Salt Lake was slightly under par this past week as a general rule, due to the call of out-door recreations, although some very good reports have also been made.

The Capitol theatre enjoyed fairly large attendance, having as a special drawing card the local winner of the "Opportunity Contest" held recently, featured in the Fanchon and Marco "Opportunity Idea" on the stage, in connection with the picture production, "Lady Be Good."

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Circus Rookies," was very favorably received at the Pantages in addition to the vaudeville performance offered at this house.

May McAvoy and Lionel Barrymore in "The Lion and the Mouse" was held over for a second week's run at the Victory with record business continuing.

"The Road to Ruin," a special Fox production, has been an unusually good drawing card at the American, this past week, with satisfactory results being had.

Rod LaRocque in "Hold 'Em Yale," with Jeanette Loff, Hugh Allen and Tom Kennedy, has played to fairly good sized houses at the Gem theatre during the wek.

The second run of Lon Chaney in "The Big City" did good business at the Rialto, and Mary Pickford in "My Best Girl" played to satisfactory attendance.

William Boyd in "The Skyscraper" received a fair share of attention and attendance at the Tower theatre.

San Francisco

(Previous Week)

DURING the past week, the El Captain, San Francisco's newest and largest theatre, and Loew's Warfield did remarkable business, not only for this time of the year, but for any time as well, as crowds flocked to these two theatres the entire week.

The El Capitan showed the picture, "We Americans," besides special acts. This picture would have been held over for a second week had not another picture been advertised.

At Loew's Warfield Theatre, William Haines, well liked here, starred in the picture, "Telling the World," which together with the presentation act, "Bath Tub," crowded that theatre all week.

"The Man Who Laughs," shown at the Columbia Theatre at advanced prices, did a wonderful business the first four days, including the Fourth, but the balance of the week business was only considered fair. Conrad Veidt, the star, appeared in person and was well received.

In the Granada Theatre, "Ladies of the Mob," together with the Publix Surprise Show, did fairly well.

"The Four Sons," shown at the St. Francis, continues to draw many to that theatre. While during the past week this theatre was not crowded, due to the weather and the holiday, one could see how very popular this picture is, otherwise so many would not have come here on its third week showing.

"The Lion and the Mouse" played to fair crowds at the Embassy Theatre, but not to as many as were expected.

"The Count of Ten," together with vaudeville acts, drew fair numbers to the Golden Gate Theatre.

An average number saw "Turn Back the Hours" and "Opening Night," together with vaudeville acts at the Union Square. It is thought more would attend this theatre if the construction of a new building next to it would not drive many away from the street.

"The Divine Woman" at the Alexandria and "Tea For Three," together with acts, at the Coliseum Theatres, attracted good crowds.

San Diego

ALTHOUGH "The Jazz Singer," featuring Al Jolson, had a run for five weeks at the Plaza, establishing a new record for continuous showing in San Diego, the film was brought back and held forth at the Superba for two weeks.

"Glorious Betsy," during its presentation at the Plaza, was found to be an interesting picture, with its Vitaphone features, but it did not quite come up to expectations from the box-office standpoint.

With the vogue which almost any Chaplin picture enjoys, the showing of "The Circus," at the West Coast Cabrillo meant a big attendance and it certainly attained that record. It meant also an evening of fun to see the picture and every patron come away with a smile—a smile which was reflected on the faces of the house staff for the capacity attendances during the two week's stay of the feature were most cheering.

When "Ramona" came to the West Coast California it came with the prestige which the name "Ramona" has gained in and about San Diego, for it was here that Helen Hunt Jackson, the author of the story, did much of her writing and research, and the name of the heroine is linked with places around here.

Just how long Chicago crime and underworld pictures will continue to draw is a question, but "The Drag Net," shown at the West Coast California proved by the box-office receipts that such films still hold a strong interest here.

"The Raider Emden," shown for two weeks at the West Coast Cabrillo, held attendance well throughout that period. General Manager Hartman of the West Coast houses found that two publicity stunts helped to keep the crowds coming.

The Plaza had the honor of bringing to San Diego the first talking picture, "The Lion and the Mouse," and it proved a wonderful drawing card at that house, which was also the first to bring the Vitaphone to this city.

New Orleans

(Previous Week)

WITH all downtown theatres showing strong pictures business during the past week showed a marked improvement over that of the previous seven-day period.

The biggest business of the first run houses was done by the rebeautified Tudor which introduced the Vitaphone to New Orleans. Every performance was packed to capacity and the Saenger Theatre-company officials decided to keep the inaugural bill over an extra week. The feature picture was "Glorious Betsy," with Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello. In addition three acts of Vitaphone vaudeville featuring Mary Lewis, Van and Schenck and Waring's Pennsylvanians, were given. The inaugural address on the screen was by Will Hays, movie Czar.

For several weeks in adance the Saenger Theatres publicized and advertised the Vitaphone extensively thru the newspapers, billboards, show cards and other forms of advertising.

Next in order was the new Saenger Theatre which showed "Ladies of the Mob," with Clara Bow. The picture was highly entertaining and was featured in conjunction with a Publix stage show. The latter was not up to the average and it was "Ladies of the Mob" that turned them away satisfied.

Loew's State Theatre's business was slightly smaller than that of the week previous. "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," an English made film released through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was shown but did not go so well. The vaudeville bill was well-balanced and entertaining and whatever business was done by the Canal street playhouse can be credited to it.

"Buck Privates,' with Lya De Putti, Malcolm McGregor and Zasu Pitts was the Saenger Liberty theatre feature and the house's business showed much improvement over previous weeks. This rollicking tale of doughboys in the land of frauleins was well liked.

The Orpheum Theatre showed "Walking Back" with Sue Carol and it proved a delightful film. Business at the University Place playhouse was up to average. Five strong acts supported the film.

Colleen Moore and Edmund Lowe pulled them in at the Strand theatre in "Happiness Ahead," and those who saw it were well satisfied. The Strand celebrated its eleventh anniversary and the management was highly pleased with the fact that this picture was the feature of the anniversary week program.

"Hold 'Em Yale," with Rod La Rocque and Jeannette Loff, was the Trianon feature and although the picture had its local premiere elesewhere drew well. Pictures of this type always have been popular here.

Des Moines

"SLIGHTLY USED" at the Strand with May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel as fairly popular individual attractions, did a good business.

"The Circus" at the Des Moines Theatre held a big average for the week, although breaking no house records.

Summer stock opening at the Princess with "Merton of the Movies" met with fair enthusiasm but had no effect whatsoever on movie trade.

New Orleans

WITH all downtown first-run houses offering real summer time entertainment to their patrons, theatre business during the past week was much improved over that of the previous week.

The Tudor Theatre, where the Vitaphone presentation, "Glorious Betsy," with Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello, is in its third week, continues to attract large crowds at all performances. This form of entertainment has proven a most popular one with local showgoers. In addition to the feature film, three acts of Vitaphone vaudeville are on the program.

"Something Always Happens," with Esther Ralston, was the new Saenger Theatre attraction and drew well. The picture was different from any the palatial playhouse has shown in recent months, and in conjunction with an excellent stage bill, was well liked.

Loew's State Theatre featured Rin-Tin-Tin in "Rinty of the Desert" and business was excellent. The dog star and Tom Mix are two of the house's biggest drawing cards. All week business was good. Five sterling acts of vaudeville were coupled with the film.

The Strand featured "The Warning," with Jack Holt, and business showed much improvement over the previous week. The film was praised by those who saw it and by local newspaper reviewers.

Dolores Costello in "No Other Woman," was the Orpheum feature photoplay attraction and is credited with helping to bring them to the University Place playhouse. Little Jack Little was the stage headliner, but they've seen him before and heard him via radio so often that the picture is given all the credit.

Another New Orleans theatre closed its doors during the past week. This was the Trianon Theatre, formerly operated by the Saenger Theatres. This brings the total of New Orleans theatres closed for the summer season to five. Others closed are the Crescent, Tulane, St. Charles and Palace theatres.

Neighborhood theatres continue to do well.

Harrisburg, Pa.

HOT humid weather all week cut deeply into the receipts of all the picture houses.

Perhaps the theatre that suffered least through the extreme temperature was the Victoria, where Esther Ralston and Gary Cooper in "Half a Bride" held up well against the adverse conditions. Patrons who saw the play liked it immensely and classed it as good mid-summer entertainment.

Richard Barthelmess in "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" deserved better patronage than it received and the same may be said of "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," starring Buster Keaton and Ernest Torrence, at Loew's Regent. This latter picture had some marvelously good comedy of the stunt character and also light plot that kept the rather small audience in constant laughter.

The screen attraction the last half of the week at the State was George O'Brien in "Honor Bound." A sprightly Marcus revue on the vaudeville side of the program helped to stimulate attendance, which doubtless would have been larger in cooler weather.

The crowds seemed more inclined to patronize the swimming pools, and out-door dance pavilions than entertainment under roof.

The offering at the Grand part of the week was Jack Mulhall in "Pleasures of the Rich."

The Russell did fair business with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur in "Circus Rookies," while the Royal appealed for public approval with "The Great Deception," with Ben Lyon and Aileen Pringle starring.

Opinions on Pictures

The Cowboy Kid

Fair Western; Gagged Aplenty

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A FAIRLY effective western is this Rex Bell vehicle. Thickly strewn with gags, it constantly twits the old theme of western plots. The comedy is bundled out so readily that it overlaps the more serious touches. It seems certain that a better western would have emerged if the opportunities for comedy had been disregarded and a great deal more of earnest and dramtic action had been planted instead. This number is so spruced with laugh material that you can regard it as a western comedy or vice versa.

Bell is a youth of pleasing countenance and manner. Perhaps this is just the type of story in which he can best develop into a more competent performer. Most of the attributes of the screen's western heroes are his—horsemanship, athletic ability and pep. His latest is a fair western of average strength and is best gaited to win the approval of the neighborhood trade or out in the sticks where westerns are sure-fire.

The remainder of the cast does some good work, except for Mary Jane Temple, who is quite colorless. But the comedy sheriff and the comic cowboy and the other comic personalities score pretty consistently with their laugh endeavors.

Drawing Power: A fair enough offering for fans who like westerns. The star is a pleasant young man and breezy in his acting. Bill him as a good prospect. Exploitation Angles: The press book has a variety of ideas for putting the picture over. The various scenes offer several tie-up possibilities.

THEME: Comedy western of young cowboy who becomes entangled in the affairs of girl. The latter's father is the town's banker and the victim of various bank robberies. The cowboy captures the thieves, saves the father from financial ruin and along with his numerous other accomplishments wins the girl.

Produced and Distributed by Fox Films. Length, 4,293 feet. The Cast: Rex Bell, Mary Jane Temple, Brooks Benedict, Alice Belcher, Joe De Grasse, Sid Crossley, Billy Bletcher. Story by Henry Sinclair Drago and Seton I. Miller. Continuity by James B. Tynan. Cameraman, Sol Halperin. Director, Clyde Carruth.

Warming Up

Dix Has a Hot One Here

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BASEBALL stories are not expected to leave the familiar groove—not since Ring Lardner started the fashion several years ago with his rookie pitcher. The central figure must be a yokel up from the sticks, who gets into the Big League and wins the game for the World Series. This one is cut from such a design, but in its development it unfolds an assortment of new gags and incidents.

Besides, the sound accompaniment just about makes the picture aside from Richard Dix's very sincere and understanding performance. The remarkable point about the sound effects is that they were added after the picture was shot, and yet the synchronization is nearly perfect. The noise of bat meeting ball, the shouts of the fans, etc.—these are colorful factors toward making this a great hit for the boys and their old men.

Dix comes up from the bushes to become the star pitcher in the Big League team. The customary situation is at hand—two strikes and three balls—but even though you know what is coming it still carries a kick. Why? Because it is done well. Mike Donlin, the old-time Giant, worked in the film, and doubtless did considerable in establishing the realistic touches. There are comedy points here which help.

"Bee-Line" Tolliver comes to the Yankees wearing the watch fob with which he was decorated for popularity in the old-home town. And Richard Dix gives a great performance in the role. The camera is manipulated neatly. There are scenes in which it is placed immediately behind the pitcher's box. And the thrill follows in seeing the ball curve over the plate. The idea isn't so warm, but the action is all to the nifty and surely entertains. Jean Arthur makes a charming heroine who, as the club-owner's daughter, is won by the bush leaguer.

Drawing Power: Sure to prove popular with baseball fans, etc., and Dix' name. Exploitation Angles: Play up Dix and Mike Donlin, ex-ballplayer with the New York Giants. Play up the sound synchronization. Feature as lively picture of a baseball rookie.

THEME: Comedy romance of bush leaguer who wins the World Series and the girl to boot.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released July, 1928. The Cast: Richard Dix, Jean Arthur, Mike Donlin, Wade Boteler, Roscoe Karns, James Dugan, Claude King, Philo McCullough, Billy Kent Schaefer. Director, Fred Newmeyer.

"His Favorite Wife"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS comedy is one of the Van Bibber series. It is all as crazy as can be, but funny all the same. The gags are not unexpectedly original. Probably they have been seen before in various forms. Although they cannot be credited with newness, neither can it be said that they miss the spot. Stock laugh material is still rendered effective when handled with the certainty displayed in this chuckle number.

Tyler Brooke is Van Bibber, not the Van Bibber that Richard Harding Davis had in mind, but more of a comic Adolphe Menjou. Mary Ashcraft is his attractive wife while Vernon Dent and Flo Allen are the couple whose lot it is to put up with the unintentional pranks of Van Bibber. As the background is a steamer, many are the possibilities for funmaking. To augment the laugh situations, an escaped baboon frolics with Van Bibber and introduces a nervous reaction on the beholder which fits in nicely with the general effect of the comedy.

"Four Walls"

Underworld Story—Reliable Cast

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

JACK GILBERT, as Benny, a Jewish youth, still appeals to the feminine eye. But the part does not provide the scope that Gilbert's talents will stretch and only the painstaking direction of William Nigh lifts the picture which contains nothing new, to an attraction above the average. However, the direction and cast deserve all the credit for the story is less than ordinary.

Benny, leader of a "gang," resents opposition in any of his affairs, especially interference where his girl, Frieda, is concerned. Frieda, a girl with winning ways and promiscuous tendencies, is caught flirting openly with the leader of another gang and the trouble which ensues ends in a shooting. Benny, who shoots, perhaps in self-defense, nevertheless murders the intruder. He gets a sentence and is confined to four walls. But he is out in four years.

Months behind the bars serve to develop Benny's thinking apparatus. He becomes interested in things which previously found no place in his thought, undergoes reformation and when released, determines to go straight.

Circumstances tempt Benny to visit a rendezvous where associates of his former life are gathered for a frolic. There is a raid. In a fracas on the roof-top, Monk, Benny's ex-confederate, but now leader of the gang and suitor of Frieda, topples off the building. Suspicion falls upon Benny as well as upon Frieda, but it appears that a man who fell such a distance regained sufficient consciousness to exonerate both before his death.

Many of the scenes are pregnant with action—filled with gunplay and exciting incidents, leading to an exceedingly dramatic climax. Evidently the story designs to expose the undying devotion of Benny, a crook who goes straight, to a faithless girl, who finally intends to. Anyway, because of Frieda, Benny temporarily forgets all he learned in four years within four walls.

There is nothing particularly new about the picture. It holds interest in its melodramatic fashion and entertains. Carmel Myers, in a departure from the type of role with which her name has long been identified, delivers convincingly.

Drawing Power: Gilbert's name, augmented by popular cast. Exploitation Angles: Feature star and work on popularity of underworld dramas. Cafe scene with impromptu dancing or cabaret will serve as atmospheric prologue.

THEME: Underworld romance and gang leader's reformation.

Produced and Distributed by M-G-M. Release Date, Aug. 4, 1928. Length, 6 reels. The Cast: John Gilbert, Joan Crawford, Carmel Myers, Vera Gordon, Louis Natheaux, Directed by William Nigh. Scenario, Alice D. G. Miller. Titles, John Colton. Photographed by James Wong Howe.

Telling the World

Entertaining Most of the Way

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A TYPICAL William Haines picture bobs up here for your approval—and by typical we mean that the star continues to portray the jolly cut-up. It should please the folks in any man's theatre since it is cut from a humorous pattern and doesn't sag in furnishing its highlights. The star has a very large following and as yet these fans haven't tired of Haines' brand of comedy.

Once again he doles out didoes as a cub newspaperman. Such a freshie would be wisecracked to death in real newspaper circles, but for the purpose of making a story click the character is sound enough. He appears as very cock-sure which makes him a terrible pest. Revealing himself as the disowned son of a rich man he walks into a newspaper office and gets an assignment—which is to interview the old man on why he was kicked out.

This idea employs a note of originality with a kick of humor in it. Following this order he runs into a murder and develops into a real reporter. Eventually the youth goes to China as a special correspondent. Which gives him the chance to rescue the girl friend from annoying revolutionists. There is quite a thrill in getting the story home to the papers. The telegraph instruments, the telephones, the cables, the radio, etc., are lashed in quick succession.

Haines is the same old Haines, taking his work easy, mugging a little too much, but getting away with it. Anita Page as the girl is appealing and given more assignments will eventually develop the necessary naturalness. The extras were genuine since the newspaper boys were drafted from the Los Angeles Press.

Drawing Power: Haines' popularity. For any type of house. Exploitation Angles: Tease that title. Bill as comedy-romance of newspaper cub reporter. Play up star as having a typical story. Feature Anita Page, one of the newcomers.

Theme: Romantic comedy of cub reporter who after being disowned by rich parent, makes good, wins the girl and everything.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Length, six reels. Released, June, 1928. The Cast: William Haines, Anita Page, Eileen Percy, Frank Currier, Polly Moran, Bert Roach, Matthew Betz, William V. Mong. Director, Sam Wood.

"Sanctuary"

(M-G-M—One Reel)

HERE'S another one of those Ufa Oddities that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is releasing in this country. It is interesting and thoroughly well done. Birds of the pelican family are shown in their haunts on rocky cliffs. The subject matter, the precision and general all-round facility of the cameraman is exceptional. All in all, it is a film offering that, in spite of its short length, is extremely worthwhile. Take a tip; these Ufa shorts form one of the best series being offered the movie public today.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Ruth Taylor, one of the newest players on the Paramount roster, has been signed to a long-term contract by that company. She has completed her role in "Just Married."

"Roaming Romeo"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HERE'S an instance when the dictionary is referred to to find a good assortment of adjectives that will do justice to the worth of a picture. You have often been advised that a picture was good in words like "hot stuff," "splendid program fare," "laugh knockout," etc. With the advent of this Lupino Lane comedy, however, we drag out the superlatives and earnestly recommend it as one of the best comedies of the year. There are loads of laughs. You stumble over them every minute or so. The world of merriment that they have packed into this short subject makes it emphatically distinctive. It is "the spice of the program," all-right, and how.

Lupino Lane is an artist when it comes to giving a clever burlesque. He gently nudges Roman history, its modes of life and amusements. Deftly gagged with effective satiric touches, the comedy is joyous, genial—a genuine laugh tonic. "Ben Hur" comes in for a few jazzy moments and so do the Roman athletic games, the togas and banquet tables that have made famous those days of yore.

The story is nicely patterned and embroidered with the unexpected. Two galley slaves escape to a Roman villa, where they pose as gladiators. It is here that the laugh hysterics begin to creep in, growing in volume until they are quite the thing. Lane fights and wrestles, falls hard for a beautiful Roman dame, is threatened with assasination by the lady's husband and his followers, and, in fact, has a hectic time. So hot do things become for him that both he and his friend, Wallace Lupino, decide that galley life is much better, and so they run back to the life of slaves.

Lane's burlesques are the most intelligent in the movie world today. Give his latest a nice gold star.

"Pathe Review No. 30"

(Pathe—One Reel)

A VARIETY of subjects is the result of the Pathe Review cameramen's efforts on this occasion, making for good entertainment. Attractive scenes are shown in Pathecolor of the slowly dying volcanic Mount Lassen, in California, which geologists claim is to old to erupt again. Dancing girls from the "Hit the Deck" stage production, give the old salts at the sailors' home, a touch of Broadway. A camera study is presented of Charlie Voight, the originator of Betty the newspaper cartoon strip. Scenes are also presented of "Old Sumatra." In this sequence, the audience is given an intimate slant of the "Big Baboon College," where the efficiency of the natives is shown in their training of baboons to pick cocoanuts.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

Tarzan the Mighty

(Universal—Serial)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS gives promise of being one of the most unusual serials yet produced. It is entirely out of the ordinary run of such pictures and should develop some highly interesting highlights before its conclusion, judging by the first three chapters. It is a jungle picture with a small cast of humans, and wild animals of all varieties figure almost as prominently as the humans.

Frank Merrill, the splendidly muscled athlete is ideally cast as Tarzan, who knows the language of the denizens of the jungle and has complete control over them. Mary Trevor, the heroine castaway on this desolate island, is played by Natalie Kingston. Al Ferguson is Black John, leader of the pirate band, bent on the destruction of Tarzan. The other two roles are played by Bobbie Nelson, as Mary's little brother, and Lorimer Johnston as Lord Greystone.

Tarzan, whose parents died in the heart of the jungle in his babyhood, is reared by a sheape and knows only the language of the jungle. He is accepted by the beasts as their King. He comes upon Mary bathing in a forest pool and is at once enamoured of her, but she is under the complete dominance of Black Jack, who is about to compel her to become his bride.

Mary, in the pool, is attacked by a huge crocodile and is saved by Tarzan. She returns to the tribe of Black John and preparations proceed for her marriage of the tribe leader. Tarzan appears at the height of the ceremony, is overpowered by the tribesmen and calls upon the beasts of the jungle to come to his assistance. His call is answered by elephants and tigers, who effect his rescue just at the critical moment.

There are some exceptional shots of the jungle and the wild animals and they add greatly to the general effectiveness of the picture, which gives rare promise of developing into a tremendous thriller. The photography is unusually good and the first three chapters indicate that the serial will fairly abound with action up to the time of its termination. Jack Nelson directed.

"Felix the Cat in Futuritzy"

(Educational—One Reel)

THAT splendid little cinematic actor, Felix the Cat, has an apt vehicle in which to display his varied talents in this new mixture of artistic cartoon work, ingratiating gags and clever story.

Have you ever noticed that in these Felix cartoons the spice of the story, the prop for the laughs and gags, the central figure around whom everything revolves, is always the longe figure of the little cat? And have you ever noticed the peculiar traits of character with which the cat has been invested by his makers? In other cartoons these essential things are absent. Instead of a story revolving around one figure, the cartoonists generally bring in an entire menagerie of animals. In the representation of the whole of the animal world the scope is, of course, much wider, but ofttimes ingenuity is so seldom present that it seems as if they have deliberately introduced a variety of animals to offset the apparent lack of ingenuity or the ability to tell a series of stories built around one individual. In the case of Felix, the writer has noticed that a strict adherence to character has always been the rule. That's one of the reasons why these Felix cartoons top their competitors. The cat can do everything but talk. And in this age of the talking movie even that is possible for him.

Yes, this is a good cartoon. Do not overlook it.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The King of Shebas"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

A FAIR amount of comedy is offered in this latest Arthur Lake vehicle. The young comedian, aided and abetted by Buddie Messenger and the attractive Lillian Gilmore, and somewhat of a story, is enabled to produce a deal more humor than he has done in past performances. The film will find favor with the average audience.

Arthur takes Mary for a spin in his flivver, and is in high spirits, until Billy Fox pulls up alongside, and threatens to cramp his style. Arthur manages to elude Billy after a long chase, in which a cop participates. Arthur escapes from the cop, and gets a promise from Mary to elope. All was well until the time for the elopement, when the pair are caught by their indignant parents, and Mary is marched into the house and Arthur is carried to the woodshed. Billy in the meantime gets mixed up with the cop's daughter and is almost thrown in jail, but doesn't. Billy and Arthur get together and compare notes, and decide together that they are off women for life.

Reproduction of newspaper displays featuring "Happiness Ahead" and showing how first run the atres adapted stock cuts and press book ideas to their own style of layout. About a week or so ago, film row was awakened from its usual composure by a high-pressured ballyhoo in which Leo the Lion, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer trademark, was the chief performer. A calliope tooting industriously, the resplendent figures of brightly uniformed attendants on as conspicuously bedecked horses, the mounted police handling the contingent through the traffic, the cameraman recording the scene—all these were unusual along a street where ballyhoos have fizzled and flopped.

Minneapolis

TWIN CITY exhibitors are holding their breaths, for another dance marathon is opening this week, and they still recall what the recent Minneapolis marathon did to theater business. The town literally went crazy over this form of entertainment, and the Minneapolis theatres suffered as a result. The next marathon is to be held in St. Paul, but many Minneapolis couples are entered, and there is a chance that theatre attendance in both cities may be adversely affected.

The State theatre in Minneapolis is installing Movietone equipment, and when this is completed it will be officially known as "the house where pictures talk." It has been featuring Vitaphone for well over a year.

The ushering staff of the Minnesota is now made up almost 100 per cent of University of Minnesota students. Some of the men are working their way through school, while others are trying to provide a background for a future theatrical career. The chief of service, Allister Saef, is a Harvard graduate and has his L. L. D. degree.

W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Theatre Owners' Association, is vacationing.

L. George Ross, who manages the Universal exchange in Minneapolis, has returned from Kansas City where he attended a meeting of western division sales managers.

Reflector Arc Losses Part I

TO many projectionists who are familiar with reflector arc operation and who know of the greatly increased efficiency of this type of illuminator as compared with the old condenser type it may come as a surprise to learn that, from a theoretical standpoint, at least, a potential doubling of the present light output appears obtainable if but some practical method be found.

At last thought, this would seem to be an utterly absurd claim in view of the fact that efforts have been made to intercept as much as possible of the light from the arc and redirect it through the projector optical system as efficiently as it is possible to do so. To this end, the primary interception of light is accomplished by mirrors of such design as to pick up 120 degrees of the light radiated by the arc. This represents the greatest angular pick-up which, so far, has been successfully used by any form of illuminator.

The use of mirrors corrected for spherical aberration has added considerably to the efficiency of redirection of the light through the optic system and large diameter, projection lenses of high correction serve to minimize the losses between the aperture and the screen.

Decrease from Hidden Losses 50%

Yet, it seems certain that hidden somewhere in the projector system there are serious losses which are deducting fully 50 per cent from the light available for projection purposes. It is debatable whether these losses, if found, can ever be eliminated as have some of those brought to light in the past, such as small pick-up angle, spherical aberration, and small projection lenses.

Sometimes, the source of light losses are uncovered only to find that they are inherent in the system and must therefore be accepted as a part of the natural operating characteristics.

It may be—in fact, it is quite likely—that the serious losses which still remain in the reflector arc projectors are of this nature so that nothing can be done to eliminate them.

That these losses exist is quite certain if the present theory of optics is correct. This theory holds, for example, that in any two given projection systems which are identical in every respect, that system will be the more powerful which uses the brighter light source. This presumes the use of light source areas which are the same so that the only difference in both systems is in the brightness of the light source. Furthermore, if one light source is twice as bright as the other, then the screen illumination obtainable with this system will be twice that of the other.

This is simply another way of saying that if all optical conditions in any two systems are reduced to the same plane, the difference in screen illumination will be directly dependent upon the brightness of the light sources used in the respective systems and will vary directly with the source brightness.

Light Sources Limitations

Different light sources, it is true, may impose physical limitations upon the optic system which act to prevent those sources from being used to their fullest advantage and may even result in a source of low brightness giving higher screen illumination than of great brightness. Before the introduction of the reflector arc, such a state of affairs actually existed because the 9 watt, 30 volt, 30 ampere Mazda Lamp was actually capable of providing greater screen illumination than a 50 ampere D. C. arc using condensers.

The fundamental fact that the brighter light source can provide screen illumination in proportion to the difference in brightness was not altered, however, as was proved when the reflector arc was brought out. Even in its initial stages, when by virtue of design and mirrors used, the reflector arc was highly inefficient, it represented a vast improvement over the Mazda lamp and immediately established itself as the logical illuminator for practically all but the largest motion picture theatres.

Here we have an excellent example illustrating the logic of the source brightness theory. For years, a projector system using a powerful source, the electric arc, was so seriously handicapped by physical limitations as to permit a source of less than 1/5 its brightness to compete favorably with it. Yet the potential illuminating powers of the electric arc were there awaiting only the proper method of application to make available the high degree of screen illumination which it rightfully possessed by virtue of its brightness.

Source Controls Intensity

Other things being equal, the source brightness is the criterion of screen illuminating power and if the relative brightness of two sources is known, the relative screen illumination with the two sources instantly follows—providing, always providing, inherent losses in the one system do not act to offset the advantage of brightness which the one source has over the other.

In this respect, a comparison of the brightness of the three sources used for motion picture projection with the respective illuminating powers of these three sources will reveal an astonishing state of affairs. First, we have the Mazda lamp with a brightness of roughly 18,000 candlepower per square inch. Next, the ordinary electric arc with a brightness of approximately 100,000 c.p. per square inch, and, last, the high intensity arc with a brightness of about 300,000 c.p. per square inch. The ratio of brightness in the order named are roughly 1 to 5 to 15. In other words, the low intensity arc is 5 times as bright as the Mazda lamp and the high intensity arc is 15 times as bright as the Mazda lamp.

Compare, now, the screen illumination obtainable with these three sources. The Mazda lamp gives a maximum of about 1,200 lumens; the low intensity are gives about 2,400 lumens and the high intensity arc gives from 4,800 to 5,500 lumens.

The screen illumination ratios, therefore, are as follows: 1 to 2 to 4 (or 4½).

We find, therefore, that instead of the low intensity arc providing 5 times the screen illumination, it provides only twice the amount of light area; the high intensity lamp, instead of providing 15 times the light, shows only a maximum of 4½ times the screen light.

Yet the optical system in each case provides for a pick-up angle of 120 degrees and employs a half size objective lens. Somewhere, in both of the arc systems, huge light losses are being encountered and the fact that they have not yet been uncovered shows them to be of a subtle nature. At least one of these losses will be pointed out in the next article.

Strand at Sunbury, Pa., Being Rebuilt

Work of rebuilding the Strand Theatre, Sunbury, Pa., part of the Comerford chain, of Scranton, was begun on July 11, under direct supervision of George P. Morris, construction superintendent of the Comerford Amusement Company. Manager J. M. Blanchard, of the Strand, announced that the work will be rushed to rapid conclusion. In order not to interrupt performances which will continue during the period of reconstruction, the workmen go on the job at the close of the last show each night and continue at work until 11 o'clock the following morning.

The screen will be moved forward, while the improvements are being made, and a partition will be built in front of the stage. Three rows of seats will be removed temporarily. A new section will then be added at the rear of the theatre, to include a commodious stage, dressing rooms, and other equipment for handling road shows in addition to motion pictures. When the addition at the rear is completed, activities will be shifted to the front of the theatre.

Carrier Engineering Corp. Moves to New Quarters

The Carrier Engineering Corporation, specialists in air conditioning, drying, processing and refrigeration, has announced the purchase of a four-story factory and office building located at 850 Frelinghuysen Avenue, Newark, New Jersey.

This building was formerly occupied by the General Electric Company, Edison Lamp Works Division. The new location is only a short distance from the present Carrier plant at 750 Frelinghuysen Avenue. The building offers a floor area of approximately 112,000 square feet.

The entire fourth floor is to be devoted to general engineering and executive offices. The Carrier Construction Company, which is the manufacturing division of the firm, will occupy a large share of the space for the manufacture of extended surface heaters and the new Carrier development for household heating and air conditioning. The Experimental and Research Laboratories will be provided with largely increased space ad facilities.

The manufacture and assembly of Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration equipment, which is used extensively in connection with the air conditioning installations, will continue at the present location. Ultimately, monitor type shops will be erected on the ground extending from the new office building to the Pennsylvania tracks.

The transfer to the new quarters will take place prior to August 1.

Veidt's Next

"The Play Goes On" will be Conrad Veidt's next story for Universal. Dr. Paul Fejos will direct and Carl Laemmle, Jr., will supervise. It will precede "The Charlatan."

Universal has just bought the rights to "Why Girls Walk Home," a story by Inez Gregg which will be placed in work immediately.

La Rocque on the Stage?

Rod LaRoeque is not as vitally concerned about the "talkies" as are some of the male stars—for it is possible that Rod will accept a pressing offer to appear in a New York produetion on the speaking stage upon the eompletion of his stellar role in "Captain Swagger."

Forced Landing

Grant Withers, popular young film actor, met adverse weather conditions enroute to Colorado for a series of personal appearances. The plane in which he was traveling made a forced landing on a plowed field near Santa Fe, New Mexieo, and it is needless to say that the soaring young player is not so interested in flying trips now.

For your Protection

To insure exhibitors the highest possible screen quality, Eastman Positive Film is made identifiable. The words "Eastman Kodak" are stencilled in black letters at short intervals in the transparent film margin.

Specify prints on Eastman Film —look for the identifying words in the margin—and get the film that always carries quality through to the screen.

MANUFACTURED WEATHER* in New York's Newest, Most Beautiful Grill

"One of the most exquisite, if not breathtaking, dining and dancing retreats seen in this town in a number of years is the Grill Room of the Paramount Hotel."

Frank X. Lynch
New York Evening Post
July 3

The Grill Room, Paramount Hotel,
46th Street, West of Broadway, New York City.
Thomas W. Lamb, Archt.—H. Hall Marshall, Cons. Engr.

The Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration Unit shown above cools more than 300 gallons of water per minute for the purpose of washing, cooling and dehumidifying more than 40,000 cubic feet of air delivered each minute to the Grill and Dining Room. Centrifugal Refrigeration, using a harmless liquid refrigerant, is safe, simple and automatic in operation. It is an integral part of the air conditioning system designed, installed and guaranteed in results by Carrier Engineers.

PATRONS of the Grill and Main Dining Room of the new Paramount Hotel, in daily increasing numbers, dine, dance and are entertained in a cool, fresh, comfortable atmosphere, noticeably free from smoke and stuffiness so frequently encountered in restaurants. They find a gentle, scarcely perceptible downward diffusion of conditioned air, with no suggestion of a draught. *They are in an atmosphere of Manufactured Weather.

Showmen are urged to visit these restaurants. We recommend the excellent food and service, we know you'll enjoy an evening of superior entertainment, and, above all, we want you to feel for yourself the very refreshing atmosphere—produced through the same modern air conditioning system which provides Manufactured Weather* in such great theatres as the Roxy and the Paramount.

Mr. Ben Locker, representing the owners, or Mr. A. Lincoln Scott, Managing Director, will be pleased to show you the Carrier System in full operation, in order that you may observe its extreme compactness, as well as the simplicity and effectiveness of operation and control.

Manufactured Weather,* as produced only through Carrier Systems for Air Conditioning, is being extended rapidly to include not only theatres, but hotels, restaurants, hospitals, offices and public and industrial buildings where the health and comfort of people is of paramount importance. Everyone should know something about Manufactured Weather.* With this thought in mind Bulletin TS-58 has been prepared. A copy of this bulletin is yours for the asking.

The level-headed showman won't be stampeded by the synchronization hysteria which rocks the motion picture industry today.

He won't be herded like cattle nor will he give way to confusion and fright when his common-sense tells him to TAKE HIS TIME.

He will investigate all synchronization propositions like any other good business man but will not forget for one instant THAT HE IS STILL IN THE MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS AND THAT HE NEEDS GOOD BOX-OFFICE PICTURES MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE TODAY.

He will realize that orders placed NOW for sound device installations could not possibly be filled within eight or ten months, so great is the task, so numerous the problems of production which confront the manufacturers.

He will realize.....AND THIS HITS HIM IN THE POCKETBOOK...that the mere addition of sound to a photo-play will not make it good screen entertainment.....that story value, cast and direction are still the factors which make or break a production.

FBO has not forgotten its obligation to the exhibitor in the matter of sound pictures but FBO refuses to blow up like a rattled pitcher in a ball game under stress of synchronization hysteria.

And remember this:

Such smash hits as "The Perfect Crime", "Hit of the Show", "Gang War", "The Circus Kid", "Blockade" and "Taxi 13" either have been or shortly will be synchronized with music, sound effects and dialogue.

These splendid attractions, thus synchronized, may be run on Photophone or Movietone machines.

BUT THE SHOW MUST GO ON!

Synchronized or silent, the public must have its entertainment on the screen.

Now, more than ever, (and principally those exhibitors who cannot possibly get sound installations short of many months to come) YOU NEED GOOD PICTURES and you need them more than you ever did.

As usual FBO is ready to serve them to you.

What About the Small Theatre?

Veteran Exhibitor Sees Sound Pictures as Boon

By William A. Johnston

ONE of the big questions of the day is: what will happen to the small town theatre as a result of the sound movie tidal wave?

Fortunately, one of the wisest exhibitors in the country, with interests in all types of towns and cities, including the smaller ones, supplies an answer deserving of close consideration. We cannot print his name, but his views are given after experience in the actual showing of sound pictures.

* * * *

Hear what he has to say:

"For the first time in the history of this business the small town theater can present exactly the same program that the biggest de luxe theaters offer.

"Such a thing has never been possible before. We could get the same pictures, but we could not afford orchestras comparable to those maintained in the major theaters; nor could we offer stage presentations and vaudeville.

"With the advent of sound pictures the complexion of the case is entirely changed. The barriers between the major first run key city houses and the small town theaters are breaking down.

"It is but a question of time until we will have 'the whole show on the screen.' Not only a feature picture with sound—music, effects, dialogue, as the case may be—but comedies and other short features will have sound accompaniment.

"Already we have Vitaphone vaudeville. Through that medium the smallest theater in the most remote section can present the same talent that is offered in the big metropolitan centers. Sound pictures have drawn much of the best dramatic and musical talent in this country—they are destined to enlist more and more of the country's best entertainers.

"Entertainment that was hopelessly beyond the reach of the small town exhibitor will come within range. His theater may be smaller, less pretentious, more remote—but the quality of his program can be exactly the same as those presented in the country's finest theaters.

"Putting the quality of his program on a par with the major theaters gives the small town exhibitor an opportunity he never could enjoy until now.

* * * *

"Within two years the theater lacking sound pictures will be obsolete. The exhibitor who has not wired his house and equipped himself to present sound pictures will find his patrons falling away. A more aggressive showman in an adjoining town will draw patrons from the 'straight picture' house. The new feature has 'caught on.' The public will expect to 'see and hear.'

* * * *

"It may be many months before equipment could be delivered and installed even if it were ordered today. But exhibitors who are buying product for the new season would do well to limit their 'straight picture' contracts. Those who tie themselves up for a year's supply of 'silent' pictures may find 'hard stock' on their hands.

"The business is moving in the direction of 'sight and sound' and exhibitors must move with the tide or be swept down."

Watch Your Step!

THE sound picture is a great development in screen history. Motion Picture News was among the first to hail it. It opens up big new possibilities, and it came at just the right moment.

But—it caught the industry unprepared, and hysteria, plenty of it, has resulted. So much so, that some film veterans have been running around in circles, trying to find out what it is all about.

While the sound picture is here, and to stay; while it means a revolution throughout the industry, there is no occasion for panic. Cool headedness is a valuable quality at all times, especially now.

Exhibitors, because they are the direct contact with the public without which there would be no film industry, need to be on their guard against foolish moves which will have to be taken back later—and at great cost.

Remember, this development has a long way to go yet. It won't all happen in a day. A lot of things have to be worked out. Production is being overhauled right now—in many respects, being revamped entirely. But the industry must go on.

With only 500 theatres actually wired, it is easy enough to see that most of the public still is looking at silent pictures, and will continue to look at them for some time to come.

This means that the distribution and exhibition machinery of the industry cannot get fully into the sound era for months.

As to exhibition, unjustified changes need to be guarded against. For example, decisions of some exhibitors to dispense altogether with installation of organs in new houses would seem to us a grave error.

The organ is an institution of the picture theatre, for which, so far as we know, no substitute has been found or is likely to be. It is an instrument of dignity, of varied appeal, whose richness had much to do with making the picture theatre the community institution it now is.

More than that, it is an integral part of the showmanship of the modern theatre, a piece of equipment which, by its very presence, helps mightily in the rounded appeal of the show.

Frankly, we do not believe that it can be replaced, without serious loss in public estimation, by any other mechanism.

As an indication of the trend of things, a sales manager of one of the big film companies, just back from the road, told us this week that exhibitors are not interested in synchronized music scores. They are demanding "talking" pictures; the novelty of the music score that seemed to proceed from the screen is, our informant says, passing out already.

"I found," he said, "that exhibitors want the talkies, but they do not figure the synchronized music score as a big factor."

This would mean that the organ has, and will continue to have, its indispensable place in the picture theatre. The organ and the "talkie" may well be a winning combination for the theatre.

We advise exhibitors to watch their step in this matter. The organ is an established part of the theatre. Exhibitors planning new houses will do well to remember that fact.

There are exceptions to all rules. In the new day in the industry, the organ seems to us an exception among the big changes now taking place.—W. A. J.

Price Slashing Puts Ohio Theatres in a Bad Way

"Multum pro parvo" or its English equivalent "much for little" might well be adopted as a slogan for exhibitors in Lima, Ohio, where a battle of admission prices, begun three months ago, is still being waged to the detriment of the box offices both in the Lima and contiguous territories.

The Ohio theatre, operated by the Schines, was the first house to reduce its prices, slashing them to 35 and 20 cents for nights and matinees respectively. The Sigma theatre, featuring Vitaphone, reduced their prices to conform. The Ohio, however, soon announced newer reduced prices, 25 and 10 cents for night and matinee performances with no change in programs. Opposition houses have refused to meet the new scale of admission and are operating on the first reduction basis.

P. J. Wood, manager of the Ohio M. P. T. O., who went to Lima recently to look over the situation, summarizes it as an exceedingly deplorable one.

Film Classification Plan Opposed in Australia

It is being argued that one of the recommendations of the Royal Film Commission, unless changed, will work particular hardship to circuits and individual owners of continuous houses in Australia, according to a report received at Washington, D. C., from Assistant Trade Commissioner Charles F. Baldwin, Sydney. One of the censorship proposals of the Commission provides that only pictures marked "Pictures Suitable for Universal Exhibition" can be shown at matinees, exception being made in the case of long-run houses. It is expected that city theatres in particular will be affected adversely and so much more that the Commission foresaw that amendment of the recommendation must be made.

The total of children who attend matinees in continuous shows in Australia is generally considered to be less than 10 per cent. Any enforcement of this censorship pro- the matinee audience, all of the adults must witness nothing but juvenile films.

Hays Brands Quotas as Trade Prohibitions

In a statement in Hollywood recently, Will Hays declared that quota laws, such as the French regulations, are trade prohibitions and consequently violations of the convention adopted by the International Conference for the Abolition of Import and Export Prohibitions in May of last year. Mr. Hays' statement was made following the inception of endeavors on the part of Hugh R. Wilson, U. S. Minister to Switzerland, at the session at the import and export conference at Geneva, to abolish trade barriers. The convention, referred to in the Hays statement, was signed by D. Perruys of France as well as Wilson of U. S., he points out, and calls quota laws "disguised prohibitions." Hays notes that the French quota law requires American firms to buy one French picture in order to be granted French distribution for seven of their own films.

C. H. Moses Sells Staten Island Theatre Interests

All his motion picture interests in Staten Island have been disposed of by Charles H. Moses, president of the Isle Theatrical Company, who steps down from the presidency of the concern. Formed some years ago, the firm headed by Mr. Moses bought out the Johnson and Moses Theatrical Company. He began his theatrical career on the island about 18 years ago. He has no plans for the immediate future, but according to report, he is retiring from the industry with a large fortune.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

ONLY a few weeks away from the opening of the new season. . . . It'll be one of the most interesting on record. . . . And the most hectic. . . . The sound picture tidal wave will bring that about. . . . In fact, has brought it about already. . . . But, the little old public goes right ahead patronizing first class pictures, sound or otherwise. . . . Take the opening of "Lilac Time" at the Carthay Circle in Los Angeles. . . . The previous record was smashed by $2,308, and there is an unprecedented advance sale. . . . Ned Depinet has been receiving a bunch of wires from the Coast, telling about the big hit "Lilac Time" has made. . . . Then, "Street Angel" at the Roxy, New York, piled up nearly $126,000 and goes into a third week. . . . The Strand continues to pull 'em in with "Lights of New York." . . . In the offing is "White Shadows in the South Seas," M-G-M's first sound film, opening at the Gaiety soon. . . . Not forgetting for a moment "Warming Up," Paramount's baseball box-office sound hit. . . . The boys are jumping right into this sound thing with both feet. . . . The public wants it, so there you are. . . . Ask Warners; they know. On the books of that concern 542 accounts have been added in five weeks. . . . Reaping the fruits of pioneer work.

* * * *

. . . Along comes Fox with the announcement of the Poli deal. Three hundred and twenty-five theatres, now, in that fast growing chain. . . . Chalk up a new mark in enterprise on the part of Pathe—five hundred simultaneous showings of "The King of Kings" in October, with a synchronized national advertising campaign. Nothing left to guess work in this. And the merchandising experts in all fields are watching with great interest this innovation in show advertising. . . . M-G-M's suggestion to exhibitors is: Put on a "Joy Week" campaign and chase away box-office blues. Free accessories and other helps for theatres. A fine idea. . . . Nearly all the news nowadays centers around sound. . . . Over in Pennsylvania, a judge has ruled that the censors have no jurisdiction over the "talkies." The case will go to the State Supreme Court, then, no doubt, to the highest Federal tribunal. Very important to the whole future of the industry. . . .

* * * *

J. D. Williams and John Maxwell arrive from England, but no statements are forthcoming. Something big appears about to break. Maybe, it is the deal by which Maxwell and Williams with E. W. Hammons will handle the licensing of Photophone in Great Britain. We shall see. . . . Where J. D. is, things always happen. But he's not ready to talk yet. . . . Legitimate stage producers are wrestling with the sound problems. They called in a picture technician the other day and discussed filming of plays right on the stage, but were soon shown that this was not practicable. . . . Pictures have to be made in a picture studio. And they are pictures first and other things second. . . . Exhibitors call and wire and write, trying to find out about interchangeability and other big sound problems. So far, not much light has been shed. But, of course, it will have to be. The fact that the public demands the new form of entertainment will force that.

* * * *

. . . Quoting from ourselves, if we may: "In the show business, there is but one license that binds and lasts and that is the license of public good will." . . . The laboratory experts and the engineers do the indispensable job of creating mechanisms, but it takes showmen to put the breath of show-life into the machines. . . . Monta Bell, who gave us a red-hot interview several weeks back on sound pictures, rises to remark: "The picture is still the thing, and no sound device or other invention can change that fundamental basis of filming entertainment." . . . A good sentence to paste in your hat. . . . While we're on the subject of things the public wants and will pay real money to see, the play, "Ringside," authored by Hy Daab of F B O and Ted Paramore, Jr., formerly with Hal Roach, has scored a sensational success in Detroit and will come into New York. Attaboy, Hy! . . . Slants, slants and more slants on the talkie problem. For instance, the Authors League warns that dialogue rights belong to the man or woman who wrote the lines. Picture rights to plays don't include talk, unless the dialogue rights have been specifically contracted for. This will have to be threshed out, too. . . . It will be, no doubt. . . . Little old public wants talking films, so all problems will have to bow to that demand. . . . What has become of the man who used to say the public didn't know what it wanted?

* * * *

But in all this furore about sound, the most vital thing is audience reaction. . . . We had a chance the other night to size up, first hand, what the talkies mean, away from Broadway. . . . Up in New England, at the Roger Sherman Theatre, New Haven. . . . A beautiful house, by the way. . . . And an all-talkie program, which kept the audience in rapt attention. . . . Sound reproduction was first class, clear to the back of the house. . . . The feature was "Lights of New York," and, boy, how they liked it! Vitaphone special acts scored, too. . . . So there you are! . . .

Film Boards Reply to Gov't

Credit Committees Defended as Necessary and Wholly Reasonable; 3,950 Houses Changed Hands in 1927, Answer Declares

CREDIT committees as operated by the 32 Film Boards of Trade in the United States, and the confidential reports they make to their members, are necessary because of the industry's unique nature and are wholly reasonable in their purpose and effect, the Film Boards and eleven fellow-defendants stated in an answer filed July 20, in the United States District Court for Southern New York. On April 27 the federal government, in a suit filed under the Sherman anti-trust law, charged that the credit committees operated in restraint of trade.

The answer sets forth that there are more than 3,000 changes of ownership in the 22,000 motion picture theatres each year. This makes it imperative from the distributor's standpoint that facts as to the reliability of new owners, and the circumstances under which transfers occur, be readily available. In 1927, the answer states, 3,950 theatres changed hands, involving outstanding uncompleted contracts with distributors totalling $8,081,000.

Signatures to Answer

The answer to the government suit is signed by George W. Wickersham and Edwin P. Grosvenor, of Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft, solicitors for all the defendants, and by Gabriel L. Hess and Charles C. Pettijohn, general attorney and general counsel respectively for the Film Boards of Trade. The other defendants are the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and ten leading motion picture producing companies.

"When a distributor signs a contract with an exhibitor," says the answer, "for pictures which are to be delivered in the future the distributor in fact advances a form of credit to the exhibitor, because after the contract is executed the distributor is prevented from contracting with a neighboring or competing theatre for the same run of the same picture. He is precluded by the terms of the contract from doing so. During the life of the contract the distributor agrees to give the exhibitor 'protection' for the period specified in the contract against the exhibition of any of the photoplays named in the contract at theatres in the immediate neighborhood or vicinity of exhibitor's theatre. If the exhibitor later repudiates the contract the distributor will not be able to place the pictures in that vicinity for the reason that the competing theatres will be completely booked with other pictures. Therefore the total amount of rental involved in the average contract for 20 to 60 pictures, which represents the entire earning power in that particular neighborhood of all the pictures named in the contract, is a form of credit which the distributor has given the exhibitor and the distributor acts in reliance on that credit.

"As nearly all contracts are concluded in the spring or early summer of each year and cover pictures to be released at regular intervals during the year beginning the following fall, there are comparatively few cases of the transfer of a theatre in which there are not outstanding uncompleted contracts at the time of the change in the ownership of the theatre."

The answer is emphatic in regard to the purposes of the Credit Committees.

"No exhibitor," it says, "except one looking for an unfair or dishonest advantage, or with a bad financial condition or a fraudulent transfer to conceal, has cause to object to the rules and regulations.

Transfers of Theatres

"In the course of each year there are numerous transfers of theatres made for the purpose of avoiding existing contracts. An improvident or unscrupulous exhibitor finds he has signed contracts for more pictures than he has available play dates in the season within which to show them; or decides that there are other pictures more desirable than those he has contracted for. Instead of negotiating an honest settlement or adjustment of his contracts he sells or transfers the theatre to a relation or dummy who notifies the distributors that he has acquired the theatre and thereupon solicits new contracts for pictures in total disregard of the existing obligations of the real owner of the theatre.

"The frequent changes of ownership bring into the field each year many new and inexperienced persons. Some of these are unsuccessful and sell out again in a few months with the result that their contracts also go into the discard.

"With the transfer of his theatre the Decision Bans Sound Censors

New Philadelphia Court Ruling Directly Opposite to Recent One, Holds Board Cannot Delete Dialogue

THERE is a difference of opinion in the Philadelphia courts as to the authority of censor boards in the handling of dialogue or sound effects in connection with motion pictures. Entirely opposite decisions have been handed down in two courts and will doubtless bring appeals both from the effected picture company and the Board of Censors.

President Judge McDevitt in a decision handed down in Philadelphia, July 21, rules that the State Board of Motion Picture Censors has no authority to impose censorship on talking motion pictures. The ruling diametrically opposes a decision in a similar case given by Presdent Judge J. Willis Martin, of Common Pleas Court No. 5, who ruled last month that the spoken word cannot be used in connection with movie exhibitions in Pennsylvania unless the words, as well as the films are approved by the censors.

The decision handed down by Judge McDevitt of Common Pleas Court No. 1 sustains an appeal by the Fox Film Corporation from an order of disapproval by the board, declaring that the order of disapproval is an arbitrary and an oppressive abuse of discretion. The Board contended it had authority to censor the sound pictures under the act of 1915, which created the body.

The opinion of Judge MeeDvitt covers thirty-two pages and states in part:

"The order of disapproval entered by the board upon the film in question was an arbitrary and offensive abuse of its discretion; and in failing to approve said film, in the absence of a finding that the said film was immoral, indecent or obscene, it failed totally to exercise discretion as was vested in it by the Act of 1915.

"The Pennsylvania State Board of Censors has no jurisdiction whatsoever to compel the submission to it for examination of such language as is to be used in conjunction with a motion-picture film; the regulation heretofore adopted by the State Board of Censors and herein complained of has not been established in accordance with any power or authority conferred upon the board by the act which created it."

Further in his decision, Judge McDevitt says:

"The educational value of the Movietone invention would be entirely destroyed by such an assertion of authority, for the producers could make no record of any public address unless the speaker first submitted to the photographer the manuscript of his speech, to be censored by the board in advance. The address of an explorer, for example, could not be given extemporaneously."

Judge McDevitt, however, points a way out when he says:

"While conceivably it may be desirable for the board to have the right to demand the submission of language used in conjunction with the motion picture film, in order to ascertain whether the film is moral or proper, that is a matter which must be addressed to the Legislature, for neither the board nor the Court by judicial legislation can create such a power if not created by an act of Assembly.

"It must be borne in mind, therefore, that the issue raised by this appeal is not whether the board should have the power to censor language, but whether such power

Gigantic Ad Campaign on "King of Kings"

Pathe's Biblical Drama Will Be Nationally Advertised in Fan Magazines and Newspapers in $75,000 Drive

PATHE, announcing that "The King of Kings" will be shown in approximately 500 theatres in the United States during the first two weeks of October, plans a national advertising campaign to cost about $75,000 and to be launched just before the releasing date, October 1.

Two page spreads will, it is said, appear in the "Saturday Evening Post," "Collier's," "Photoplay," "Motion Picture Magazine," "Motion Picture Classic," "Picture Play," "Screenland" and "Screen Fun." Full page ads are scheduled to appear in the "Chicago Tribune" and in the "Chicago American." The combined circulations of the magazines is nearly 6,000,000, it is estimated, and reckoning three readers will read each magazine, and including the circulations of the newspapers, approximately 19,000,000 persons will see the ads, it is expected.

A direct tie-up will be effected in the advertising, which will include the names of the theatres, their locations and the time of the performances. The ads will appear in issues dated September 29 in the "Saturday Evening Post" and "Collier's," in "Photoplay" for October, and in the November issues of the other magazines.

"To insure the complete success of the plan, every factor that has proven basic, sound and essential in merchandising in other lines has been considered and adopted," says the announcement. Heretofore the great weakness in general advertising," it goes on to say, "has been the impossibility of satisfying at once the buying impulse aroused by advertising through direct tie-up with the theatres showing the picture. Exhibitors, recognizing that fact, have in consequence credited but minor value to general magazine advertising. The problem, too, of securing a sufficient number of first runs so located as to meet the public demand in every section of the country, has been apparently insurmountable. In consequence practically all the magazine advertising that has been done by picture companies has been institutional in character. It has been found almost impossible to direct the public in national advertising to specific theatres at a specification. The lapse of time between the appearance of the advertising and the showing of a picture in a locality was sufficient to lessen materially the beneficial effects of the advertising. Furthermore, of necessity, the picture advertised has been new and untried, and so the sales and the advertising have been made more difficult.

"Advertising authorities are waiting eagerly to determine how greatly the theatre box-office will react to national advertising when it is directed at an immediate market," the announcement states. "It is the earnest conviction of men expert in modern selling systems that the Pathe plan, now complete and ready, will establish a precedent in motion picture merchandising."

New Trial Asked for Seattle Bomb Suspect

Convicted of having been the person guilty of throwing the dynamite bomb which seriously damaged the Embassy Theatre in Seattle and threw its audience into a panic, Thomas J. Woodhouse, an unskilled laborer by trade, was last week sentenced to serve from four to five years at hard labor in the Washington State Penitentiary. Judgment was pronounced in the courts at Seattle, and Woodhouse is at present at liberty on $5,000 bail, pending the outcome of a hearing for another trial.

The courts have been unable to gain information as to who posted the original bail for Woodhouse. The prevailing feeling in Seattle theatre circles is that union differences were responsible for the attack. The reward of $2,500 offered by the Washington M. P. T. O., will not be awarded until the outcome of the second hearing. It will be divided among various city department employees who were instrumental in obtaining evidence.

Educational Powers of Films Demonstrated

The ability of the motion picture to teach was demonstrated last week in the fields of geography, history, commerce and economics in a demonstration before the summer sessions of the New York State College for Teachers at Albany, New York. According to Professor W. C. Deeker, director of the summer school, the film is finding favor as an educational means. He predicts great popularity for motion pictures in schools even greater than that of still pictures now used widely in schools.

"Midnight Life," Newest Gotham Production

The latest Gotham production to be completed is "Midnight Life," featuring Francis X. Bushman, Gertrude Olmstead and Eddie Buzzel, musical comedy star. It will be released July 28. The film is an adaptation of Reginald Wright Kauffman's novel, "The Spider's Web." It was given another title but this was found to conflict with a similar title owned by William De Mille on a vaudeville sketch of several years ago which he is now planning to produce as a two-reel sound picture.

Scott Sidney Dies Suddenly While in London

Death visited Scott Sidney, Christie director and producer, very suddenly last Friday, July 20, while he was in London to make a comedy for British International at Elstree. In February he had intended to return to Hollywood to produce sound pictures at the Christie studio.

Sidney was best known for "Charley's Aunt," the Syd Chaplin comedy.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation Expanding Dominion Theatre Chain

DIFFERENT purchases of theatre sites in Canada herald an extensive campaign of expansion on the part of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, which is securing a stronger hold on the theatre situation in numerous cities.

The corporation has made formal announcement of its purchase of a large theatre site at Yonge and Hayter Streets, Toronto, in the retail shopping section. A 4,000-seat theatre for the presentation of silent and sound films along with stage presentations its cast to exceed $1,500,000, will arise in a year's time on this location, it is said. J. T. Bragg, comptroller of Famous Players, is named as the construction manager, while Murray Brown is named as the architect.

Famous Players has launched a theatre in Quebec City to seat 3,000; a large theatre in Ottawa, to cost $1,250,000; a theatre in Windsor, Ontario; another in North Bay, which will open in the fall; a theatre in Saskatoon, Sask., costing in the neighborhood of $270,000, and other theatrical projects.

An affiliated company of Famous Players, the United Amusements, Ltd., Montreal, has begun construction on a new theatre in Montreal to cost $165,000. The Palace Theatre in the same city is being closed for several months for the construction of a new stage and for other improvements that will cost $80,000.

Publix Stage Shows Ending on Coast

Although official information has not yet been made public, it was reported in Seattle, Washington, last week on very strong authority that next month will see the end of the Publix stage units on the Pacific Coast motion picture circuit. It is understood that the Publix shows will end their season in the new Minneapolis house, and their place in the Publix houses in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles will be filled by West Coast stage entertainment.

In Seattle, reports indicate that the Fanchon-Marco shows which have played West Coast's Fifth Avenue Theatre for several seasons will be moved to the new Seattle Theatre to replace the Publix units, and the Fifth Avenue will henceforth be devoted to the "larger" pictures, Movietone subjects, and an occasional stage specialty. This was necessitated by the fact that the Seattle Theatre has lost on an average of $7,500 each week since it was opened in March, with one or two possible exceptions. Similar losses are reported from other Coast cities, and it is believed that the cost of about $5,000 per week for stage entertainment is without reason in smaller centers.

Official Procedure Ends Washington Disaster Case

The last chapter in the tragic collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Washington, D. C., January 22, 1922, when 97 persons were killed and 103 injured, was written in the District Circuit Court July 2 when counsel for plaintiffs of 52 damage suits brought against the District of Columbia Government secured the dismissal of the cases.

Several suits had been brought since the catastrophe against various defendants, but in no instance was any claimant able to secure a favorable verdict. The collapse of the Knickerbocker roof occurred from the weight of snow which lay upon it following a very severe storm. The disaster resulted in a thorough survey of other places of entertainment by District authorities and one or two were temporarily closed, for fear of a repetition of the catastrophe.

Portland Theatre Robbed During Performance

While patrons were enjoying the stage and screen performances at the Portland Theatre, Portland, Ore., last Sunday evening at 11 o'clock, a lone bandit walked into the office of Manager Blavis and secured $1,000 in bills, the Sunday receipts, but overlooked a quantity of silver. The police are now making an intensive search.

Rudolph Radtke, comptroller for Universal Chain Theatres, has resigned that post to assume new duties in the real estate department of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum at the home office. He will work in conjunction with J. J. Ford, assistant to Joseph P. Kennedy.

Film Boards of Trade Preparing Analysis of Chase-Hudson Bill

AN analysis in layman's language of the purport and possible effect of the Canon Chase-Hudson bill, latest of the legislative proposals to inject government bureaucracy into the motion picture business, is being prepared and will be ready for the trade press, the Film Boards of Trade and others interested, in about two weeks, C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Film Boards of Trade, announced today.

"The policy of the industry," Mr. Pettijohn said, "is to meet such attempts at destroying the business by the simple process of getting before the legislative authorities, in open committee, the true facts in regard to our present operation and what would happen under the various panaceas proposed. We did this in the case of the Brookhart Bill.—frankly, sincerely and vigorously. It was sufficient.

"We also found, in studying the Brookhart Bill and in presenting the industry's case, that the lively interest of everyone, in all our branches, showed a determination to meet these attempted encroachments with full understanding of the issues involved. We will continue to prepare and release, well in advance of the time for action, analyses in plain English of the effects of all important legislative proposals."

Poli Circuit Purchased by William Fox

After Month of Negotiations, Deal Is Closed; Theatres to Be Wired and Modernized Immediately

AFTER long negotiations, William Fox officially announced on the night of July 22 that he had acquired the Poli Circuit in New England. The news did not come as a surprise. The deal has been on for months.

Some time ago, Max Schoolman and associates of Boston closed for purchase of the circuit, but the deal was not completed. At different times, other interests have dickered for control of the chain.

Mr. Fox announced the purchase price as $25,000,000. The Poli Circuit comprises twenty theatres in leading cities of New England, with an aggregate seating capacity of 45,000.

The announcement was made by Mr. Fox to newspapermen assembled in the executive offices of the Roxy Theatre.

In his announcement, Mr. Fox stated that a budget of $1,000,000 had been set aside by his corporation "immediately to renovate and modernize the entire Poli chain, particularly with regard to the installation of Movietone projection apparatus, so that these theatres may present not only motion pictures in sound, but the same type of motion picture entertainment now presented in the Roxy and other de luxe theatres throughout the United States."

The Poli Circuit has been held outright and operated successfully for 30 years by Sylvester Z. Poli, who is now 68 years old. The theatres acquired by the Fox Theatres Corporation include: the Capitol and Palace in Hartford, Conn.; The Hyperion, Bijou and Palace in New Haven; The East Main Street and West Main Street in Meriden; The Strand and Palace in Waterbury; the Palace, Poli, Majestic, Lyric and two others in Bridgeport; the Broadway Street in Norwich; the Palace in Springfield, Mass.; and the Plaza, Poli and Palace in Worcester, Mass.

Arbitration Introduced Into Louisiana

A LAW introducing arbitration into the state has been passed by the House of Representatives and the Senate of Louisiana. Immediately after the adoption of the measure the legislature adjoined without awaiting the governor's signature, which is merely a routine matter.

The new ordinance is a measure prepared by the American Arbitration Association. It is drawn up to expedite clearance of business by submitting disputed matters to arbitration. The possibility of recourse to law is not precluded by the measure should either of contestants determine to exercise his right.

Expect Large Attendance at German C. E. A. Meet

The invitations sent out by the German C. E. A. to their conferees abroad are meeting with a general response it is said. Already the exhibitors' organizations of ten different countries have promised to send delegates. Even the American exhibitors may be represented. The exhibitors' annual meeting is, therefore, developing into an international congress. The Spitzen organization, embracing every branch of this industry, has taken the official arrangements in hand as far as the guests from abroad are concerned. Everything will be done to display before the foreign visitors what the German film industry can show. The Renters' Association will meet at the same time.

FBO Has Completed Over 50% of New Program

Studio Has Finished 22 Features; 17 Gold Bonds to Be Produced; Five Million Spent on New Program

OVER 50 per cent of the first half year's productions on the 1928-29 F B O program has already been completed by the company's studio units on the West Coast, with an expenditure of approximately $5,000,000 having been made on the 22 features finished. It is expected the remaining half of the program, which includes 17 Gold Bond productions, will be finished before the end of the year and will involve another $5,000,000, thus rounding out the $10,000,000 set aside yearly by the company.

Already completed are "The Perfect Crime," with Irene Rich and Clive Brook; "Taxi 13," co-starring Chester Conklin and Martha Sleeper; "The Hit of the Show," with Joe E. Brown; "The Circus Kid," co-starring Joe E. Brown and Frankie Darro; and "Gang War," with Olive Borden and Jack Pickford. "Blockade," to star Anna Q. Nilsson, remains to be filmed.

The completed Gold Bonds also total six. They are: "Danger Street," with Warner Baxter and Martha Sleeper; "Stocks and Blondes," with Skeets Gallagher and Jacqueline Logan; "Charge of the Gauchos," with Francis X. Bushman and Jacqueline Logan; "Singapore Mutiny," with Estelle Taylor and Ralph Ince; "Sally's Shoulders," with Lois Wilson and Huntley Gordon; and "Sinners in Love," presenting Olive Borden, Seena Owen and Huntley Gordon.

Tom Mix' first F B O feature, "Son of the Golden West," is expected to be finished in the very near future. Tom Tyler has completed "Terror Mountain," "The Avenging Rider," "Tyrant of Red Gulch," and "The Trail of the Horse Thieves," Bob Steele has finished "Captain Careless," "Heading for Danger" and "Lightning Speed." Buzz Barton has two completed vehicles, "The Young Whirlwind" and "Rough Ridin' Red." Ranger the dog has finished "Dog Law" and "Fury of the Wild."

Several of the units making the above features journeyed to distant locations for their backgrounds. "Singapore Mutiny" was pictured off Catalina Island and, according to a clause in Estelle Taylor's contract, her role was finished the afternoon of July 24 to permit her to leave that evening for New York. Tom Mix made his location site at Victorville, Calif. Bob Steele made a trip to the naval base at San Diego and made use of a destroyer for atmospheric scenes for "Captain Careless."

With the signing of Tom Moore and Noah Beery for two pictures apiece, the remainder of the F B O feature program is beginning to get under way. Moore will star in "His Last Haul," to be directed by Marshall Neilan from a story by Louis Sarecky. Moore's other story will be "The Yellowback," to which no director has as yet been assigned. Noah Beery will be starred in "The Red Sword," a Russian story, and "Love in the Desert," which George Melford will direct. All of these will be Gold Bond productions.

The 13 other Gold Bonds will be "Stolen Love," "Tropic Madness," "Hey, Rube!", "Air Legion," "Voice of the Storm," "Hardboiled," "The Jazz Age," "The Convict's Son," "King of the Klondike," "The Record Run," "Lest We Forget," "Skinner Steps Out" and "Double-crossed."

Larry Darmour, producing four series of short subjects for F B O, is working on the sixth comedy of the "Racing Blood" series, entitled "The Sweet Buy and Buy"; the sixth Mickey McGuire comedy, "Mickey's Great Idea"; the third "Toots and Casper" comedy, "The Family Meal Ticket" and the second Barney Google comedy, "Ok Mnx."

Other recently completed short subjects are "Ruth Is Stranger Than Fiction" and "You Just Know She Dares 'Em," of the "Racing Blood series directed by Al Herman with Alberta Vaughn and Al Cooke in the cast; "Mickey's Babies" and "Mickey's Movies," starring Mickey Yule and the last of the current "Mickey McGuire" series; and Horsefeathers" the initial "Barney Google" comedy, presenting Barney Hellum in the title role with Phillip L. Davis as Sunshine.

Publix to Acquire Remaining Interest in A. H. Blank Circuit

A DEAL in the theatre circuits that has long been pending will be concluded soon when Publix will assume completed ownership of the Blank chain in the Middle West. Publix, a 50 per cent partner with Blank in the chain, now acquires the remaining 50 per cent interest, Abe Blank having agreed to the terms of the transaction following a visit to New York last week. The contract was drawn up in New York and sent on later to Des Moines for Blank's signature.

One of the first moves of Publix and one which is expected to properly take care of the Publix stage shows in Des Moines is the recently announced plan to expend $500,000 for the enlargement and reconstruction of the Des Moines theatre. The house will be given the name of the New Des Moines and will be rebuilt inside and out. The present seating capacity of 1,750 will be increased to 2,800. The front of the theatre will be extended and will be given a new ornamental garb. The balcony will also be extended to the front and on the sides of the house. A stage with modern equipment necessary to stage the Publix shows will be installed and dressing rooms in the enlarged basement will be built. Definite date for the beginning of the construction work has not yet been determined. It is expected to start either in the fall or in the spring and will take about eight months.

When the New Des Moines makes it bow it will have the Publix shows as a standard feature, while the Vitaphone equipment will be transferred to the Capitol Theatre.

Ward Crane, Actor, Dies at Lake Saranac

Following an illness of several weeks, Ward Crane, motion picture actor, died last Saturday, July 21, at Lake Saranac, N. Y., where he had gone about three months ago to regain his health. Up until a week or so ago, his health seemed to have improved, but he was shortly afterwards stricken with pneumonia and suffered a relapse that ended in death. His father was with him at the time of his passing.

Ward Crane was born in Albany where he lived for a number of years. At one time he served as confidential stenographer to Governor William Sulzer and during the war he attained the rank of officer in the navy. For a time he was stationed in Los Angeles, where he met Alan Dwan, the director, and was given his first chance at acting.

Messages of condolence were received from various stars. Among them was one from Jack Dempsey, a close friend of the actor, who was also present at the funeral held on Wednesday at one of the Albany cathedrals. A military guard attended as well as many state officials.

Pathe Resuming Serial Production September

On September 1 Pathe will resume its serial-making activities. On that date Spencer Bennett will put "The Fire Detective" into production. The story is an original by Frank Leon Smith and George Arthur Gray; the latter is doing the continuity. The new serial will utilize sets in both the Metropolitan and Pathe studios, it is probable. The two other serials that will follow will be "The Tiger's Shadow" and "Queen of the North Woods."

Brent and Brook Principals in "The Letter"

Evelyn Brent and Clive Brook have been assigned to the principal roles in Paramount's forthcoming film version of Somerset Maugham's "The Letter."

Miss Brent will have the Katherine Cornell role. Brook will play the husband. Work on the picture will probably begin following the completion of "Interference."

Film Boards Reply to Government

previous owner or operator loses the capacity to complete the performance of his existing uncompleted contracts with distributors for the reason that each contract calls for exhibition at the theatre which he has transferred and as he is no longer the operator of that theatre he no longer has the authority to say what pictures shall be exhibited there. The contract does not permit the exhibition to take place at any other theatre than that specified in the contract. To show the pictures at some other theatre of the seller, if the latter owned another theatre, would moreover, violate the protection given other theatres in other contracts of the distributor for the same pictures and therefore would not be practicable.

"In many instances the principal or only asset of the exhibitor is the ownership of the theatre which he has transferred.

"Failure of the exhibitor to make a condition precedent to the change of ownership that the new owner, lessor or operator shall assume his uncompleted contracts results in a total loss on such contracts to the distributors in many cases.

Uncompleted Contracts

"Every purchaser of a theatre knows full well before he buys a theatre that the seller in all probability has uncompleted contracts with various distributors for the exhibition of pictures at the theatre which he proposes to buy. Every purchaser well knows, before he buys, that his purchase of the theatre will cause the seller to breach every existing uncompleted contract previously entered into by the seller for the exhibition of pictures at the theatre which is to be sold and that every distributor who has such a contract with the seller will suffer loss and damage on account of such breach, unless either the seller makes a settlement with the distributor before the transfer or the purchaser assumes the outstanding uncompleted contracts."

The answer declares that the Credit Committee system gives full protection to all responsible and honest exhibitors.

"Defendant distributors at all times," respondent companies say, "have been and are ready to complete existing uncompleted contracts entered into with the previous owner of a theatre and to deliver pictures under such contracts to the new owner or operator without demanding of the latter that he deposit security under such contracts or any of them."

Wisconsin Unit Convenes

M. P. T. O. Hold 14th Annual Meet at Milwaukee; Sound Films Topic; New Officers Are Elected.

MOTION Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin enjoyed their fourteenth annual convention at the Wisconsin Hotel, Milwaukee, on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. About one hundred exhibitors were present at the convention which was officially opened by F. J. McWilliams, president, on Tuesday morning. Reports of various committees were taken up on Tuesday. J. O. Smith, representing the Radio Corporation of America and Mr. McKinney of Vitaphone addressed the Wednesday afternoon assemblage on the subject of synchronized and sound pictures.

R. G. Woodhull, national president of Motion Picture Theater Owners, was one of the principal speakers of the convention.

It was agreed by exhibitors that they be very careful in the matter of synchronized pictures until standard and uniform equipment can be obtained at a price that will make it possible for the exhibitor to so equip his theater.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Steve Bauer will be president to succeed F. J. McWilliams. Fred C. Seegert is the new vice-president. George Beyer is Sergeant-at-Arms. E. Langemack, treasurer, and Max Krofta, recording secretary, were re-elected.

F. J. McWilliams was elected to the Executive Committee for a three year term, and George Fischer was elected for a five year term to succeed Tom Foster, resigned.

Members elected to the Board of Arbitration are: A. L. Robarge of Merrill, James J. Boden, South Milwaukee, and E. Berth of Kiel. Alternates are: Aug. Berkholtz of West Bend, Bert Fisher of Milwaukee, Charles Washicheck of Milwaukee.

204 New German Films

Schedules May Be Increased; New Standard Contract Forthcoming; American Pictures First in Austria

THE producers' schedules having been announced, it now becomes apparent that 204 new German features are scheduled or in production, according to a news despatch from H. Fraenkel, Berlin Correspondent for Motion Picture News. Further news bulletins indicate that contracts now in vogue will be abolished shortly in favor of a standard contract. The foreign trade will be invited to the meetings this year of the German Exhibitors and Renters associations to be held from August 21 to the 26. An additional report states that according to the official figures recently published by the Vienna Chamber of Commerce the American films led the field during 1927,

Of the 204 new German features Ufa has 17 and Defu, the German-First National concern, 15. These two companies head the list, which, it is thought certain, will increase during the next few weeks. It is estimated that more than half of the market's demands for the current season will be taken care of by home production.

The new standard contract has just been drawn up by a committee of exhibitors and renters. It will probably be ready for ratification near the end of the present month.

The exact figures of feature pictures handled in Austria during the past year are as follows:197 American; 140 German; 28 French; 15 Austrian. The United States also led in the number of short subjects consumed by the Austrian public, the numbers being: 406 American; 148 German; 119 French; 135 Austrian. These figures show that in both the feature and short subject fields Austria's home production is last in the tabulations. In view of the recent legislation, however, Austrian motion picture activities are taking a turn for the better.

Sapiro vs. M-G-M Suit Now Before Judge

THE action of the I. M. P. E. A. for an injunction against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to prevent the latter corporation from serving the M. and S. circuit in New York City is now in the hands of the court, briefs having been filed during the week. Aaron Sapiro appeared for the I. M. P. E. A. and Robert Swain for M-G-M.

Mr. Swain, in defending M-G-M, claimed that M. and S. had voluntarily withdrawn from the Sapiro buying group before entering into the deal with Metro. He charged the I. M. P. E. A. with operating in contrary to the Anti-Sherman Act in that exhibitor members of the group were banded together to allocate product.

Mr. Sapiro claimed that M-G-M had committed an unlawful act in making a deal directly with M. and S., asserting that knowledge of the contract said to exist between M. and S. and the I. M. P. E. A. had been in the hands of M-G-M.

Change in Release Dates for Christie Comedies

Three changes are announced in the recent schedule of release dates for Christie comedies.

"The Dizzy Diver," Billy Dooley's first vehicle with sound accompaniment, will go to exhibitors on August 11, instead of August 18. "Hot Scotch," Jack Duffy's first sound comedy, will be released on August 18, instead of August 25. "Stop Kidding," starring Bobby Vernon, will be ready for showings on August 25 instead of August 11.

Other Christie comedies, the dates of which have been announced, are definite.

Larger Pa. Organization

Recent M. P. T. O. Membership Drive Proves Extremely Successful; Arbitration Functions Effectively

AS a result of the M. P. T. O. membership drive, which started in April and was concluded June 15th, the following circuits are now members of the Pennsylvania organization: Stanley Company of America, with its Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey houses; Handel & Hovner, with its circuit of 12 theatres in Southern N. J.; Wilmer & Vincent's circuit of theatres in Penna.; Equity Theatres, Inc., 45 theatres in Phila. and Eastern Penna.; East Coast Circuit of 9 houses in Eastern Penna.; Wm. Freihorfer's seven theatres in Philadelphia; P. M. Lewis with his circuit of 6 theatres in Atlantic City, N. J.; Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger's Circuit and the Appell Amusement Co. of York, Pa.

Arbitration has shown that from 1926 to 1928, of 845 cases, only ten per cent involving members of the organization reached the Board of Arbitration and of the total number of cases filed against members of the organization, which amounted to 79, fifty per cent were settled before hearing.

The M. P. T. O. of Eastern Penna., Southern N. J. and Delaware has taken the stand that its committee on the Board of Arbitration will not sit upon any cases brought by non-members, nor will it sit to consider any action brought by non-theatricals.

At the last meeting of the organization a committee was appointed to draft a code of ethics for the members. This committee consists of N. F. Power, of the Strand theatre, Doylestown, Pa., chairman; A. B. Smith, Salem, N. J.; J. M. Wax, Philadelphia; Lewen Pizor, pres. as ex-officio member; and George P. Aarons, secretary. The committee will hold its first meeting July 11th.

Of the 186 theatres in operation at the present time in Philadelphia, there are now only ten which are not members of the organization.

Prizes for securing the most new members in the M. P. T. O. membership drive have been distributed as follows:

First prize, $100.00, to William Bethel, Success Exchange, 32 new members; second prize, $25.00, to George Schwartz, Metro-Goldwyn, 20 new members; third prize, $15.00, to Ed. Whaley, United Artists, 16 new members; fourth prize, $10,000, to William Mansell, First National, 4 new members; fifth prize, $10.00, to M. Joy Week for Summer

M-G-M Inaugurates Idea of All-Comedy Programs for Consumption During the Hot Months

"LAUGH Week" finds a parallel with "Joy Week," conceived by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as an ideal method of combating the inroads on box offices during the hot summertime. The basic idea of "Joy Week" is practically the same as that of its predecessor, but M-G-M considers it more elastic as it allows exhibitors to present their weeks at any time that best suits their convenience. The company has garnered box office material in its new Joy Week Press Sheet and in a line of accessories to be offered all theatres taking up the idea of presenting all-comedy bills under the M-G-M banner.

A theatre booking a program made of comedy shorts combined with comedy features will have at its disposal special one-sheets, five styles of three sheet snipes and slides. These will be distributed free and tie-up possibilities will also be on hand with manufacturers of pennants, balloons, streamers, confetti, etc., the tie-ups to be arranged on a minimum cost basis. The press sheet offers suggestions for programs and lists the titles and stars of the productions, the number of reels and the running time of each subject.

Oklahoma City Labor Controversy Settled

A CONTROVERSY between the motion picture operators' union and Oklahoma City theatre managers reached an acute situation, but has been amicably settled. A walkout of all operators affiliated with the Capitol (Publix) and the Liberty (Mid-West Amusement Co.) was imminent, but after a conference between the would-be strikers and the theatre managers the position of the latter was sustained and the incident closed, but with a continuance of union operators working in the booths. The strike situation arose over the demands of the union for two men to be employed to operate so-called "talking machines."

Had the strike taken place a sufficient number of non-union operators had proffered their services to keep the theatres going.

"Gaucho" Shown Privately Before Royalty

A motion picture presentation was held last week at Brook House, the London home of Lord and Lady Mountbatten, when "Douglas Fairbanks as The Gaucho" was shown to a distinguished audience including King Alfonso of Spain, the Duke and Duchess of York, Admiral Beatty and other distinguished members of the naval and diplomatic services.

"U" Using 1700 Extras in Four New Features

One of the largest corps of extras ever used at the Universal studio was pressed into service this week at the Laemmle plant at Universal City where productions are now assuming celluloid form. 1700 were used altogether.

Harry Pollard, beginning work on "Showboat," used 900 extras for interior theatre scenes on board the Showboat. William Wyler used 300 in scenes for "The Shakedown," being made at the San Pedro oil fields. Wesley Ruggles used another 300 in "Salvage," also on location at San Pedro. The fourth and last batch of extras, 200 in number, was used by Nat Ross while directing scenes on the Russian River for the third "Collegians" series.

Production of New Films Under Way by Roach

Ever since the resumption of production at the Hal Roach Studios immediately following the month's vacation during May, every department has been running at high speed in order to prepare in advance the various releases of the four series of comedies which will be distributed during 1928-29 by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Six productions have already been received in the New York offices of M-G-M.

Charley Chase has completed "Imagine My Embarrassment"; "Our Gang" has completed "Growing Pains" and "The Old White Horse;" Max Davidson has completed "That Night" and "Do Gentlemen Snore"; and Laurel and Hardy have finished "Should Married Men Go Home."

Other productions which have been completed as far as photography goes but which are still in the process of being cut and titled are the "Our Gang" production of "School Begins"; Charley Chase in "Is Everybody Happy" and Laurel and Hardy in "Early To Bed." This places the studio far in advance of its record at a corresponding period last year.

The Gaiety Theatre in New York last Wednesday evening held, for the first time, the showing of "Lost in the Arctic," a new Fox Film Corporation release. It succeeded "Fazil," Fox production, into this house.

The picture is described as a motion picture record of an Aretic expedition headed by H. A. Snow, explorer and cinematographer, and tells of the fate of a group of explorers who were lost in the Arctic expedition of Vilhjamur Stefansson in 1913. Their fate was a mystery until many years afterwards when the Snow expedition cleared it up.

Snow is reported to have stayed in the icy wastes for about a year and has also recorded action pictures of the pursuit of whales, polar bears, seals, walrus, and other forms of polar life.

The picture is to be shown indefiinitely at the Gaiety.

Paramount Engages Two New Players

Paul Guertzman, a 15-year-old Russian refugee, and John Loder, a former British cavalry officer, have been engaged as screen players by Paramount, Jesse L. Lasky having discovered them during his recent trip abroad.

Loder has acted in pictures in Germany and his first role was under the direction of Alexander Corda. He played his first featured part in 1917. A year later he was given a position with Gainsborough Pictures in England where he is now completing a film.

Pittsburgh Unit Won't Arbitrate Until Gorris Suit Is Settled

PENDING the settlement of a suit brought against the Film Board by P. L. Gorris, an exhibitor of McKeesport, Pa., the members of the western Pennsylvania unit have served notice that they will not act on further matters of arbitration until a decision has been reached. A temporary injunction has been granted Gorris whereby distributors are restrained from enforcing the customary deposit demands.

At a recent meeting of the exhibitor association, members stated that they would not arbitrate until settlement of the case and voted that it be vigorously prosecuted.

Alabama Houses Change

Trend of Theatres in All Parts of State Is Toward Operation by Chains

MANY changes have taken place in Birmingham theatres within the past few months. The trend toward chain operation in that city and, in fact, Alabama as a whole, is very marked. For example, since January 1, the following towns have been added to chain management:

In Athens, Ala., Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc. (Tony Sudekum and Louis Rosenbaum) have erected the new Ritz in opposition to the Dixie, the latter house having been under management of R. C. Allen for the past fifteen years.

In Alabama City, the two houses formerly controlled by Jack Martin—the Ritz and Savoy—have passed under control of Tony Sudekum, thus giving his chain four theatres in the Gadsden district.

In Russellville, Craddock's Airdome is in opposition to W. J. Hurn's Princess; Mr. Craddock also operating the Princess Theatre at Cherokee, Ala.

The Princess at Piedmont, Ala., long operated by J. G. Varnell, is now under management of T. E. and Morris Watson, who also operate the Strand at Montevallo and the Aldrich at Aldrich, Ala.

The Liberty at Attalla, formerly operated by George P. Walker, has been added to Thomas E. Orr's circuit, consisting of theatres at Boaz, Albertville and Guntersville, and it is reported that Colonel Orr is taking over a theatre at Ft. Payne.

In the Birmingham district proper, many changes are noticeable. The Five Points Theatre, which formerly was operated by J. W. Peck and son, has passed into the hands of the Marvin Wise circuit, which now controls ten theatres in the district. The former Joe Steed circuit, consisting of the Fairfield at Fairfield, the Wylam at Wylam and the North Birmingham at North Birmingham, have recently been sold to A. P. Sloss and associates, thus marking the passing from active theatrical management of one of the oldest showmen in the district—Joe Steed.

The Champion, a colored house, built and operated by Henry Hury, has been sold to Paul Engler, who conducts the Frolic, also a colored house.

Educational Studios Busy

Production Activity at Intense Pitch; 11 Comedies Now Complete and Five More Are in Work

PRODUCTION is booming at the Educational studios on the West Coast and the mid-summer zenith of activity is fast becoming a fact. In less than two months' time, nine two-reel and two one-reel comedies have been completed and production is well along on five more. Within the new month or so, exhibitors will be able to see eight or a dozen pictures for pre-viewing purposes, it is thought.

"Big Boy," whose first Juvenile picture for the new season was recently pre-viewed, has also finished his second of the series. The first is a comedy revolving around a fire house, while the second is said to be of a more pathetic nature. Charles Lamont directed the four-year old star in both numbers. Wallace Lupino has also completed two two-reel comedies under the direction of Jules White.

Lupino Lane is making a comedy burlesquing pirate lore. Henry W. George is at the megaphone in this offering. Al St. John is featured in two new completed Mermaids. In the first he is assisted by Estelle Bradley. Stephen Roberts directed the comedian in the two films. Monty Collins, recently graduated from the one-reel to the two-reel ranks, is starred in another Mermaid, also directed by Roberts.

Jerry Drew continues as the dapper comedian in a new Ideal comedy, recently completed by Charles Lamont. Monty Collins and Henry Murdock are the stars of two Cameos, which contain Ruby McCoy and Lucille Hutton. Charles Lamont will place the first Dorothy Devore into work within the week, while the unit making the "Russ Farrell, Aviator" series will continue location work in the desert near Mojave, Calif.

M-G-M Will Release 6 Features in September

During the initial month of the new season, September, to be exact, there will be six feature film productions on the releasing schedule of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. According to opinions expressed by various M-G-M officials, the line-up is one of the strongest ever assembled.

"Excess Baggage" will be the first of the new pictures to reach the public. It will be followed by "Our Dancing Daughters," said to be the first production to be filmed with the new ultra-modernistic settings and incandescent lights. "While the City Sleeps," starring Lon Chaney, "Beyond the Sierras," an adventure story of early California starring Tim McCoy, are two other productions that will make their appearance during the month. The last two September releases will be "The Bellamy Trial" and "The Cameraman."

Leo Morrison Sees Big Times for Actors

Leo Morrison, among the busiest of the Broadway agents, sees big times ahead in the "talkies" for the stage star, many of whom, however, have still to be sold on the sound pictures. Morrison has been identified with talking pictures since their inception. He placed "Chic" Sale in the first two-reel talking comedy about a year ago.

Among others whom Morrison has brought to the talking screen are Van and Schenck in popular songs, Leo Carillo in his four talkies, Clark and McCullough in "The Honor System" and "The Interview," Joe Cook in "The Ball Game" and Lionel Atwill in a dramatic sketch.

Weiss Sells Great Britain Rights to Serial

European Films, Ltd., of London, England, will distribute the Weiss Bros. serial, "The Police Reporter," in Great Britain, under the terms of negotiations just completed by Max Weiss, president of Artclass Pictures.

European Films, Ltd., is the British end of Universal, and details for the handling of the Weiss Bros. serial were handled by James Bryson, managing director, who conferred with the Artclass executive while the latter was in Europe.

Exchanges Must Handle Zoning Plan Protests

THE resolution of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, protesting against the protection zoning plan of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, which was submitted to the board recently, is not a matter for the board to handle, but is up to the individual exchanges, Harry Taylor, president of the film board, said. Thus it seems that the protection plan, upon which much time was spent in devising, is due for a natural death. Points brought out in the exhibitors' resolution alleged that no protection plan could be worked out which would prove fair to all theatres.

"Deported" Title of New del Rio Vehicle

"Deported" will be the title of the Dolores del Rio picture to follow "Revenge." The film will be based on an original story written by George Scarborough, playwright, and purchased from him by Edwin Carewe, who will direct.

In London, during August, Edwin Carewe will discuss the new del Rio picture with Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists. Miss del Rio is coming to New York next month for her first visit to the metropolis, and then she is sailing for Europe.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Radical Changes Needed, Says Weber

Producing Manager Says Forces Must Combine for Success

L. LAWRENCE WEBER, secretary of the Broadway Producing Managers Association, prominent as a producer of legitimate stage successes, and one-time motion picture producer sees radical changes coming if sound pictures are to be a success, and has little fear that the "talkies" are going to disrupt the legitimate stage.

Mr. Weber, always interested in motion pictures, gives it as his opinion that the only way sound pictures can succeed with dialogue and as reproductions of stage plays is for the motion picture producers to get together with the producers of the legitimate stage. He looks upon the present day picture director as entirely incompetent to direct pictures that carry dialogue and says the only possible hope for such pictures ever rising above the mediocre stage is to bring to them a combination of the art of the stage and the screen.

"The motion picture director has been visualizing pictures from the one angle for fifteen years. He cannot change overnight, nor do I think many of them are competent to direct under the new scheme of things. Excuses are being made for the directors on the ground of imperfections in the mechanical devices that record and reproduce sound. Of course there will be improvements in these devices, but even as they are at present, the majority of the glaring faults as seen on the Broadway screens now in connection with sound pictures are entirely faults of ignorance on the part of directors. They simply do not know the technique that now is entirely different than they have been accustomed to. They are not familiar enough with sound recording and amplifying devices to know what they are all about or just how they are going to be when reproduced on the screen.

"Remember now, I am not talking as secretary of the Producing Managers Association, but I am merely giving you my personal slant on this brand new angle of motion pictures. I do think that the only way they can become a success is to bring stage producers into the industry. What the Producing Managers Association will do as a body, I am not prepared to say. I do remember back fifteen years however, when motion pictures were first brought up before meeting of the Producing Managers and at that time it was their opinion that the motion pictures were just a fly-by-night affair that would have their flare and pass on. I am not too sure that the same condition or state of mind does not exist today with regard to the talking pictures. The producing managers are a hard body to get together and they have their own troubles, financial or otherwise.

"I think it would be a wonderful thing if some sort of scheme were worked out whereby we could pictures jointly to the mutual benefit of all. Picture producers may not think they need the Broadway producer, but they are going to make a big mistake and these talking pictures will not survive unless the best brains of the legitimate stage are consulted.

"For one thing you will find if the Broadway producer participated in the production of motion pictures there will be a tremendous cut in the cost of production of pictures. We would not stand for a minute for the ridiculous salaries now paid to stars and others in the picture game. Some of these salaries they pay inconsequential people are ridiculous. Why, I have seen girls go from Broadway into the pictures and get $2,000, $3,000 and $5,000 a week. It is entirely unnecessary and uncalled for and it could not exist if producing managers of Broadway were called in to participate in production.

"I believe that the actor or the actress should be fairly paid and possibly participate in the profits of a picture. It would not be fair to them to engage them for a picture that takes only two weeks of their time and at the same time deprives them of the customary time they would put in on the road in a legitimate show. And these pictures are going to deprive the actor and actress of a lot of money they would get on the road, for I think road companies would be few if legitimate Broadway shows are accurately and satisfactorily produced with dialogue.

"It would be no more than right to cut the player in on a share of the profits in addition to any salary paid him or her. For the sake of argument say, the players got ten per cent of the profits. That would recompense them for the time they would lose on the road and it would assure their best work in the picture presentation.

"Under any circumstances, I do not think talking pictures are going to disrupt the legitimate stage. The best players in the best shows are usually under run-of-play contracts and are bound to stick until the show concludes. There is a clause in the contract that precludes their appearances elsewhere without permission of the manager to whom they are under contract.

"Those players who have not run-of-play contracts will hesitate before signing for a picture that will give them but a week or two of work, unless, as I say, they are allowed to participate in the profits of the picture. These, however, are among the difficulties that will be overcome if the picture producers get together with the legitimate producers. I think if this could be arranged both the pictures, the legitimate stage and the players would benefit to a greater extent than ever before.

Woods Reported Heading Group to Acquire Sound Device

A L. H. WOODS is reported at the head of a group of Broadway producers who are contemplating the taking over of a sound device, on which Woods now has an option, and producing their own Broadway successes with dialogue. Among those mentioned as likely to become affiliated with Woods in the project are, Arthur Hammerstein, Max Marcin, the Shuberts, Sam Harris, Archie Selwn and William A. Brady.

According to the Broadway rumor, Woods has an option on the device until the middle of September, the producers are to put up equal amounts for acquiring the property, and the stage successes are to be produced under their direction.

There has been no word yet on the question of distribution, but the story is to the effect that the pictures are to be roadshowed in the principal cities of the United States in the legitimate houses. They will be withheld from showing in such cities as the legitimate production may play, at least until such time as the show has played those cities.

It is said that in the larger cities where the legitimate production will not be seen runs for the pictures are to be continued for a period of six months or more when possible. Prices, it is said will be kept down to the lowest figure, so that the pictures of New York stage hits will be available to all.

Mr. Woods refused to discuss the proposition for the present, but said there would likely be important developments by the end of the week. He did admit that negotiations were on for the sound production device and that the closing of the deal was likely in the near future.

New Decision Bans Censoring Sound

has been conferred upon it by the Act of 1915."

The present case came up when the Fox corporation took an appeal recent from the order of the board after the latter disapproved a talking picture entitled "She's Still My Baby."

The opinion of Judge Martin upheld the censors on the same question. It was brought before the court in injunction proceedings filed by Vitagraph, Inc. These conflicting decisions can probably only be determined now by a decision from the Supreme Court. Vitagraph has already filed its appeal, and the censors are expected to take the same action on appeal from Judge McDevitt's ruling.

While Philadelphia is engaged in a judicial dispute as the rights of the censors, Baltimore censors are going right ahead making deletions where they are considered necessary, although no authority has been given the board to do so. Dr. George Heller is chairman of the board. He says deletions are rare, and rather than objecting to the procedure, exhibitors have helped the board in the matter.

Censoring of such films has to be done at the theatres equipped to show them, as headquarters of censors are not equipped versations in dialogue films are furnished with sound mechanism. Transcripts of conthe board by exhibitors, but film is viewed in theatres to get the proper emphasis.

Dr. Heller said that if a protest came up he could get a ruling promptly from Thomas H. Robinson, attorney-general, because the latter is fully informed on the matter. Should the attorney-general render an adverse opinion to the board in case of protest then an appeal would be made to the legislature.

Sound Synchronization for "Show Folks"

Ralph Block, associate producer at the Pathe Studio announces that sound synchronization will be used throughout "Show Folks," now being filmed under the direction of Paul Stein.

New musical scores written by Chris Schomberg, especially for the original dance numbers will be introduced to the public for the first time through the sound effects used in conjunction with the picture.

Lina Basquette, Eddie Quillan and Robert Armstrong have the featured roles in "Show Folks."

Minnesota Equipped for All Sound Films

Edward A. Smith, managing director of the new Minnesota theatre in Minneapolis, announced last week that his theatre is equipped to handle all types of sound films, including Vitaphone, Movietone, and Firnatone. The total cost of installation approximates $100,000.

The Minnesota theatre is said to be the first in the world designed and built with the idea of acoustics especially adapted to sound recording devices.

Selznick Heads Organization That Will Market Picturetone

L. J. SELZNICK reenters the motion picture industry as the head of a group who have acquired Cortellaphone, a sound recording and reproducing device, which at the present time records and reproduces on disc only. The organization under which Mr. Selznick and his associates will operate will be known as Picturetone, and has been chartered under that name in Albany.

Mr. Selznick has not yet announced his plans, but it had been previously announced by Cortellaphone that within a short time they contemplated reproducing sound from film. The Cortellaphone Company had also announced it would be ready to make installations within ninety days.

South and Mid-West Are Making Installations Rapidly

SOUND reproducing equipment is being installed rapidly in some of the larger cities in the south and middle west, and much interest is being shown by the motion picture patrons. There is still a hesitancy, however, on the part of many exhibitors, who are inclined to wait further developments before tieing up definitely to a contract.

Reports from different cities are as follows:

Considerable interest is manifested in Birmingham, Ala., among local theatre operators in the many "sound" devices now being placed on the market. Local theatre men realize that talking film devices are here to stay, but are cautious about committing themselves on the merits of any particular style of synchronization. They are keenly alive to the possibilities.

The growing popularity of sound pictures is responsible for the innovation which is to bring Vitaphone and Movietone productions to the Howard Theatre, Publix de luxe house in Atlanta, next week. Before an intimation of its intention was known to the general public the Howard had sensed the reaction toward synchronized pictures as a virtual demand for this new feature of theatre entertainment, and had ordered Vitaphone and Movietone equipment.

Under the direction of expert engineers the installation of that equipment is now completed. Preliminary tests are highly satisfactory.

Mechanics are rushing the final work of converting the Ambassador and Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, into sound motion picture houses. Both plan to present their first talking feature pictures on August 4.

Loew's plans to open its sound policy with United Artists "Two Lovers," while Richard Dix in the part-talkie "Warming Up" will be the initial offering of the Ambassador under its new policy.

The Ambassador's first sound picture will be a Movietone product. The opening sound bill will also include several short subjects, completely eliminating the theatre's regular orchestra and stage presentation. Ed Lowry, master of ceremonies at the Ambassador, will take a two weeks' vacation starting on August 4. However, he will still be featured at the Ambassador as his second Vitaphone subject is booked for that time to fill the gap caused by his absence.

A corps of technical experts are completing installation of Movietone equipment at the Des Moines Theatre. The Des Moines is the first Iowa Theatre to have the new sound producing device installed.

The equipment installed at a cost of some $13,000 will be complete for its first public showing early in August.

Installation of talkies in the Indiana, Circle and Ohio theatres is planned this fall by Skouras-Publix theatres. The local houses will join other Skouras-Publix houses which have turned to talking films. Contracts for installation of equipment have been let to the Hatfield Electric Company, local electrical house. Equipment and installation will cost about $100,000 in the three houses. The Ohio is closed down until Labor Day for remodeling. The Indiana will be ready to show talkies August 4th.

"U" Breaks Ground for Sound System

Main Stage, Theatre and Monitor Room Make Up First Unit

HOLLYWOOD, July 21.—Ground was broken yesterday at Universal City for the erection of unit No. 1 of the new soundproof stage system recently ordered by Carl Laemmle, president Universal Pictures. The first group will consist of a main stage, 60 x 100 feet; a combined theatre and monitor room, 36 x 50 and an apparatus section 73 x 53 feet.

The main stage is to be of the truss type, with walls built of sound-proof material and the floor insulated separately from the balance of the building to obviate ground noises. The ceiling is especially designed to prevent overhead sounds such as heavy winter rain storms and passing airplanes from penetrating the shooting chamber.

The theatre and monitor room will house an expert who controls the microphones and sound volume by a remote control system. The monitor hears only the recorded voice although he is able to see the players through plate glass windows. He is thus able to modify or enlarge the voices or atmosphere sounds.

The theatre will be built in exact proportions to an actual theatre. The screen, projection "throw" and sound volume will be proportionately diminished so that actual theatrical conditions can be simulated. Projection rooms are to be built so that a picture can be screened into the Main stage itself to accommodate post-synchronization when a 100-piece orchestra may be required, for example.

The apparatus section will house a generator room, a battery room, amplification room, two recording rooms, stock room, test rooms, office, two cutting rooms, disc-shaving room and rest rooms. The recording and amplifying rooms will be vibrationless, special concrete piles being sunk to separately support these two chambers. Work is progressing rapidly on the new units and they will be ready for occupancy early this Fall.

The first Universal production to be made with the Movietone process and which will introduce new and thrilling sequences in sound, including a prize fight, is "Shakedown." James Murray and Barbara Kent will play the leading roles.

Talking pictures will at last give Clarence Brown an opportunity to accomplish something he has wanted to do for some years.

Ever since the success on the stage three seasons ago of "Hamlet," in modern clothes, Brown has wanted to transfer it to the screen. The reason he has hesitated doing it is because he realized "Hamlet," as is, is not what is termed "screen material," without a mass of subtitles. Talking characters will take away this serious drawback.

Following the making of three pictures already assigned Brown for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer program, he hopes to venture a modern version of "Hamlet" on the talking screen.

Contemplated sound films are already bringing about radical changes in all studios," declared Edward J. Montagne, scenario-editor-in-chief of Universal, recently. "The voice test is becoming just as important as the screen test was only a few months ago, in casting pictures; and the candidates loom up everywhere.

The Ernst Lubitsch production, tentatively titled "Conquest," expected to start production in September, will be the first John Barrymore picture with sound devices and also the biggest screen vehicle in Barrymore's career, according to John W. Considine, chief of United Artists who will supervise the picture.

A huge stage to be exclusively used in the making of sound device pictures is being rushed to completion on the United Artists lot. Lubitsch is assembling a big staff preparatory to launching the new Barrymore opus.

Andres de Segurola's great demand for talking pictures is due in a large measure to the fact that he speaks and sings with equal facility in seven languages. The former opera star is now playing an important feature role in his third Vitaphone feature for Warner Brothers, the Fanny Brice starring vehicle, "My Man."

Fox Substitutes "Talkie" Program for Silent Comedy Shorts

BECAUSE the belief is held that the silent comedy is passed in this day of the talking movie, Fox Films announces that it immediately will discontinue the production of silent two-reel comedies and will concentrate on short subjects with sound, instead. Word of this decision is being sent to Fox salesmen throughout the country. The program of 26 two-reel comedies announced for the new season having become obsolete, the Fox production forces will turn out 52 Movietone Entertainments, 25 of which have been finished. Several of the comedies in sound have also been finished, including "The Family Picnic," "The Mystery Mansion" and "Four A. M."

Another angle said to be an important consideration behind the new Fox short subject policy is that a large number of first runs are scheduled to open in the fall in various key cities and that Fox is determined to supply these theatres with what is considered first run product, namely, sound pictures. Hence, the company's step to abandon the production of soundless films in favor of those with sound effects.

Fraser Discusses Sound Scenarists

Visualization, not theorization, is what is needed most in motion pictures, according to William R. Fraser, General Manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation.

"The average literary man breaking into the profession of motion picture writing, strives more for word effect than he does picture results" states Fraser. "It is an entirely different proposition moulding together brilliant word passages than visualizing their possibilities in picture sequences.

"The trouble with a great many comedies is that in their incubation stage, they 'talk' funny, or dramatic, as the case may be. This talk takes on a much different hue when the director starts to work on the production, and finds that instead of action, he is handling a mass of words.

"There are several types of comedy writers, but it is invariably the one who has had experience in putting bits of business in stage plays, or vaudeville acts, or who has been educated entirely in the practical school of picture making, who is the best contributor to the success of pictures. The 'wise cracker' who can sit back and make his audience roar with funny stories and smart cracks, too often fails to differentiate between action and word gags. He deals too completely in the latter.

"With sound pictures reaching their present stage of popularity, the 'word' specialist will find a more important position in the picture world. But I believe the biggest factor in the production field will be the man who can "think" in terms of pictures.

Paramount Completing Sound Details

Plans to Establish Distribution Offices in 9 Leading Cities

PARAMOUNT is rapidly completing details for the making and distribution of sound pictures. The company has decided to open offices in nine cities of the United States from which feature and short feature sound pictures will be distributed. They will also make trailers with sound accompaniment for those pictures so equipped.

As announced last week, Paramount will produce a minimum of 25 to 30 feature length productions with sound accompaniment. In addition to these, the Christie product will have sound, as will Paramount News and many novelty short features produced under the supervision of Emanuel Cohen, director of the short feature department.

"Warming Up," starring Richard Dix and "The Loves of an Actress," starring Pola Negri, are the first two feature length productions complete with sound. Others now in work are Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose," Ernst Lubitsch's "The Patriot," which stars Emil Jannings; "The Canary Murder Case," a detective mystery melodrama with William Powell, Louise Brooks, Ruth Taylor and James Hall featured in the cast; "Wings"; Erich von Stroheim's "The Wedidng March," in which he also plays a featured role with Fay Wray.

Short features complete with sound are "Dizzy Diver" and "Hot Scotch," two of the Christie series of two reel comedies. Other Christie subjects now in process of synchronization are "Stop Kidding," "Skating Home," "The Sock Exchange" and "Oriental Hugs."

Douglas MacLean's first feature length picture for Christie will be made with sound accompaniment at the Christie studio where the Electrical Research Products is now erecting a sound-proof stage. The title of this picture is "The Carnation Kid."

Construction of the sound proof stages at the Paramount Long Island studios is progressing and it is expected that they will be completed within a fortnight. The novelty subjects will be filmed there as well as the longer pictures.

One result of the invasion of sound into the picture field is the fact that this form of entertainment will draw closer together the Paramount and Publix organizations. In the past Paramount has confined its attention to production leaving the exhibition end of its business in the hands of Publix.

Approximately 50,000 musicians are on the payrolls of theatres owned, controlled or directed by Publix. Among these musicians are about 1,000 who have gained fame in their sphere of activity through creative ability. The men at the head of the Publix music and presentation departments have had years of experience in both legitimate stage and picture work.

Heading the list is Nathaniel W. Finston, chief of the music department who worked seven years with various talking machine companies including Victor and Columbia. Running close seconds to Finston are Frank Harling, the composer who wrote the music for "Deep River," Dominicko Savino, well known orchestrator and composer, Walter Donaldson, Dave Stamper, 15 years with Ziegfeld's Follies, and L. Wolfe Gilbert.

Other outstanding music and production men in the Publix organization are Herman Hand, orchestrator for Sousa, Paul Whiteman and Walter Damrosch, Einar Swan and Adolph Deutsch, jazz arrangers, and George Drumm who has been writing motion picture music scores for the past 20 years.

These men will work in conjunction with Paramount production officials in the making of novelty and subjects.

In order to expedite sound picture service Paramount will establish a sound picture exchange in 9 cities in this country strategically located. These sound picture exchanges will be located in the same buildings housing regular Paramount exchanges but will be operated separately.

Sound picture service stations will be located in Boston, serving Boston, New Haven and Maine; New York, serving New York, Brooklyn, New Jersey, Albany and Buffalo; Philadelphia, serving Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh; Atlanta, serving Atlanta, Memphis, Charlotte and Jacksonville; Dallas, serving Dallas, New Orleans and San Antonio; Chicago, serving Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Sioux Falls; Cincinnati, serving Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Indianapolis; Kansas City, serving Kansas City, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Denver, Des Moines and Omaha; San Francisco, serving San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Seattle and Portland.

A master print of each sound picture will be kept at each of the sound exchanges and equipment for examination of sound prints is being installed at those offices. In the case of Vitaphone (disc) sound recording exhibitors will receive duplicate sets of records to guard against loss of exhibition through breakage in transportation or possible defects in the discs.

U. A. Films to be Made Suitable for Houses Wired or Not

UNITED ARTISTS' producers will make pictures for the international market and for all types of film houses—those "wired" with $15,000 worth of sound equipment and those not so equipped and dependent upon one upright piano—Al Lichtman, vice-president and sales head says.

The sound form in which the public receives its pictures will depend on the individual exhibitor; United Artists will offer picture entertainment intrinsically attractive, prepared for sound or silent presentation.

Synchronization and sound effects will be employed in each of the eighteen new pictures, it is explained, and the technique of making films will remain unchanged so that the 95 per cent of American film houses that are not "wired" also can properly exhibit the new United Artists Pictures.

Voices of Gloria Swanson, John Barrymore and Ronald Colman may be heard in their new pictures; the voice of Lupe Velez will be heard singing in "The Love Song," D. W. Griffith's film; Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld will arrange synchronized scores and sound effects; Irving Berlin is under exclusive contract to compose new songs for United Artists Pictures and already he has contributed "Marie" for Vilma Banky's new picture and "Where Is the Song of Songs for Me?", for "The Love Song." These are instances cited by Mr. Lichtman to indicate that United Artists is applying movietone and synchronization judiciously and not for mere novelty. He says the producers of United Artists have assured him that no imperfect sound pictures will be foisted on public and exhibitors, that "the golden goose is not going to be killed by haphazard sound pictures that only injure all use of sound."

"Some 1,000 theatres in the United States will have equipment for exhibiting sound pictures," Lichtman says, and "that means 19,000 theatres will not be so equipped and they must be supplied with pictures they can show." By use of synchronization and sound effects, says the sales executive, and by introduction of occasional dialogue or singing no injury is done to the technique of an otherwise silent picture that must presently be shown in the greater proportion of houses as a silent picture accompanied by a piano, a small orchestra or an organ.

Synchronization and sound effects will be general in United Artists Pictures; voice will be employed in some, as it fits the whole plan of the film; "Nightstick," the crook play that Roland West will direct, is to be a dialogue picture; so constructed that it can be exhibited with the dialogue sequences. Mr. West was a stage director before he turned to films. "Hell's Angels," air film, will have both sound effects and color.

Pomeroy Named Director of Sound Effects by Paramount

ROY J. POMEROY has won a promotion from Paramount and in the future will be known as 'Director of Sound Effects.' Announcement of Pomeroy's elevation was made by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president in charge of production.

By the same order, O. W. Roberts succeeds Pomeroy as head of the special effects department. For many years, Roberts was his assistant at the Hollywood studios.

Roberts and the technical department have moved to a different part of the studio, and the former stage devoted to unusual photographic effects has been turned into a sound-proof recording stage for the making of synchronized pictures.

Pomeroy's first motion picture work was with Paramount in 1922, when he made the striking scene of the opening of the Red Sea for the passage of the Children of Israel, closing the waters when the pursuers were half way across. This featured Cecil de Mille's production, "The Ten Commandments."

During the past six years, Pomeroy has been under contract to Paramount. Of late, he has become recognized as a leading mechanical inventor in Hollywood, an authority on sound pictures and other developments.

St. Louis Labor Controversy Still Waxes Warm

THE labor controversy in St. Louis has developed to a point where it has brought an exchange of letters between Dr. Frank L. Magoon, acting president of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners, and Guy M. Daily, president of the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association.

Dr. Magoon asserts that the police board and the police department have been strictly neutral in the controversy between the Musicians Union and theatres and other places of amusement that have substituted mechanical music for union orchestras.

Dr. Magoon's letter follows in part:

"Recently representatives of the Board of Police Commissioners met with Gov. Baker at his request concerning certain complaints lodged with him by a committee of the State Federation of Labor, of which you are chairman.

"We have gone over the items contained in the complaint carefully with the Governor. Many of the things complained of occurred several years prior to the term of the present board.

"It seems then the only matters of which you complain, where we are concerned, relate to the arrest of some parties charged with littering the streets in connection with picketing some theatres and the conduct of the police concerning the strike at the dyeing and cleaning establishments.

"These arrests were made in the ordinary routine of police duties of which the board members had no personal knowledge. Shortly following this incident someone called at headquarters and demanded of President Orrick that the officers concerned in the arrests of theatre pickets be summarily dismissed. The complainant was advised to make the complaint in writing and same would be thoroughly investigated.

"In matters of labor disputes it is the unalterable policy of the Police Board to act in a neutral spirit and our desire is that every member of this department display the same spirit.

"In conclusion we desire to state we stand ready to carry out the promise of President Orrick to make a thorough investigation of any complaint you desire to file with us against any officer of the department, and if they are proven guilty of the offense, to assure you they will be properly disciplined."

Daily's letter to Dr. Magoon follows in part:

"I acknowledge the receipt of your letter, addressed to our secretary, and in reply to same beg to state that, so far as our organization is concerned, the complaint made to the president of the Police Board and the Governor was that a number of our members, who, in a peaceable and orderly manner, were distributing circulars on the public streets of the city, stating that certain motion picture theatres did not employ union musicians, and were using machines, or what is commonly known as 'canned music' were arrested by the police, carried in the hoodlum wagon to the Central District Police Station, locked up and refused bond for several hours, under a charge of littering the streets with paper; that these men were tried before Judge Rosecan, in the First District Police Court, who not only found them not guilty of the charge, but severely reprimanded the officers making the arrest, and those immediately over them, for what he termed an unwarrantable invasion of the constitutional rights of these citizens.

"You state that somebody demanded of President Orrick, that the officers making these arrests should be summarily dismissed. No such demand was made by me or to my knowledge by any person connected with our organization. We simply laid the facts before him and asked him to determine the responsibility for the making of these unwarrantable arrests. He declined to do this unless we filed charges against the officers making the arrests; this we refused to do, and stated that he and his fellow commissioners controlled the Police Department and not we, and that it was up to him to inaugurate the investigation. This is our attitude now. Your offer to investigate the matter if charges be filed by our members means nothing to us and we decline to shift the responsibility from where it properly belongs."

Pomeroy Synchronizing "Abie's Irish Rose"

Roy J. Pomeroy, director of sound effects, directed the talking and singing sequences between Nancy Carroll and Charles Rogers as well as Jean Hersholt's rendition of the Jewish rituals for "Abie's Irish Rose," which is now being synchronized by Pomeroy.

During the past two weeks Pomeroy has directed tests in the form of short dialogues which have included practically every star on the lot. The tests are especially constructed so as to bring out each player's individual voice personality and will be filed away for the purpose of casting future talking motion picture films.

Broadway Authors Place Original With Fox

Eddie Dowling and James F. Hanley, co-authors and producers of "Honeymoon Lane" and other successful musical plays in which Mr. Dowling has been starred, have placed an original story with Fox Movietone for production as a feature subject.

The title will be "Footsteps" and the picture story is based on a theme song of the same name, both having been written by Messrs. Dowling and Hanley. The arrangement was made with Al Lewis and Joseph Pincus, for Fox Film Corporation through Walter H. Brooks.

Mount Carmel, Pa., Hears First "Talkie"

Mount Carmel, Pa., had its first taste of the "talkies," and fell for it hard, during the week of July 16, when "Tenderloin," starring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, was offered at the Victoria theatre, with Vitaphone accompaniment, "at the regular prices."

Photophone Will Have Hollywood Plant

RCA Photophone is to have its own sound producing plant at Hollywood. Arrangements are said to have been completed for the equipment of a sound studio for the purpose of making Photophone recording and talking film production avalaible to independents who have not been licensed by other recording systems.

Independent producers are in a quandary as to the manner in which to proceed with sound accompaniment because of the excessive costs of production under the different systems. Photophone, it is said, is ready to equip theatres and to do musical recording on disc or film at a considerable reduction over other systems.

Photophone is also said to be preparing to produce its own features and short subjects in Hollywood and is now lining up directors and writers on a contract basis.

Fitzpatrick Favors Disc Over Sound on Film

James A. FitzPatrick, pioneer producer of music films, including the "Schubert Series," sound-recorded for Paramount by the sound-on-disc method, and "In a Music Shoppe," a Fox Movietone sound-on-film subject, declares himself in favor of the former method.

"It has been my privilege to produce sound pictures by both the sound-on-disc and sound-on-film methods," states FitzPatrick, "and I deliberated considerably before coming to my decision in favor of the former system.

"Looking into the future a little, I feel that the eventual solution will be sound film running in synchronization with, but independent of, the picture film. But until this comes, I believe that for all around utility and quality the disc method will prove superior to the film method."

Warners Augment Casts for Specials

Several additions were made during the week to the casts of Warner Bros. Vitaphone specials now in work on the coast. Among those players selected by Darryl Francis Zanuck, Associate Executive of the Studio, were James Mack and Vera Lewis who were signed to appear in George M. Cohan's "The Home Towners" now being directed by Bryan Foy.

Clarissa Selwynne was named for a role in support of Fannie Brice in her first Vitaphone production, "My Man." Director Archie Mayo has taken the company to Pasadena for several days location work on the beach.

Fifth Seattle House to Be Equipped Soon

Trailers used on the screen of the theatre and captions used in the newspaper advertisements of the Seattle Theatre, Publix house, announce to the public that "Talking Pictures Are Coming to This Theatre." It is understood that the Movietone installation will be made soon, making the fifth Seattle theatre to be equipped for the projection of "talkies."

Entirely New Technique Needed For "Talkies" Says Laemmle

"TALKING pictures will be permanently successful only when an entirely new technique is utilized in their production," says Carl Laemmle, in disclosing the results of three months' intensive work, investigation and study of sound synchronization. This investigation has been going on at Universal City and in the New York laboratories of the company ever since it made its agreement with the Electrical Research Products, Inc., three months ago.

In these three months, plans involving the expenditure of over a million dollars at Universal City and $256,000 in the laboratories and studio at Fort Lee have been drawn, and the materials required have been ordered, and insofar as Universal City is concerned, are already being installed.

"There is a novelty, it is true, about hearing the human voice on the screen, which is a distinctly box-office draw at this moment," continued Mr. Laemmle, "But as soon as the novelty of this phenomenon has worn off and audiences have become accustomed to hearing the characters talk, they will no longer overlook the erudities of the technique of what is commonly called the talking picture of today. Unless a new technique is devised, a new technique of directing, of acting, and of cutting and titling, we will be right back where we were before, except that audiences will be yearning for the good old days when the moving picture was the silent drama, and they were glad of it.

"In the development of our sound activities at Universal City, and at New York, we have been proceeding cautiously, with a view to making our sound pictures as technically new and advanced as a new art deserves to be. For, to my mind, talking pictures present an entirely new situation. Moving pictures did not become an art until they entirely divorced themselves from the stage method of telling a story. They developed their own method of story telling. Now, with the new dimension, as it were, our organization is struggling, as probably every other one is, to fit it in artistically, effectively and in a manner which will be purely moving picture and not theatric.

"Our plans for synchronization include 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' 'The Man Who Laughs,' 'The Last Warning,' 'The Girl on the Barge' and 'Give and Take.' But more elaborate technique will enter into such pictures as 'The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City,' with George Sidney and Vera Gordon; Reginald Denny in 'Red Hot Speed,' an automobile story; 'Man, Woman and Wife,' with Pauline Starke, Norman Kerry, Kenneth Harlan and Marian Nixon; 'Lonesome,' the Paul Fejos special. Others will be added to the list of this year's pictures as they go into production and we determine what treatment is best to use with them."

Henshaw in Merger With Producers Laboratory

Henshaw Pictures and Producers Laboratory have merged, according to announcement by Dale Henshaw, president of Henshaw Pictures, and Dwain Esper, president and manager of Producers Laboratory.

Henshaw Pictures has the exclusive contract for synchronizing sound and music with pictures for use on the Han-A-Phone reproducing appliance and will make twelve synchronized features for the coming season. Production on the first started July 10.

The Producers Laboratory will continue its general laboratory work, but will specialize on that incidental to the talking movie features, and is now installing the necessary equipment.

Movietone Will Present Newcomers in Comedy

Three new names, as the result of the advent of sound pictures, will shortly be introduced by Fox. They are Summer Getchel, Toy Gallagher and Ford West. They have the principal roles in the third all-talkie Movietone comedy, "Mystery Mansion," to be produced by the company.

Getchel and Miss Gallagher, unknown heretofore, have been specially schooled for this production by Fox Movietone experts. Ford West is a vaudeville headliner, a veteran trooper of the stage.

Authors' Rights Protected On Use Dialogue for "Talkies"

THE Authors' League of America now looms as another problem for the producers of motion pictures who plan accompanying dialogue. Joseph P. Bickerton, counsel for the Authors' League, is preparing a new contract. It will provide, it is said, that a producer can use dialogue only when talking film rights to a story have been purchased. Dialogue will not be permitted when picture rights only, have been purchased.

Mr. Bickerton says performance of talking parts of plays in pictures is an infringement upon the author's rights in cases where the producer has acquired only screen rights. Producers will not be permitted to have their own dialogue written in as such action is prohibited by the basis agreement between the producer and author. Right to alter dialogue will be covered in each individual agreement, providing such permission is desired by the purchaser.

Will Launch Short Feature Sound Dept.

Plans for the organization of a department to make short features with sound in the Hollywood studios are announced by Jesse L. Lasky.

For the first time in his career as a producer, Lasky will have created a department to produce short reel and sound pictures. These one-, two-, and three-reel features will be part of a program of feature length pictures with sound already announced. Many will be filmed in the California studios and others are to be made at the Long Island plant, which has just been reopened.

"With Paramount entering the sound picture field," Lasky said, "we will be active in making short features. These will be synchronized with vocal and musical accompaniment. Approximately 50 feature length productions will also have sound effects. It is our plan to present a complete show in sound, including stage unit productions similar to those offered at the bigger theatres. Smaller theatres throughout the country will be given entertainment they have never been able to obtain.

"Owing to the proximity of certain stage talent to the Long Island studios it will be necessary to make a number of the short features there, but the rest will be produced in Hollywood.

"Stars from the New York musical comedy, legitimate and motion picture realms will appear in them. To do this properly we will create a special department to supervise the actual filming of short subjects."

Christies Start Work on Sound Buildings

Construction was started this week by the Christie brothers on the complete group of sound buildings at the Metropolitan studios. Contracts were signed between the Christies and the Austin Company, which recently built the new First National and Mack Sennett studios, calling for the immediate building of the first units of sound stages, recording buildings and theatre where synchronized pictures may be shown during the making. Western Electric equipment will be installed throughout in the new group of buildings.

The new sound film group at Metropolitan will be available not only to the Christie productions but also to the other companies which centralize their producing activities at Metropolitan such as the Harold Lloyd and Caddo companies, Carlos productions, the latter of which signed leasing contracts this week, and other producers.

Oregon Exhibitors Are Equipping Houses

Oregon exhiibtors are keeping abreast of the times, and are fast making arrangements to equip their houses with both Vitaphone and Movietone. Among the houses adding these features to their various bills are Hunt's Criterion at Medford, Ore., and it is expected that in the near future they will also equip both of their houses located at Roseburg and Grants Pass Oregon.

Bob Marsden and Denny Hull operating the Egyptian at Marshfield, Ore., are negotiating for Vitaphone and Movietone. The Rialto Theatre a West Coast house at Pendleton, Ore., has already installed the new apparatus and noted an increase in patronage.

Early in September the Rivoli Theatre, Portland will be equipped with Vitaphone and Movietone as will also the United Artists, this equipment being added while other repairs and renovations are being made.

Metropolitan Plant to Have Sound Equipment

Al and Charles Christie, owners of the Metropolitan Studios, which now house the productions of Harold Lloyd, Caddo Productions, several units of Pathe Pictures and others, have arranged for the installation of sound-picture equipment in the Metropolitan plant.

Western Electric equipment will be used in the Metropolitan studios, in accordance with Christie's contracts with Electric Research Products for the production of Christie Comedies and other pictures, and using Western Electric's system of sound reproduction. It is expected that two stages will be equipped for sound at once, and apparatus has been ordered for recording as well.

"Burlesque" to Be First All-Sound Paramount

"Burlesque," the filmization of the stage play by George Manker Watters and Arthur Hopkins will be Paramount's first all-sound picture production to be made in the Hollywood studios.

Victor Fleming will be the guiding hand behind "Burlesque," and Benjamin Glazer is now at work on the adaptation. Glazer has just completed the scenario work on "Beggars of Life," from Jim Tully's novel.

Warners Announce 4 New Road Shows

Four new Vitaphone specials were announced this week by Jack L. Warner as additions to the road shows to be released by Warner Bros. in 1928-29. One of these will be "The Grifters," from the story by C. D. Lancaster, just purchased by the Warner organization. It has been given over to Harvey Gates to adapt and Roy Del Ruth has been selected as its director. "The Grifters" will be produced, it is announced, as an all-talking film. Cast assignments will be made in the near future.

"Playing Around" from the stage success by Frances Norstrom has also been acquired by Warner Bros. as the basis for a big talking picture. The production executives are busy on preliminary arrangements for its filming, further details of which will soon be made public.

"The Madonna of Avenue A" will be the title of a Dolores Costello vehicle also in the group of road shows. This, of course, will make extensive use of Vitaphone.

Another story for Dolores Costello, as yet untitled, is also announced. This means that Miss Costello will be star of three road shows—"The Redeeming Sin," "The Madonna of Avenue A" and the unnamed production— in addition to "Noah's Ark," in which she heads the cast.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

Sends Theatre Cards to Names Printed in Society Columns

AS a feature of a campaign to stimulate private party business at the Capitol theatre in Atlanta, James A. Carrier, managing director and Southern District Manager for Universal, operator of the Capitol, uses a hand drawn card as a mail piece which he has sent every person whose name appears in the society columns of the local newspapers.

The card is a cordial reminder to the party to whom it is mailed that arrangements can be made by simply telephoning the management for a "theatre party" and stating that there is no service charge for such arrangements made by the theatre.

The card, post card size, flashes the headline "Just to remind you!" then the copy continues "A theatre party at the Capitol, Atlanta's finest theatre is an easy way for you to solve that social obligation. A phone call to this department stating the number of seats you require will save you time and inconvenience." It is signed by the Director of Public Relations.

According to report this mail campaign has been the means of increasing phone reservations for blocks of ten or more seats.

Carrier also presents a radio Frolic, broadcast from a local station at midnight every Tuesday night. The feature of the broadcast is the rendition of several musical pieces, with a prize of a ticket for all those sending in the correct titles of the tunes and compositions presented. To the sender of correct lists a card giving a free admission to the Capitol the following Tuesday night is mailed. Carrier reports that a careful check of these prize tickets discloses that ninety-eight per cent are returned and one or more tickets purchased by every one who receives a free admission.

Issue Campaign Book Featuring Ideas to Exploit Sound Films

THE first press book devoted to selling ideas to exploit talking pictures has made its appearance with the issue this week of the Vitaphone prospectus and work book, compiled by Warren Lewis, advertising and publicity director of the Vitaphone Corporation.

The work is concerned solely with publicity copy, descriptive articles and advertising suggestions on the sound phase of pictures equipped with Vitaphone dialogue or accompaniments, and is for the use of exhibitors in conjunction with the press books featuring particular attractions.

For exhibitors who are selling new installations, the new press book has especial value, because hitherto there was not at the disposal of the theatre introducing Vitaphone any work book or prepared campaign of equal resources for supplying newspapers with information and the advertising man with suggestions. The book contains 28 pages, and measures 9¼ by 12¼ inches.

Among the features of interest to newspapers as informational sources are the statement issued by Michael I. Pupin, Professor of Electro-Mechanics, Columbia University, when Vitaphone was introduced; a technical story of Vitaphone, describing in popular form the scientific principles involved; a brief historical sketch of Vitaphone illustrated with photos showing the apparatus used in the projection booth; statements by prominent exhibitors, and excerpts from the reviews of the first Vitaphone presentation in New York by the photoplay reviewers and music critics.

A number of advance publicity announcements and after-opening readers are also included, along with suggestions for a series of six newspaper ads describing Vitaphone in a course of educational talks and illustrations of posters, lobby cards and newspaper ad cuts and mats available for theatres.

Cooperative Page in Times Feature Strand Show

Cooperative newspaper advertising is an old standby for theatre exploitation in towns throughout the country, but it is the rare thing in New York City, and without precedent in the New York Times. The exploitation department of Warner Bros. last week aranged the first cooperative picture theatre ad that paper has carried, when a group of displays were featured under a strip head featuring the line "The Lights of New York," which currently is playing the Strand. A number of merchants represented under the heading with displays used the title of the picture as catchlines for their selling copy.

Winning Bathing Beauty to Get Stage Engagement

A three day Capitol Theatre engagement is to be proffered the winners of the First, Second and Third prizes at the annual "Bathing Beauty Contest" being conducted at Saltair, Utah. Manager George E. Carpenter is the manager of this house which is the latest edition to the Louis Marcus Enterprises.

Showmanship Briefs

H. M. ADDISON, manager of the Great Lakes Theatre, Buffalo, and Andrew Sharrick, Universal exploiteer, overcame the Buffalo newspapers' prejudice against tie-ups with motion picture publicity in a recent campaign on "Finders Keepers." It was a contest to get the best slogan to be used to advertise the Want Ad columns. The newspaper gave more than a hundred inches of space to the stories about the contest, as well as donating art stuff and advertising. The theatre gave away 200 free tickets. The theatre also staged a similarity contest, giving a theatre party to the girl most resembling Laura La Plante. This was one of the most successful publicity stunts pulled in Buffalo.

WARREN IRVIN, manager of the Carolina theatre in Charlotte, capped an excellent campaign for "Ramona" with an ingenious presentation idea in which he used two singers from the stage show unit in a prologue for the Dolores Del Rio vehicle. At the close of the stage act a stage traveller was closed and at the same time a "Ramona" song slide flashed on it. The singers began the number from behind the wings, while changing their costumes to Indian dress. They came out in the stage at the first chorus, a red spot being thrown on them. At the conclusion of the song the picture hit the screen.

TOM GORMAN, manager of the New York Hippodrome, celebrated Boy Scout night at the big playhouse last Monday evening as a special event for his presentation of "United States Smith," which deals with life in the Marine Corps. Detachments of Boy Scouts from the Bronx, Brooklyn and Manhattan attended the show. Gorman used special nights with great success on previous pictures, particularly a college play, and the idea still clicks as a publicity stunt and business attractor.

FREE dancing is an added attraction offered to the patrons of the motion picture theatre at Island Park, near Sunbury, Pa. Among the other attractions at the park is an open air dance pavilion, for use of which a fee is charged under ordinary circumstances, but the management announces in its newspaper advertisements that "there is no charge for dancing to patrons attending the show." Dancing starts immediately after the close of the theatre performance.

JACK CAMPBELL, of the Griswold in Troy, is finding it a rather hard matter these days to secure young ladies to participate in a contest to determine "a perfect 36" among the women of the Collar City. While the young women have no scruples against appearing on the bathing beaches of the city, they are rebelling against donning a bathing suit and parading before their friends from the stage of the theatre.

THE Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises, Detroit, are offering free admission tickets for the ten best sketches submitted in connection with the 20th anniversary of the company, which is being celebrated this week. The flag or banner must be a triangle about eight feet long and carry the caption "Kunsky Twentieth Anniversary," otherwise the designer will have free rein as to color and design.

Truant Snake Captured by Manager Stars in "Eden" Lobby Display

MANAGER GEORGE SOBEL, of the Stanley Company's Market Street theatre, Philadelphia, took advantage of the escape of a large gopher snake from a nearby pet shop to effect a very fine lobby display for the showing of "The Garden of Eden." The six foot snake escaped during the crowded shopping hours and nearly caused a panic as it lay on the sidewalk. Before being captured it held a crowd of fifty persons at bay and Traffic Policeman George Taylor who attempted to catch it, was severely bitten on the arm. He was hurried to a hospital where 1,500 units of serum used to counteract snake poisoning were injected into his arm.

Sobel, in the meantime, seizing his opportunity, succeeded in inducing the snake to crawl into a cylindrical film can and carried it to the theatre for his lobby display, which consisted of newspaper notices to the effect that the snake had been lured away from its place of confinement and was attempting to return to its primitive environment in the Garden of Eden.

City Store Aids Theatre in Neighboring Town

Boston Dealer Supplies Phonograph for Lobby Display at Strand Theatre, Malden

MANAGER R. E. MORRIS sold a Boston music store the idea of loaning a $550 orthophonic victrola which was used in advertising "Rose Marie" playing at the Strand Theatre, Malden, Mass.

Since Malden is only about ten miles from the metropolis of Boston, Morris contended that the music store would get a lot of publicity by allowing the use of one of his machines, so the store even sent the machine over in one of their delivery cars and called for it later.

The orthophonic was used in the lobby for the playing of selections from "Rose Marie" as the people came into the theatre for several days in advance of picture. The orthophonic was later used on the stage during the run of picture by synchronizing the music to those parts in the picture where Joan Crawford was apparently singing.

A handsome cutout of the three stars against a Northwoods background with two of the small mounted police cutouts on each corner was placed in a corner of the lobby with the electrola in the foreground. Proper cards tied the music up with the picture.

Just over the door in the inner lobby where people could easily see it as they came in was a small box of pretty Indian design with small totem poles and cutout letters spelling out the title of picture augmented by colored paper stuck over the letters.

Big Campaign Produces Results for Third Run Showing

ONLY seldom does the second or third run presentation receive better than the merest routine billing, and a brand of advertising support that can be classed as a "campaign" is rare in such instances. Occasionally, however, some picture of popular appeal is fortunate enough to get an advertising break on its second run, and in these cases, rare though they are, the results usually vindicate the wisdom of the exhibitor daring enough to go out and ballyhoo a return showing. Rarer still, is the case where the third run is exploited with any real vigor. This fact makes especially interesting a report this department has from P. D. Griffith, manager of the York theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn., in which there is related some of the features of a campaign which Griffith staged for his showing of "The Patent Leather Kid," playing third run in Chattanooga at his house.

The picture gave the York a highly satisfactory return on its two-day engagement. This undoubtedly was the direct result of the campaign which backed the showing. There was nothing said about "third run," and everything about the exploitation showed confidence in the picture's ability to draw people and give them good entertainment.

He opened up with a street stunt, employing a man dressed in loud sports suit trimmed with patent leather and carrying a sign on his back that gave the title of picture, name of theatre and play dates.

The lobby contained many implements of warfare such as machine guns, trench mortars, rifles and shells.

In the center of the lobby in front of the box office was a large cut-out of "The Kid" with real boxing gloves on his hands. Gloves were also draped over the box office.

Seattle Stunt for "Harold Teen" State-Wide in Scope

A tie-up participated in by the 5th Avenue theatre in Seattle and the Sunfreze Company, with headquarters in that city, to exploit the showing of "Harold Teen" developed such proportions as a publicity stunt that the ice cream company is planning to duplicate the stunt in other towns throughout the state of Washington.

The hook-up featured the "Gedunk Sundae," made famous in the Harold Teen comic strip. A five column ad was run in the Daily Times by the Sunfreze Company, which incorporated a twelve-section Harold Teen comic strip, especially drawn for the stunt. Blank spaces were left in each cartoon to be filled in by contestants. These had to be filled with a continuity of dialogue which would bring in four units to be mentioned, namely one of the Gedunk Sundae, one of the Sunfreze ice cream, one on the 5th Ave. Theatre and one on the name of the contestant's nearest dealer.

The first prize offered was a $10 West Coast Theatre script book and ten quarts of Sunfreze.

Door Hangers Distributed by Local Merchants

Through the assistance of three local merchants, Manager F. O. Slenker, of the Columbia theatre, Davenport, Ia., obtained distribution of 6,500 door hangers advertising his presentation of "The Lion and the Mouse" with Vitaphone accompaniment.

The merchant paid for the printing of the hangers they distributed and which co-featured their products in tie-up with the picture. Four days in advance of opening, 4,000 hangers were distributed by a dairy company by slipping them over the necks of milk bottles; another 2,000 were distributed by a laundry as tags on bundles and 500 were circulated by a cleaning establishment.

Copy on one side of the hangers read: "See and hear Warner Brothers Vitaphone Talking Picture. 'The Lion and the Mouse'." On the other side was advertising for the merchants, the dairy using the line "Just like the Marvelous Vitaphone, Our Dairy Products Speak for Themselves."

Seek Our Gang Double for Home Town Film

LOEW'S State Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., in conjunction with the St. Louis Times, an afternoon newspaper, is staging a motion picture contest for boys and girls of St. Louis and vicinity between the ages of 3 and 12 years. It is planned to form a local "Our Gang" company and produce a comedy film in St. Louis. Those who appear in this picture will resemble the kids in the famous screen gang.

Doubles are now being sought for Joe Cobb, Freckles, Wheezer, Mary Ann Jackson and Jean Darling, the blonde vamp. A dog that looks like Pete is also eligible. Hal Roach, producer of Our Gang comedies is co-operating and has promised to send a director, camera man and property men with necessary equipment to St. Louis to produce the comedy. Loew's State will feature the picture on its regular program after it is produced.

The Clearing House for Box Office Problems and Theatre Operation

Managing Director, Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., and Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Never Too Old to Learn

From the writings of the late John Wanamaker I quote a small portion of one of his articles: ". . . Experience and example of others are the safest teachers. None of us is too old not to go to school every day."

It would seem that no matter where you look you will find the real successful men are those who are always ready to learn from others. Why not try and follow the example of such successful men? Don't sell yourself the idea that only your ideas are fit for your theatre or town. Listen a bit to what the other fellow is doing and just try to utilize his experience and ideas for your own benefit.

So we say to all of you who happen to be reading this page: "Read how the other exhibitors are doing things, see if you cannot use their ideas and above all let them know what you are doing and what your experiences have been."

The pages of the Managers' Round Table Club are open to every exhibitor and manager, whether members or not. You may send us your ideas and suggestions, you may ask your brother exhibitors a direct question or you may tell them what you think.

THIS IS THE CLEARING HOUSE FOR ALL BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS AND THEATRE OPERATION. USE IT.

Freshen Up With New Lamps

The blending of colors and color schemes has always been identified with theatres of a modern trend. The frequent changing of colors in the lighting of your theatre is bound to create favorable comment from your patrons and keep them from taking everything so matter-of-fact. I have found theatres where fortunes were spent in providing good lighting effects when the theatre was being built, and yet the bulbs were never changed for years at a time. Why? Long experience has already shown us that an extra set or two of electric bulbs is a fine investment and when properly handled will last for many years.

If you only take the trouble to look around your theatre at certain times with the sole idea in your mind that you want to "brighten" things up a bit—that your theatre is becoming too monotonous, not only to your patrons but even to you. You will find that the old pilot lights have not been relamped for months. The color on them may be faded, many of them may be burnt out. A new set, with possibly a new color will give you startling results. And that goes for your main fixtures, coves or any other portion of your theatre that is used for illumination. I heartily recommend a complete relamping of the inside of a theatre very six months. Those who can afford it might even do it more often. And get away from the sameness all the time. Try something new and experiment a bit with different colors in order that you may get the best results. Then if your patrons don't comment on it, I will publish an open apology for even suggesting the idea.

And this little story holds good for small as well as large houses. No matter what they are or where they are located, they are theatres just the same.

All Aboard

BY the time you read this, your Chairman will be well on his way for an automobile tour of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and upper New York state.

While we would like to visit every exhibitor in the states through which we will pass, this is an impossibility and we can only stop off along the set route that we have mapped out.

The experiences we will have on this trip should make interesting reading for all of us and give various angles on the movie business in different sections.

Particular emphasis will be stressed on the "talkies" question all along the line of travel.

Articles for publication on the club pages should be sent in to me, care of the NEWS and they will be taken care of just the same as before. C. E. L.

Serials and Good Showmanship

Are you one of those exhibitors who believes that Serials cheapen the quality of your show or theatre? Well, you don't have to answer. We admit that we were that kind of an exhibitor once, but we take it all back. While always believing in the proper use of a serial, we felt that in one of our houses it would be out of place, until circumstances kind of forced us to run one and now we are all for it.

Are we not in business to make money? No doubt about it, and if you find that serials will increase a Saturday matinee by several hundred dollars, and besides send home hundreds of kiddies to tell the grown-ups about the great show at your theatre, then they begin to mean even more than the increased matinee business.

I don't care what the conditions might be in your house, and aside from the, so-called, de luxe houses in the big cities, I maintain that a serial, even if only used at the Saturday matinee, will be a money maker and a business builder.

But don't put them in indifferently. The least you can do if you want to try it out is to get behind the serial and play it up strong. Sell the idea thoroughly and make sure that every kid in your community knows that it is coming to your theatre. Then, let the serial do the rest.

But above all, get that idea out of your mind that serials are bad for your house. It's Bunk. (Pardon the slang.)

Local Plays, Asset or Liability?

In the average smaller town you will always hear one universal complaint. The amateur theatrical shows and their effect on the box office. We might just as well protest against the weather getting hot in the summer as to protest against this necessary evil.

And it is necessary because in our opinion it stimulates interest in the theatre, it creates a steadier habit of going to theatre and if you want to take advantage of the situation then you will help the idea along.

. . Suppose some local group decided to put on a play. Don't you think it would be good policy to volunteer them your help. Get yourself right into it, help stage it, maybe you can work it into your own theatre on some arrangement that means money to you for a slow night. By all of this I don't mean that you should encourage these things, but if they must be, make them as much part of you and your theatre as you possibly can.

When the show is finally staged you will surely find that they have made known the fact that you and your theatre assisted in whatever capacity you did, and such publicity and good will is darned good business anytime.

I, for one, will never consider the average amateur theatrical as opposition. It is merely just part of the life of the town and must be accepted as such. Make it an asset and not a liability.

Non-Theatrical Situation

Our attention was recently called to what we considered a very clever bit of showmanship in a small town. One of the churches had decided to run a motion picture show once a week. They appealed to the local theatre manager for advice and assistance, and he, realizing that putting obstacles in their way would not help the situation any, decided that he would rather help them, so he undertook to see that they purchased the proper equipment, that the installation was properly made, and even suggested certain pictures they might run, and all he requested in return for his assistance was that they run a slide during their performance every week calling attention to his theatre and the entertainment he was presenting. He worded the slide as follows: Palace Theatre, always a clean entertaining show—in clean, healthful surroundings. Popular prices.

Which strikes us as a very sensible thing to do under the circumstances. We all hate the idea of non-theatrical shows, but there are times when we must make the best of it.

Using the News Service Bureau

Regular readers of the NEWS know that one of the oldest departments in it is the "Exhibitors' Service Bureau." And the reason we are calling attention to it is primarily to impress upon you that it would be well worth your while to make it a point to read everything in that Bureau. But when reading the various articles under that department, do so with the idea that they can be converted to your own conditions and requirements. I don't care what the stunt may be or whose idea originated it, but I do know that there is always some way of putting these ideas to work for you. True it may necessitate changing it around a bit or working it into your own local conditions, but fundamentally the idea can always be used.

The reason for this subject is that several requests were received from readers asking how such-and-such an idea could be converted to their conditions. If you want some help along these lines don't hesitate to write in making such requests and we will gladly offer our suggestions to meet your requirements. Just specify all the information needed, such as size of town, class of patronage, etc., and we will be delighted to help you.

Exhibitor's Second Sunday Case Trial Postponed

The second trial of W. Fred Walsh, manager of the Fairfield Theatre in Birmingham, Ala., on a charge of operating a picture theatre on Sunday, was postponed from Wednesday until Saturday morning, due to the illness of Mr. Walsh. The exhibitor has made it plain that he intends to fight the ordinance with all vigor. The Birmingham chief of police would not commit himself as to whether or not arrests would continue each Sunday in the event that Walsh continued to show pictures on the Sabbath. The case will not be reached in the Circuit Court before the September term.

Ruth Elder Before Cameras

Born in Pennsylvania

Rarely in the history of the motion picture industry has a sales man of one of the larger companies switched to scenario writer and producer and made a success of it. That is just what Carey Wilson did. He jumped from sales staff of Fox Film Corporation to the producing end of the business and made good with a bang.

Wilson says he switched from film salesman to scenario writer just to prove that it could be done. While Carey has many pictures to his credit, he declares his best work to date was "His Secretary" with Norma Shearer and contends that it more clearly reflects just his idea of what a motion picture should be than any he has ever had a hand in. Among his outstanding successes are "Helen of Troy," "The Stolen Bride," "Naughty, But Nice," "American Beauty," "He Who Gets Slapped," "Lights of Old Broadway," "The Masked Bride," "Soul Mates," and a score of others, including his work in connection with "Ben Hur."

Carey Wilson was born and educated in Philadelphia. He served on the sales staff of both Fox and First National before he went into the production end of the industry. His latest triumph is "Lilac Time," starring Colleen Moore.

Sam Wood, also born in Philadelphia and who, in his early career was an investment broker, began his professional efforts as an actor with Famous-Players-Lasky. He is credited with having launched Gloria Swanson and Jackie Coogan on their starring careers, for he directed Jackie in "Peck's Bad Boy" and Gloria in "The Great Moment." The Paramount Junior Stars were also started on their screen careers when Wood directed them in "Fascinating Youth."

It was with the idea of becoming an investment broker that Wood went to Los Angeles. There was a great boom on at the time and since he had weathered the one in Reno, Nevada, in 1900, he felt fully qualified. It was not long, however, until he became interested in pictures. From acting he branched into directing and he has had more than his shares of success ever since.

Out of such successes as "Rookies," "The Fair Co-ed," "One Minute to Play," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "Prodigal Daughters," and others, he prides more the direction of "Rookies," though being a rabid football enthusiast, he likes to look back, too, upon "One Minute to Play." Among his recent pictures are "Show People," "Pullman Partners," and "Telling the World."

Janet Gaynors Next

Janet Gaynor's next stella vehicle for Fox Films is to be based on an original story by Tristam Tupper. No title has been selected as yet, hut, according to announcement from Winfield B. Sheehan, it will be a Cinderella tale with Dutch settings. This production will be directed hy William K. Howard.

Another Baker Pupil

The graduates of Professor George Pierce Baker's famous dramatic class at Yale are coming in a steady stream to the Paramount scenario department in Hollywood. The latest Baker pupil to sign as a Paramount writer is William N. Robson, who joins his fellow Yale graduates, Leo D. Pride, T. J. Ahearn and J. A. Clark.

New T-S Features

Tiffany-Stahl has started a new production starring Belle Bennett under the temporary title of "Patience." Wallace Worsley is directing. . . Ricardo Cortez has also begun work on a new T-S vehicle entitled "The Gun Runner."

"Squads, Right" will go into production the early part of August, T-S says.

Transcontinental Telegraph

The building of the first transcontinental telegraph will be the story of Tim McCoy's next starring vehicle for M-G-M, tentatively called "Wires." John Waters will direct and the cast will he announced shortly.

New Contracts

Several figures in the production field of the motion picture industry have attached their signatures to new contracts. . . .H. D'Abbadie D'Arrast has renewed his contract with Paramount. . . Christie-MacLean Productions have engaged E. Mason Hopper to direct "The Carnation Kid." . . Myrna Loy's contract with Warner Bros. has been renewed for a long period. . . Jack Oakie has been signed as a featured player hy Paramount.

Her Next Flapper Role

Alice White's second starring vehicle for First National Pictures, to follow "Show Girl," is "Bluffers," a story of the jazz age. Mervin LeRoy, who directed Miss White in "Harold Teen," has been assigned to direct the new star in this picture.

St. Clair Signs Contract

Malcolm St. Clair, former newspaper cartoonist, comedian and scenario writer, has put his name on the dotted line to a new contract with Paramount.

Cast Chosen

Gotham has finished casting "Times Square," its second production on its program for the new season. Alice Day is the leading player of the group named. The story, from Norman Houston's original, is now being directed by Joseph Boyle.

Key City Reports

New York City

BROADWAY picture houses last week staged a sensationally victorious battle with humid weather — and the trick was done, as it always is, with pictures of strong box office appeal. The Paramount with "Warming Up," aided and abetted by the sound accompaniment, started its week with a record take for the week-end, and ended up with a gross that would be considered nice even for good theatregoing seasons of the year.

A break in the torrid spell last Friday evening and a rainy Sunday helped to rush some of the current bills off to a fine start. Theatregoing at the picture house undoubtedly has been stimulated by the added interest created over the sound novelty, and even pictures without sound are showing the effects at the box office of a renewed interest in the screen. The cooling plants, of course, figure in a share of the draw which the grind houses enjoyed during last week, particularly as an appeal for escape from the heat to the passing crowds.

Even the two-a-day shows reflected a greater interest in film presentations with the grosses they rolled up through the week. These offerings include "Wings" at the Criterion, now nearing a year's run and showing sufficient strength to give it a full year or more; "Tempest" at the Cameo, which had an improved take over the previous week; "Fazil" at the Gaiety (this one closed last Tuesday after seven weeks which, on the whole, were rather uneventful from the box office standpoint); "Red Dance" at the Globe; "The Lion and the Mouse" at Warners, which held its own very well last week.

The long run shows at the Rivoli and the Rialto improved over the previous week, "King of Kings" at the former bettered its first week and then closed to make way for "Warming Up," the current attraction; and "The Man Who Laughs" at the Rialto did a satisfactory business.

The bad news of the week issued from the box office of the Cameo, which went down to low figures with a double bill co-featuring "Stark Love" and "Moana."

The Capitol with "Telling the World" succeeded in proving that William Haines is very well liked by a great many fans. The reviewers on the dailies did anything but throw their hats in the air over this one, but the Capitol got customers enough past the box office to give it a very satisfactory gross. The Roxy stepped its figures way above recent weeks with the first week of "Street Angel," the gross mounting high, and continuing that way over last week-end—when the second-best figures in the history of the Roxy for a week-end with the result that "Street Angel" will go into a third week on Saturday.

The Strand with its all talkie feature "Lights of New York" had a corking second week with that bill. The gross was somewhat under the first week, but entirely good enough to please the management and set it up for a third and fourth week at the house.

Wednesday night brought a new two-a-day attraction to the Gaiety, where "Lost in the Arctic" supplanted "Fazil."

Philadelphia

SWELTERING weather struck Philadelphia last week and box office receipts suffered accordingly, in spite of the refrigerating systems in the principal down town houses.

The Stanley, with Adolphe Menjou in "His Tiger Lady" and a brilliant stage presentation "Eight Bells," with Jack Kaufman as master of ceremonies, had a rather dull week.

"Cossacks" ended its third successful week at the Stanton where it will be held for another week.

The Karlton, featuring Bebe Daniels in the "Fifty-Fifty Girl" had only a fair week.

The "Lion and the Mouse," a film with spoken dialogue began an engagement at the Aldine, where results indicate that it will run for another week.

The Fox had a fairly successful week with "Hellship Bronson" and an elaborate stage presentation.

Equity Theatres conducted an extensive campaign on the showing of "The Port of Missing Girls," screened simultaneously in ten houses this week.

The Carman with "Chicken A La King" on the screen and a pleasing stage presentation "Aritistic Moments" had a satisfactory week, all things being taken into consideration.

The new Forum Theatre had a good week with a spectacular presentation "Stepping Oddities," as the hit of the bill. The cinema feature "Buck Privates" was a secondary attraction.

Ottawa

GOOD pictures and good crowds, considering the time of year, made life worth living for the exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of July 16. Excellent variety was provided in the range of productions at the leading theatres and it was apparent that many of the fans took in two or three shows whereas they might otherwise have been contented with one theatre night for the week.

The Regent Theatre had a popular attraction in "The Big City," starring Lon Chaney, and this mystery drama was accorded a hearty vote of approval by large crowds. Chaney was at his best and had a strong supporting cast.

"Shepherd of the Hills" was equally strong at B. F. Keith's Theatre and, although it aroused tears galore, it was considered one of the best in weeks at that theatre. The picture caught the theme of the book nicely.

The fun-seekers turned out in force at the Imperial Theatre where the attraction was "Good Morning Judge," the big name being Reginald Denny. This farce-comedy was widely commended.

The Centre Theatre split the week with "Three Ring Marriage" and "A Thief in the Dark." The former was particularly well liked, Mary Astor doing a good bit toward making the picture a success. "A Thief in the Dark" was a little far-fetched.

"Chicago after Midnight," with Ralph Ince, was apparently what the regular patrons of the Laurier Theatre, Hull, wanted because they were there in goodly numbers.

William Haines drew a good crowd to the Eden Theatre, Hull, as usual, this time with "The Smart Set.' Haines is ridiculous but popular and the people will go anywhere anytime to see him.

The neighborhood houses in Ottawa had their usual action pictures and the attendance at each was up to the summer average. Tom Mix in "Tumbling River" aroused particular interest at the Fern, while Ken Maynard in "Gun Gospel" played to animated crowds at the Rex.

Cincinnati

AS the thermometer continues its upward trend, business in the Cincinnati houses continues its downward course. Exhibitors are daily besieging the office of the weather prognosticator, with the hope that the end of the unusual heat wave may be in sight, but the reports are not encouraging.

The Albee with Esther Ralston in "Half a Bride," did what might be considered a satisfactory business under the circumstances. The picture, as well as the six acts, and Johanna Grosse, a local favorite, who has just taken charge of the Albee organ together with continued advertising that the theatre was never over 70 degrees on the hottest days, brought out a somewhat better attendance than the week previous, but nothing to brag about.

"Les Miserables," at the Lyric, got by for the week, although there is no doubt that business would have been several times heavier with this picture had it been shown at some other time of the year.

There were quite a few fans on hand at the Capitol, where the "talkies" in the short subjects were featured in connection with "Lady Be Good." Business at this house was not characteristic of the regular patronage.

Keith's presented "'Diamond Handcuffs," to spotty returns, while "A Thief in the Dark," at the Strand, met a similar fate.

Monte Blue in "Across the Atlantic," for the first half, and May McAvoy in "A Reno Divorce," at the Family, just couldn't lure 'em in to an extent that was satisfactory to the management.

The three Cincinnati theatres that have permanently closed in the recent past, the Walnut and Gifts (Keith-Albee chain) and the Alhambra (Frankel chain) will undoubtedly help business at the other houses in time, but the absence of this opposition has not been felt to a very appreciable degree as yet. Nothing but a decided break in the torrid spell will do any good.

Los Angeles

BUSINESS in general was above average the past week. Following the opening of "Lilac Time" at the Carthay Circle, the house has sold out at every performance, and is still going strong.

According to Fred A. Miller, manager of the Carthay Circle, the opening week of Colleen Moore in "Lilac Time" was the greatest in the history of the theatre, by more than twenty-five hundred dollars.

Standing Room Only has also been the slogan at Warner Brothers Theatre in Hollywood where "Women Men Talk About," a Vitaphone subject continues to draw heavy crowds.

At Loew's State, where "Detectives" played to good business, an encouraging lineup on Friday, when "The Wheel of Chance" opened, indicates that this picture will do well.

"The Perfect Crime," at United Artists did only a fair business. Perhaps this is due to the advance interest in "The Tempest" with John Barrymore, which will follow.

Metropolitan reports splendid business on "Half a Bride," a Paramount picture starring Esther Ralston.

On the whole, picture houses have had no reason to complain, and the general trend is toward stimulated patronage at nearly all theatres.

Portland

AS the result of a slight increase in the hot weather, and the exodus of hundreds on the annual vacation to nearby mountain and beach resorts, and the many park attractions, the various first-run houses especially did not quite hold their own in the way of receipts, and, as they generally do, the expenses went merrily on.

"Happiness Ahead" drew fairly well at The Portland, as Colleen Moore has quite a following here, and the stage band, headed by "Happy" Phil Lampkin, made altogether a very happy combination.

Junior Coghlan probably never played to a more appreciative audience than the 500 carriers who were the guests of Manager Tebbetts at the Oriental, and who saw "Let 'Er Go, Gallegher." The balance of the week also saw fairly large and appreciative audiences. On the stage were Maurice and Rosie Dubin, singers from a foreign shore. Josef Srodka gave the request number "Babes in Toyland"; Glen Shelley at the Wurlitzer gave selections from "Faust," "Carmen" and "Lohengrin."

At the Blue Mouse, "The Lion and the Mouse" finished the fourth week, and set up another record for this popular house, having but few matinees even that were not crowded. On the last night a number of patrons were returned their money, who did not wish to stand up for the last show. With such stellar productions as are in prospect it will not be long before a new location must be found

"My Lady of Whims" featuring Clara Bow and Lee Moran proved amusing to good business during the week, supplemented by the usual snappy vaudeville acts. Warm weather does not seem to materially effect business at this house according to Manager Johnson, the veteran showman.

It was found that a good many in the suburbs had not been able to see "The Gaucho" and in consequence The Hollywood, a large suburban house, reported good business for the week with this offering.

"The Dove" was a hold over at The Columbia to fair business. Joseph Sampietro, orchestra director, was recipient of much praise for perfectly appointed musical score, using Herbert's "Sweethearts" to advantage.

Ramon Novarro in "Forbidden Hours" also played to good business at both night performances, with the help of Fanchon and Marco's "Great White Way Idea," which included Ward and Van, comedy musicians, Vina Zolle, coloratura soprano; Elmer Herling, baritone; Betty and Marguerite, specialty dancers. George Stoll and his stage band put considerable life into the stage party, and it will be a big regret to the majority should they be replaced.

New Orleans

WITH downtown first run houses playing strong pictures and the temperatures high, New Orleans theatregoers flocked to the theatres to be entertained as well as to escape the heat. Business was much improved over the previous week.

Theatregoers continue to be thrilled by the Vitaphone presentation, "Glorious Betsy," at the Saenger Tudor theatre. The feature has been held over for a fourth week. Conrad Nagel and Dolores Costello are featured. In addition to "Glorious Betsy," three acts of Vitaphone vaudeville and an address by Will Hays.

"Hot News," with Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton, proved delightful entertainment at the new Saenger Theatre. This picture was coupled with five ordinary acts of Publix vaudeville, and drew them to the palatial playhouse in large numbers.

Loew's State Theatre played "Steamboat Bill, Jr.," with Buster Keaton, Ernest Torrence and Marion Bryon and business was good. This highly hilarious and entertaining comedy was featured in conjunction with five strong vaudeville acts.

Glenn Tryon and Patsy Ruth Miller proved a winning team in "Hot Heels," the Orpheum Theatre photoplay feature and the week's business soared. Strong vaudeville helped draw the patrons, though.

Although its local premiere was held elsewhere in the city "Happiness Ahead" with Colleen Moore did a fairly good business for the Globe Theatre.

The Strand featured "Powder My Back," with Irene Rich and patrons went away well pleased.

The neighborhood houses continue to do excellent business, managers report. Many of the houses are featuring local talent shows, opportunity nights, bathing revues and other stage features three or four nights a week to attract business and are succeeding excellently.

The parks and bathing beaches continue to draw crowds nightly The parks feature free movies and vaudeville three nights a week and are largely attended.

The police drive on gambling in the city and nearby resorts is expected to aid theatre business in the city, managers believe.

Beginning Saturday, July 28, another talking sensation, "Movietone," will be a regular feature at the new Saenger Theatre. New York engineers and experts have been in New Orleans recently and are to install the "Movietone" in Loew's State Theatre also.

San Francisco

ANOTHER remarkable week, considering this is the summer time, has just been witnessed by two first run San Francisco motion picture theatres. These two theatres are the El Capitan and Loew's Warfield. Most of the other houses did only fair business.

The El Capitan Theatre was crowded all week with the showing of 'The Matinee Idol" and a few vaudeville acts. The crowd was considered marvelous for any time of the year.

At Loew's Warfield crowds filled that house all week. Here was shown Barthelmess in "The Wheel of Chance." The presentation acts, while also attractive, were not the real attraction for the week. The "Movietone" does not seem to draw well as it is not loud enough.

Bebe Daniels, always popular in San Francisco, drew well in "Hot News." However, business was not as contemplated. Here also was shown stage revue and orchestra demonstrations.

"Four Sons," shown for the last and fourth week at the St. Francis Theatre did fairly well, although the picture is considered marvelous.

"The Man Who Laughs," shown at the Columbia Theatre at advanced prices, while praised by all who saw it, did not draw well the second week. In fact some days the theatre was but one-fifth filled. The reason for this being, the prices and the location of the theatre.

"Glorious Betsy," did not draw well at the Embassy Theatre, even though the picture was liked. The location of the theatre being the reason, as well as the season.

"Walking Back" with Sue Carol, together with vaudeville acts, drew very well at the Golden Gate. All liking the picture.

The Union Square Theatre did fairly well with "The Flying Cowboy," "Newlyweds Imagination" and "The Devils Skipper," all of which were shown with vaudeville acts.

In the residential districts, "Buck Privates," shown at the Coliseum Theatre, "Across to Singapore" at the Alexandria and "What Price Glory," at the Majestic Theatre, all did very well in the evenings. The afternoon business was not good.

Seattle

THE Seattle Theatre, new Publix house, jumped back into first place in box office standing last week after a lull of several weeks. The film responsible for the increase in business was "The Cossacks" which seemed to be rather well received, considering its "heavy" nature. The Publix stage show, featuring Rita Owen and the Giersdorf Sisters, was quite acceptable. Total business for the week was fairly good.

The Fifth Avenue Theatre dropped down quite noticeably, after three weeks of very acceptable business for this time of year. The film was "Steamboat Bill, Jr." and the stage show Fanchon-Marco's "Sally From Hollywood" act, featuring Sally Rand. Buster Keaton has practically no box office power in this city any more; hence the weak business. The stage act was pleasing, but Hermie King and his musical associates were again the hit of the program with their novelties which have been taking every audience by storm for the last three weeks. Business just fair.

At the Blue Mouse Theatre, "The Lion and the Mouse" continued to play to very good houses for its third week. Matinee business has weakened somewhat, but the crowds still line up for admission at night, and a fourth week is scheduled because of the strong box office reports.

"Flying Romeos" at the Columbia Theatre was a very weak attraction and failed to get much business. This type of picture is not strongly popular here, and the box office report showed a poor week's gross.

At Universal's Winter Garden Theatre, "Czar Ivan the Terrible" played a return engagement after an original run at the Columbia. The first time at the Columbia it showed nice results, but the Winter Garden run last week was way off.

"The Vanishing Pioneer" was the attraction at the United Artists Theatre, and played to the usual average business at this 25c. house. It was not a strong film, but went over fairly well at the price.

The vaudeville houses had average attractions only—"Sally of the Scandals" at the Orpheum and "Fleetwing" at the Pantages. The vaudeville programs were better than the films in both instances. The new reserved seat policy at the Orpheum, with $1 top price, is showing a nice increase in gross business for the first two weeks.

"The Rat," playing to fairly good business at the Embassy Theatre, concluded the week's first run attractions.

Warm summer weather that has been apparent for several weeks is showing its effect on every theatre and amusement place, and exhibitors are now expecting a month or six weeks of moderately quiet business.

Minneapolis

RICHARD BARTHELMESS in "The Wheel of Chance" did a better than average business at the Minnesota this week.

"Forbidden Hours," with Ramon Novarro, showed to fair crowds, while Zane Grey's "Vanishing Pioneer" drew out the western fans in pretty good style at the Lyric.

Pantages found that "Square Crooks" made a nice windup for a good vaudeville program, and "Hold 'em Yale," with Rod La Rocque seemed to please at the Hennepin-Orpheum.

"Road to Ruin," which ran for over two weeks at the Strand, went into the Grand, a low-priced loop house, and did a brisk business.

The neighborhood houses did not have a geat deal to offer in the way of big entertainment, showing such pictures as "The Wagon Show," "The Hawk's Nest," "Baby Mine," "Skyscraper" and "Breed of Courage." Business was not unusually good at any of them.

Harrisburg, Pa.

THE hottest week of the summer thus far made deep inroads on the receipts of the picture theatres, although on the whole the managers are not complaining under the circumstances. Good summer time entertainment was provided in the first run houses.

John Gilbert, in "The Cossacks," at Loew's Beges, immensely pleased all who braved the heat to see him and the attendance was far from small considering it was midsummer and the daily temperature close to ninety.

Colleen Moore, in "Happiness Ahead," at the Colonial, was another popular offering that the critics praised highly. The audiences grew throughout the week as the merits of the show were discussed by those who attended the early performances.

Jack Holt, in "The Vanishing Pioneer," showed at the Victoria and received favorable comment.

At the State the screen attraction for the first three days was Owen Moore in "Husbands to Rent." At no time was there any effort to crash the gates notwithstanding the movie was coupled with a sprightly musical revue on the vaudeville side of the program. The movie the last three days at the State was "Chicken a la King," which won a lot of laughs.

The National offered Hoot Gibson in "The Rawhide Kid," with fair success, and the Russell presented a double bill including Bob Custer in "The Silent Trail," and Dolores del Rio in "The Gateway of the Moon."

The Royal showed "Legionnaires in Paris" with a fair degree of midsummer success.

The picture houses had to contend all week with an outdoor attraction, appearing nightly and with three matinees, in the form of the Art Mix Rodeo on the Harrisburg Fair Grounds, which drew pretty good sized crowds.

Baltimore

ANOTHER week of blasting heat put a decided crimp in business at the first-run theatres here during the week beginning Monday, July 16, with the exception of Loew's Century and Valencia theatres.

Those playhouses and the Stanley are cooled by refrigerating systems but for some unknown reason the Century and Valencia draw bigger crowds consistently than the Stanley. But the reason is hard to find.

At Loew's Century "Forbidden Hours" was the attraction, starring Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree, with a stage presentation act entitled Chinese Nights, featuring Honorable Mr. Wu and his company of thirty orientals. The stage show seemed to be liked better than the picture which was well produced but weak as to story.

"Ramona," starring Dolores Del Rio, went over very big at Loew's Valencia even breaking the record set by "The Big Parade."

The Rivoli reopened Saturday, July 21, with Vitaphone and Movietone and non-synchronist device, with "State Street Sadie" as the sound-talking feature, a Movietone news and Vitaphone acts. Business on the opening day was excellent in afternoon and night auguring well for the future of this house which, before it closed was poorly attended. This house is again using all newspapers for advertising.

The Stanley had a fair week with "Wheel of Chance," starring Richard Barthelmess and a stage presentation act called "All Aboard" headed by Buddy Page with other vaudeville players. Here was a good picture and stage act which went only fairly well in a refrigerated house.

Business at the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, the Little Theatre and at the Keith-Albee New Garden, was only so-so until Saturday and then a relief from the very hot temperature helped bring up the receipts at those theatres.

"Nameless Men," was the attraction at the Hippodrome with five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville; "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," co-featuring Laura La Plante and Glenn Tryon was on the bill at the Keith-Albee New Garden with six acts of Keith-Albee high class acts while Chained, the Benjamin Christiansen Ufa production was at the Little Theatre for its second week.

Atlanta

ATLANTA theatres enjoyed only fair houses this past week with Keith's Georgia leading in quality of bill, as well as net returns.

Thomas Meighan in "The Racket," not only drew favorable comments from local critics, but brought material returns to the Georgia's box-office. Ths picture was hailed as the best story given Meighan in a long time.

Next in line came the Howard showing "Half a Bride," plus Gene Dennis, billed as a circus. This "sychic wonder girl" received more publicity and was given a wider billing than any picture or feature played at the Howard in many months. She proved a good drawing card.

Loew's Grand next door had only fair audience with "The Lovelorn" and a vaudeville bill not so good.

The Capitol with Glen Tryon in "Hot Heels" claimed a bit below the average week. Tryon is liked by Atlanta patrons, but the kind of stories given him are on the verge of "killing" a potential star and money-maker, which he could very easily be. This is about the poorest story he has been given despite his recently other ones. Capitol audiences plainly showed they recognized that fact.

The Rialto gathered in an average week with Bebe Daniels in "Hot News," while the Metropolitan held a weakening fort with Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." This is the second week of a return engagement of this picture, it having run six consecutive weeks previously.

The Tudor with three westerns, "Aflame in the Sky," "The Cross Breed," and "Cherokee Kid" witnessed about the usual week.

A second run bill with the exception of "Your Wife and Mine" playing Friday, drew well for the New Alamo.

Pittsburgh

IN spite of hot weather, business was good at the local theatres, principally because five of the first run houses have closed for the summer. This is the first time such a condition has existed in Pittsburgh.

The Stanley theatre presented Vitaphone for the first time. "Tenderloin" was the film, and made an instant hit with the fans, although there is not more than ten minues' dialogue in this one. It has the fans talking, and went over in great style. The stage presentation, entitled "It Might Happen" was but average entertainment.

At Loew's Penn, "A Certain Young Man" was the screen fare. This proved to be a weak attraction, the show being saved by an "Our Gang" comedy entitled "Fair and Muddy," and an excellent stage presentation which was called "Main Street to Broadway."

The Grand offered "Harold Teen," which proved to be an exceptionally entertaining comedy offering, and got many laughs.

At the Liberty Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob" went over in average fashion.

The Cameraphone got a good play with "Steamboat Bill, Jr., and charged fifty cents admission, while other nearby houses were getting but forty cents.

The Alhambra brought back "The Harvester" and did a fair business for the week.

From the great novel by Francis Lynde, published by Scribner's. A big, vital drama which centers around the powerful personality of David Vallory. A picture that gets down to life's raw fundamentals.

Salt Lake City

SOME very good box office receipts have been reported here by the downtown first run houses, in spite of the fact that exceedingly warm weather prevailed throughout last week, with the exception of a few thunder showers.

The Capitol Theatre, under the management of George E. Carpenter, enjoyed heavy business during their presenttaion of Bebe Daniels in "Hot News" and the stage offering, the "Diving Venus Idea" with the first bathing beauty parade of the season here, and featuring Arlene Langdon, Jimmy Fawcett, acrobatic dancers, and Dagmar Kobernoff, and Woods Miller, baritone. An added attraction at the Capitol last week was the act of Arlene's trained seals.

The Pantages Theatre also offered a special attraction with the personal appearance of Mae Murray in a special act in addition to the regular vaudeville performances and Joan Crawford in the picture production "Rose Marie." Crowded houses were the result of this bill.

Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in "Three Ring Marriage" was received fairly well at the Paramount Empress by satisfactory audiences.

The Victory Theatre is doing a tremendous business with the first "All talking picture" to be shown in this city, "Lights of New York" in connection with a Vitaphone program and the Movietone News Events.

The American Theatre did so well with their special presentation of "The Road To Ruin" last week that this picture has been held over for another week's run.

"The Notorious Lady" with Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford and Ann Rork, played to very good crowds at the Gem Theatre.

"Closed Gates" with Johnny Harron and Jane Novak, and "The Dangerous Trail" were presented at the State theatre with satisfactory results.

The Rialto Theatre, a second run house, had a very good second run of "The Dove," featuring Norma Talmadge, Gilbert Roland and Noah Berry.

Elinor Glyn's "Mad Hour" with Sally O'Neil, Alice White and Donald Reed played to good sized houses at the Tower Theatre, a suburban house.

Chicago

THE long run loop houses had another big week, crowds continuing to flock to McVickers, where "The Street Angel" with perfected Movietone and Vitaphone was the attraction, and to the Roosevelt where "Sunrise" also with Movietone and Vitaphone accompanient, was the feature.

United Artists also had a satisfactory second week with "Drums of Love."

"Forbidden Hours" was the screen attraction at the Oriental where Al Kvale and his gang headed the stage show, attendance being excellent.

Another theatre which did satisfactory business was the Chicago, where "The Butter and Egg Man" was the screen attraction and a "Youth" program was offered on the stage.

The Orpheum Theatre did well with the return of "The Jazz Singer" and the Vitaphone.

Trixie Friganza in person was the headliner at the Granada and "Roadhouse" the screen feature, with Vitaphone and Movietone news reels as additional attractions, the big bill going over well.

The Marbro offered "Glorious Betsy" the talking picture, Movietone news reel and an elaborate stage show. "Ramona" on the screen and Benny Kreguer and his band on the stage, brought good houses to the Uptown Theatre during the week.

Fair business was done at the Capitol and Avalon, "Hold 'em Yale" being the feature at the former house where Del Lampe and his orchestra held the stage. "Happiness Ahead" was the feature at the Avalon and Roy Dietrich and his band headed the stage show. Both theatres also had Vitaphone and Movietone on their programs.

Paul Whiteman and his orchestra was the strong extra attraction at the Tivoli where "Half a Bride" was the screen feature, business being good.

Milwaukee

THE weather man decided to give Milwaukee a few days of sweltering weather at the beginning of last week, and the sudden change toward the end of the week to cold weather succeeded in saving Milwaukee theatres from having one of the poorest showings in the entire summer season. Practically all theatres suffered a decided let down from the previous week's good business.

"The 50-50 Girl" at the Wisconsin fared fairly well and drew moderately good houses.

"The Cossacks" in its second week at the Merrill did not live up to its first week, but succeeded in keeping the house fairly well filled.

"Lion and the Mouse" at the Garden, also held over for a second week, met with fair results.

"The Dragnet" at the Strand failed to connect.

"Jazz Mad" at the Alhambra was fairly well received.

The vaudeville houses were more fortunate for business at these two theatres was far more active than at the picture houses. The Orpheum featured "Wallflowers," and the Riverside offered "A Thief in the Dark."

Business in the neighborhood theatres was also very slow. "The Big Killing" was fairly popular at the Oriental. "The Road to Ruin" was featured at the Uptown, Tower, Modjeska, and Garfield theatres with moderately good results.

The Zenith on Thursday and Friday nights packs the house with a three act play by its dramatic company in addition to the photoplay feature which this week was "The Fighting Cub."

Ottawa

(Previous Week)

ONE tremendously popular feature was the big talk in moving picture circles in Ottawa, Ontario, during the week of July 2 and this was "Ramona" at the Regent Theatre. Manager Ray Tubman had booked it for a week and thought this would be plenty with hot weather rampant. Before Tuesday night, however, he had secured a continuation of a week and possibly more. People simply couldn't get into the theatre.

There were several other nice pictures during the week also, particularly at the B. F. Keith's Theatre where "Don't Marry" held the screen. Lois Moran was a substantial part of this production, many lady fans said, and the story was satisfactory.

Good crowds flocked to the Imperial to see "Partners in Crime." Some patrons said they wanted a comedy in hot weather, while others said they would go to see Beery and Hatton every time they appeared in a picture.

"Wheel of Chance" at the Centre Theatre had its love-thrills and the ladies liked it particularly. There was fair patronage despite sidewalk heat.

Patronage at the neighborhood houses in Ottawa has tapered off at last, following the close of schools and a general exodus to the country. The Fern theatre had a share of the regulars for "Prince of Head Waiters"; comedy "Smith's Cook" and third chapter of "Hawk of the Hills."

The Rex theatre had very fair crowds, considering everything, with "The Silent Avenger"; the serial "Trail of the Tiger"; a comedy and a news weekly.

Cleveland

DOWNTOWN houses last week won the Battle of the Elements. While it ranged from 90 degrees and up on the streets, the downtown theatres tempted the passers-by with their cool breezes blowing in the foyers. The temptation proved so strong that the ropes were dusted off and brought into use in some of the houses, while others had crowds waiting in the back of the lobby for seats. Relief was the first requisite. Entertainment came second.

"The Lion and the Mouse" had the advantage of drawing patronage on its own value as well as guaranteeing cool breezes. This was at the Stillman. The talking movie caused a big stir in this town. It went over very big and there were no criticisms heard except favorable ones. The Vitaphone effects and the cast were especially stressed. The story was incidental and received only fair comments.

"Forbidden Hours" proved excellent hot weather fare at the Allen. Light, sentimental, pleasing to look at, this picture was thoroughly satisfying to a gasping audience. Crowds had to be held in the lobby until vacant seats could be found.

"Beau Broadway" did fairly well at the State. It's an old story polished up in modern style, and well presented by a capable cast.

"The Heart of a Follies Girl" has nothing special to recommend it, but business at the Palace was good nevertheless. The artificial cooling plant and a good vaudeville bill had a lot to do with it.

"The Count of Ten" did satisfactory business the first half of the week at Keith's East 105th St. theatre. The picture has amusing and exciting spots to recommend it. Ray is especially good as a prize fighting rube.

Tom Mix drew good crowds at Keith's East 105th St. the last half of the week with "Hello Cheyenne." The regular Mix army of fans turned out regardless of the temperature.

"United States Smith" did fairly well at the Mall. The picture was liked on its merits, but the Mall has no cooling plant, and just a picture isn't enough to draw the crowds.

Neighborhood houses suffered.

Albany

WITH the mercury standing in the nineties a good part of last week, business just naturally slumped at the motion picture theatres in Albany and New York, although it came back well on Friday night when the weather turned cooler.

One of the best pictures of the week proved to be "The News Parade," shown at the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, and which was well liked and which did more than its share in a double feature program that included "Paying the Price," toward filling the house.

At the Mark Strand in Albany, Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob" drew well considering the weather.

At the Leland theatre, "Ladies of the Night Club" passed out as well as might be expected when nearly everyone sought their cars or their front porches evenings, in an effort to keep cool.

The same held true with "Broadway Madness" at the Mark Ritz in Albany.

Neighborhood houses complained that business was decidedly off during the week. Many of the theatres expected a good night when they broadcast the Tunney-Heeney fight returns.

In Troy, "Happiness Ahead," at the Troy theatre, played to rather slim houses for the first four days of the week, while the last three days found "Telling the World" cashing in better, but no doubt due to cooler weather.

Opinions on Pictures

Forbidden Hours

Not So Hot—Smacks of Early Film Days

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a picture which reverts back to first principals insofar as its plot and characterization are concerned. Any dyed-in-the-wool fan (and one who is a mere tyro at picture houses) could spot it before the first caption is over. It carries a very thin story—one which never gets moving. It's all about a monarch who, through customs of the court, is prevented from marrying the girl of his choice, but who circumvents his plotters in the end. Now, we ask you, isn't this something of a chestnut? It goes back to pre-McCutcheon days, which is to say that it antedates "Graustark." The idea has worn itself out on the musical comedy stage.

Of course, this one carries all the customary trimmings. There must be plenty of conflict and intrigue and misunderstanding and what not. And this procedure of development must be developed until it's time to call a halt. Then it makes an about face—and everything ends according to the best regulated plots.

The picture's high spots are the settings and the costumes. The uniforms of the soldiers look very neat and are worn in the best swank of Hollywood extra life—and the peasant dresses are not out of order, either. So one can sum it up as tedious and lacking much whoopee. Ramon Novarro and Renee Adoree havn't a chance to get anything out of it.

Drawing Power: Title has allurement. Also players. Suitable for program houses. Exploitation Angles: Bill as romantic drama of mythical kingdom. Use stills. Play up Novarro and Adoree.

THEME: Romantic drama of king who is denied the girl of his heart but who wins her in the end.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, six reels. Released, June 16, 1928. Cast: Ramon Novarro, Renee Adoree, Dorothy Cumming, Edward Connelly, Maurice Cannon, Alberta Vaughn, Roy D'Arcy.

The Street Angel

Popular Team Makes Box Office Film

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE way Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are clicking since their "Seventh Heaven" days would make Tex Rickard smile if he were presenting them instead of William Fox. These youngsters started the ball a-rolling, for every company is teaming up their most popular youthful stars.

"The Street Angel" hasn't the romantic appeal of "Seventh Heaven." It isn't nearly so spontaneous in development, nor does it carry the high spiritual value. At times it looks labored as if the earlier release was relied on too much for a pattern. But there is no denying its box-office quality. Frank Borzage, the director, has brought out its pathos very well and the sentiment is unusually prominent. Yet it doesn't become sloppy. If there are any flaws they can be pointed at the stressing of the heartbreak of the boy and girl and the rather slow march of the action. Still since it harps on the separation theme—one governed by circumstances enveloped in misunderstanding, there was no alternative for Borzage but to dress it with sentiment.

The stars extract every thing possible from their roles and strike the heartstrings when the moment of separation arrives. This scene is held a little too long. But it, at least, gives them an opportunity to get into real character and reveal their emotional gifts.

As for the production, it is finely mounted, the atmosphere being suggestive all the way, while the lighting and photography is magnificent. The Movietone synchronization is good, though there is too much volume of sound in the tender scenes. In all it should do a whale of a business. Gaynor and Farrell are riding the crest of the wave now. And they are in their element here.

Drawing Power: Popularity of stars and title. Good for first runs and all types of houses. Exploitation Angles: Play up stars who are among most popular players on the screen. Bill as romance of sacrifice and misunderstanding. Use Italian theme for prologue if you present musical acts. Mention director who made "Humoresque" and "Seventh Heaven." Bill as another "Seventh Heaven," presenting stars who put it over.

THEME: Romantic drama of sacrifice and understanding of young lovers who are eventually reunited after their romance is nipped in the bud.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, 9,921 feet. Released, Aug. 19, 1928. Cast: Charles Farrell, Janet Gaynor, Natalie Kingston, Albert Rabagliati, Guido Trento, Louis Liggett, Milton Dickinson, Helen Herman. Director, Frank Borzage.

"The Oregon Trail"

(Fox—One Reel)

THIS Variety is a gem. Scenes of simmering splendor shine forth in it. Not one, nor two, but many beautiful sights meet the eye. So gorgeous are they that they quite defy description. People living in cities do not meet with sights like these; inspiring evidence of the Creator's handiwork, they are alone in their majesty and to see them one has to travel far. Through the magic of the camera time and distance are not and the spectator can stand right on the brink of Crater Lake in the beautiful national park of that name and let its beauty sink in.

The camerawork is top-notch and the choice of scenes deserves commendation. A compact and well-built scenic and one that you won't forget in a hurry. That unforgettable shot of Crater Lake, whose waters are crystal clear and reach a depth of 3,000 feet, is like a painting. There is beauty peeping out in every portion of it.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Up and Moving—and Bebe Puts It Over

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONCE in a while they roll good for Bebe Daniels—and this is one of the occasions when she has a good picture. Some weeks ago Nick Stuart started the cameraman story over the crest. And since Bebe is a girl who likes to crash into fields which are usually dominated by the boys, why it is only natural that she would appear as a camerawoman. The story is up and moving with the star playing the part of a cameragirl. It seems that her daddy is the boss of the Sun Newsreel—which has tough sledding especially when a rival company steals the prize cameraman. It is Bebe's job to scoop the scooper as well as win his heart. And Bebe does her job well.

That's about all there is to it, but it carries a kick which takes her into various kinds of adventures. She captures a series of thrill pictures and ends up by falling in love with her young rival.

The shots depict the camerawoman atop the Statue of Liberty, attending a Long Island garden party and aboard a crook's yacht. Much of the atmosphere registers pretty genuine, though not much could be said for the Statue scene—which doesn't click so well. There is plenty of action, with all of the players having plenty of assignments and taking care of them in acceptable fashion. It is about the best film Bebe has had in a long time. At least it is the most interesting one.

Drawing Power: Okay for everyday houses. Teasing the title will help it. Exploitation Angles: Tease the title. Play up the cameraman—and bill as another adventurous story for Bebe Daniels. Play up Neil Hamilton.

THEME: Comedy-romance of cameragirl who outwits expert cameraman, gets the scoop and wins his heart.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, July 14, 1928. Cast: Bebe Daniels, Neil Hamilton, Paul Lucas, Alfred Allen, "Spec" O'Donnell, Ben Hall, Mario Carillo, Maude Turner Gordon. Director, Clarence Badger.

"Hot Dogs"

(Universal—One Reel)

OSWALD, the lucky bunny gets a bad break in this number, for there is a circus in town, and he is without a farthing. It does not take the ingenious rabbit long, however, to crash the gate, but not before he is treated to a clubbing and a chase by officer pup. After stealing a hot dog, he is again chased by the cop, this time into the cage of Leo the Lion. Leo is about to make a meal of the frantic Oswald, when the latter presents his Lion's Club card, and they shake. Believing that he has fooled the guardian of the law, Oswald stages a getaway, catching a hitch on a passing wagon. But the joke is really on our hero, for he un-knowingly hopped a patrol wagon. Cartoonist Disney, has not injected any unusual animation into this release, but it is unnecessary to say that it will bring the laughs.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"Imagine My Embarrassment"
(Roach-M-G-M—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE we have Charley Chase in his first comedy for the new season. Chase undoubtedly is one of the best of the comedy pantomimists. He has mannerisms that are bound to bring laughs and he will get them in this picture, despite the fact that it is not as good as many he has done in the past.

The comedian perhaps gets everything possible out of the material he has to work with, but there is room for much improvement in story and situations and there is too much repetition in his gag stuff. One of his principal gags is falling over a tea-tray laden with food and being wheeled in by a butler. This, however is repeated four or five times.

The story brings Charley, his wife and the precocious youngster into the portals of society for the first time, and, of course, nothing they do is right. Charley finds himself in all sorts of sorry predicaments from which he finds difficulty in extricating himself, particularly with an unsympathetic wife who prods him for his errors. He does go through some humorous antics that are funny more because of the artistic manner in which Chase performs than for the humor in the situations or incidents.

"Pathe Review No. 32"
(Pathe—One Reel)

EVERY so often there is found in a Pathe Review release a subject worthy of particular mention, and on this occasion the honors go to a pictorial sequence "Making a Circus Out of a Canary." In order to make the filming of the above possible, no end of time and patience surely must have been required in the training of canaries, who give a remarkable performance, in an act of screen vaudeville. Other interesting numbers continued in this single-reeler include: "The Faroe Islands, Home of Vikings," showing Thorshavn, capital of the Danish archipelago, the stepping stone in the ancient conquest of the North Atlantic; "How To Make Movies Taught in One Easy Lesson," presenting a course for amateur cinematographers; and "Here's One with a Kick in It," showing Evelyn Law, Broadway's high kicking champion, in an unusual dance exhibition.—GEORGE J. REDDY.

"She's My Girl"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THIS latest release of Universal's "Let George Do It" series is on an equal par with previous numbers of these comedies. The film is funny, but far from uproarious. Sid Saylor, featured in this series is an earnest worker, and as a rule with the aid of a good cast of funmakers, manages to bring about some fairly good comedy in spite of thin story material.

George, as a cub reporter, is assigned by his city editor to cover the exclusive Van Dusen society wedding, from which all the best reporters of the paper had been thrown out.

George's many attempts to enter the Van Dusen home prove fizzles, until he wraps himself in a carpet, and finally lands in the room with the bride. Discovering that the bride is his childhood sweetheart, and that she is being forced into an unwelcome marriage, George sets about to break up the affair. The strongest comedy action of the piece occurs at this point, and carries along at a good pace to the end.

"Standing Pat"
(F B O—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE three amiable fat men who do their plumpest to make laughter the reaction to their comedies produced by Larry Darmour for FBO distribution are furnished with poor material in this one. Attempts at humor sputter and die and all in all they only garner a few chuckles and feeble ones at that. They have nothing to do and a condition of inertia, something taboo in a comedy, prevails. The gagmen didn't think up anything sparkling for this.

The three fatties are shown as salesmen peddling a cleaning paste. After many misadventures with clients, during which they destroy several suits of clothes, they are ordered by their boss to transport a piano to a neighboring mansion. Unwittingly they are carrying a donkey in the piano box as the original contents of the box was stolen by wide awake thieves. The donkey kicks vigorously, the three fatties run and fall all over the scenery and a slight flurry of fun develops in the strenuous efforts put forth.

No gags—no laughs is the case here.

"The Ol' Gray Moss"
(Roach-M-G-M—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HAL ROACH presents the Gang in the first of the two-reelers for the coming season, and it is quite up to the standard of the past. There are some genuine laughs in it, though the action is much the same as in many that have gone before. The old fire chief and his white horse, after many years of service, are retired from the department, with the chief in financial straits.

The only means of existence for the chief is to use the horse in a cab service and he apparently has little chance in that direction because of the up-to-date competition of a swell taxicab. But the Gang takes care of that. They see to it that the taxicab is properly disabled as each "fare" approaches. The old chief and his cab are right on the spot and he does a thriving business, with the result that he soon pays off his indebtedness and is well on the road to prosperity.

While there have been a number of gradual changes in the personnel of the old Gang, it still is an appealing group of youngsters who are bound to retain their screen popularity. They have many good gags in this comedy and it should be very well received.

"The Ruse"
(Universal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by George J. Reddy)

THE story in back of this two-reel Universal featurette starring Jack Perrin, as is usual with these Northwestern subjects is weak. The film makes up for that loss, however, with good outdoor action, and the excellent performance of Perrin. There are several exciting rough-and-tumble fights, plenty of snappy horse play, and a sufficient vein of romance to entertain. The atmosphere of the Northwest mounted, which is featured throughout this series also adds considerable color, as does the mountain background.

John Allen of the "Mounted" receives an assignment to round up a gang of fur thieves. Unknown to Allen and Molly, his sweetheart, the leader of the gang is the girl's uncle. The Mountie surprises the bandits in the midst of one of their raids, but though they escape, Molly's uncle is recognized. In a last effort of the gang to get the stolen furs across the border, Allen, by a clever ruse is led to a secret rendezvous, where he is overpowered. With the aid of his horse, Allen escapes, and accompanied by another of the mounted, gives chase to the fleeing outlaws, finally bringing them to justice after a fierce battle.

"Should Married Men Go Home"
(Roach-M-G-M—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THAT popular combination, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are starred in this Hal Roach comedy whose action develops largely in a mud hole on the golf course. The picture is by no means the best Laurel and Hardy have done, but it is passable. There are spots in it that are very funny, but the comedians have had much better material to work upon in the past.

As the story runs, Hardy and his wife are all prepared for a quiet Sunday at home, but their plans are interrupted by a visit from Laurel. The latter, in his awkwardness, wrecks a good part of the furniture in the Hardy home, until the Mrs. orders them from the house to the golf course. Only foursomes are permitted so the pair hook up with two fair golfers.

The real action starts when Stan objects to one of the club members lifting the ball from a bad lie in a muddy pool. In attempting to play the ball out, the irate golfer smears one of the girls with mud. Immediately she retaliates and for the remainder of the second reel mud is scattered generously on all the members of the cast, with the comedians winding up completely submerged in the ooze.

"Early to Bed"
(Roach-M-G-M—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LAUREL and Hardy have a fairly humorous picture in this one, which undoubtedly would have been better had the attempt not been made to cram it too full of comedy. It is just one knockabout episode after another, with some of them funny and others not so funny. Had the action been cut down to a little more moderate speed and some of the sillier sequences eliminated, the best of the gags would have registered better.

Hardy is the recipient of an unexpected legacy, which makes him very wealthy, and he takes care of his boy friend by making him his butler. Stan makes elaborate preparations for Hardy's birthday, but the latter returns in a playful mood after having indulged too generously in champagne. Stan tries to urge him to go to bed, but Oliver persists in carrying on. Eventually both retire, but Hardy suddenly remembers his new Summer outfit, dons it and pays Stan a visit.

Stan, riled at having his slumber disturbed, tenders his resignation, which Hardy refuses to accept. Stan proceeds to make Hardy mad in an effort to get fired. He breaks bric-a-brac and destroys furniture, much to the early delight of his employer. Hardy finally remonstrates, but by this time Stan is completely riled and with a shovel chases him to the fountain pool, where some real humorous action develops. After both get a thorough ducking they decide to make up and all ends happily.

"Goofy Birds"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

"GOOFY" gives you but a slight idea of the wildly absurd idiocies in Charley Bowers' newest comedy. As fantastic as any tale conceived in a madhouse, it tells of two escaped lunatics and their pursuit of the "umbrella bird," strangest of all creatures. The two idiots, wrapt in their hunting and supremely nutty, are first-rate laugh creations. The things that happen to them are sublimely crazy and the "umbrella bird" is easily one of the oddest of the queer assortment of trick creations displayed by Bowers. These idiots do not wake up to find it all a dream; their nuttiness is persistent all the way through. Quite delightful is their bold adventure pursuing the mighty "umbrella bird."

Charley Bowers' comedies are most unique and intriguing. They possess the attribute of "different" more than any other series. His latest is as crazy as a loon and as entertaining as the most blase could wish. Add to this Bowers' workmanlike methods in arranging his gags, in carrying out his story straightforwardly to heights of nuttiness, and in investing his comedy with goofy charm. Quite a few favorable aspects and all contriving to make it a success as a laugh venture.

Produced under his famous process, Bowers is starred with Buster Brody in support. H. L. Mukler directed and Jay Turner did the photography.

Minneapolis

EXHIBITORS are wondering if a revival of the road show in Minneapolis and St. Paul will affect their business seriously. A. G. Bainbridge, who recently leased the Metropolitan theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul from L. N. Scott, has been to New York and came back with the announcement that some of Broadway's biggest hits—almost a score of them—have already been booked for the Twin Cities. Bainbridge really intends to put the Twin Cities on the dramatic map with a bang, and he may succeed in diverting considerable patronage from the movie houses, it is believed. He will continue to run the Shubert, a stock house.

Clem Pope, formerly manager of the Clemmer theatre at Spokane, Wash., has been appointed manager of the State theatre in Minneapolis, it was announced this week by G. Ralph Branton, supervisor of Minneapolis for the Finkelstein & Rubin enterprises.

Mr. Pope succeeds Harold Kaplan as manager, Kaplan having been assigned to do special survey work under the direction of Mr. Branton. The new manager has been associated with the motion picture business for 30 years. After managing theatres on the coast for several years, he became branch manager of sales for the Goldwyn company at Los Angeles. He then left this work to enter the production field, making travelogues in the orient and the South Seas. He served as a major in the French army during the war, and later returned to the theatre business as advertising manager for the West Coast Circuit.

The State theatre in Minneapolis opened its week on Friday instead of Saturday last week, inaugurating a new policy. Because many of the larger de luxe movie houses throughout the country are changing to the Friday openings, it was found necessary to change the play dates at the State so that there would be no conflict in state and film bookings.

Mae Murray is coming to the Pantages the week of August 17th.

Plans have not fully been completed for the reopening of the Strand and Garrick theatres in Minneapolis, but the two houses will probably be opened for the fall season some time in August.

Upon his return to Minneapolis Steffes expects to announce dates and a meeting place for the old Allied group, which had originally planned to hold a meeting early this month at Duluth.

C. F. Hynes was a visitor at the home of his parents in Minneapolis. Hynes was for a number of years associated with Greater Amusements in an editorial capacity and is now acting in a similar capacity with Film Daily.

Recent visitors in Minneapolis were William Rosenthal, special representative for United Artists, and Paul Burger, assistant sales manager for United Artists, and C. C. Wallace, district manager for the same company.

The Iowa theatre at Bloomfield, Iowa, has been purchased by H. E. Rehfield, who sold his Bijou theatre at Huron, S. D., to the Northwest Theatres Circuit.

The management of F. & R. operations in Eau Claire, Wis., has been taken over by Robert Brose, formerly of Minneapolis. He succeeds E. J. Haas, who has joined the Midwesco theatre in Milwaukee.

After many years with the Friedman Film corporation of Minneapolis, Ted Karatz has joined the sales force of the Minneapolis Columbia office.

Jack Harrington and Malcomb Williams have been added to the "Road to Ruin" company, Minneapolis, by Frank Rubel, manager. Harrington was formerly with Educational and Williams with the United Artists sales staff. Rubel expects to completely cover the territory during the fall with the "Road to Ruin." He has already closed a contract with F. & R. for suburban engagements.

Cincinnati

TWO more Ohio houses to be wired for sound pictures are Loew's Ohio and Broad, both recently opened at Columbus. They will install Movietone, which they expect to begin to feature within the next three weeks. The Grand, owned by J. Real Neth, Columbus, is playing Vitaphone, being one of the first houses to have installed this feature when it was originally placed on the market.

Al Sugarman, formerly branch manager for Universal at Pittsburgh, but for the past nine years associated with the Cincinnati office of the same company, has taken charge of the Cincinnati office for Skirboll Gold Seal Productions, distributor for Columbia.

The La Belle Amusement Co., Proctorville, Ohio, has been incorporated for $5,000, with Fred C. Boettling, C. F. Edwards and H. B. Crummitt.

Caldwell H. Brown, general manager of the Brown Theatrical Co., Zanesville, Ohio, announces that his organization has acquired the Schultz, Imperial and Quimby theatres, which were formerly controlled by the Imperial Theatre Co., in that city, the deal involving approximately $600,000. Sam E. Lind, who was president of the Imperial Theatre Co., is retiring from the game to devote his time to other business, while Al C. White, associated with Lind in an executive capacity, will manage one of the houses for the new owners, when the formal transfer is made early in September.

J. G. Gregory, president and general manager of the Public Amusement Co., Springfield, Ohio, has awarded a contract to the Mid-West Engineering and Construction Co., Columbus, Ohio, for a one-story theatre to be erected on South Fountain street, at a cost of $40,000.

John McManus, manager of Loew's, Dayton, Ohio, which house has been participating in "Our Gang" contest, gave a special Saturday morning matinee free to all children in the city between 3 and 12 years of age, regardless of whether they were entrants in the contest. Several "Gang" comedies were shown.

Ted C. Schaeffer, Galion, Ohio, has joined the Ohio theatre forces at Mansfield, Ohio, as organist.

A new house is being planned for Mansfield, Ohio, although the names of those interested in the project could not be learned. However, it is reported that an architect has been selected to develop the plans for the theatre which will have a seating capacity of 750.

Harry Turberg, co-manager of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, together with his wife and son, are visiting in Chicago.

Gus Betz, projectionist at the Palace, Hamilton, recently passed around cigars to his many friends. Mother and daughter are reported doing nicely.

Denver

SOMETHING new in the way of robberies took place a week ago along film row when Sam Cain, Universal branch manager, arrived at his office one morning and found a perfectly good set of awnings taken away from the front of the building.

CONFIRMATION of rumors that the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, which recently acquired both the Strand and the Orpheum theatres in Carlisle, Pa., intends ultimately to erect a third theatre there, giving the corporation complete control of the local situation, came with the posting of a large sign across the front of the building now occupied as the Cumberland Valley Telephone Company, on West High street, stating that the property is to be the site of a modern picture house that will seat 1,500. The property was recently acquired by the Comerfords when they bought the Orpheum theatre, directly across High street, from Mr. and Mrs. David S. Cooper, who have retired from the theatre business after a decade of successful operation in Carlisle. While no other definite announcement has been forthcoming from the Comerfords regarding their plans for the new theatre, it is understood to be their plan to defer construction for several years because of present leases on the property. Reflector Arc Losses Part II

A COMPARISON of the brightness of each of the three principal light sources available for the projection of motion pictures would lead one to believe that if a simple substitution of one source for another could be effected in the same optical system, the ratios of screen illumination would be as follows:

Mazda = 1
Low Intensity Arc = 5
High Intensity Arc = 15

This, for the reason that the relative brightness of the three sources named are in the order as shown above.

Actual tests on projector systems, employing these three sources, reveal, however, that the ratios of maximum illumination obtained on the screen under practical conditions are of the following order:

Mazda Lamp = 1
Low Intensity Arc = 2 to 2½
High Intensity Arc = 4 to 4½

The above figures, as just stated, are for the maximum illumination obtained under the most favorable conditions for each system. When all systems are reduced to an equivalent basis, however, so that the only variable factor is that of the source brightness, a more reasonable comparison of results is shown to exist which is somewhat as shown below:

Mazda Lamp = 1
Low Intensity Arc = 3 to 3 +
High Intensity Arc = 6 to 7 +

Light Less Than Expected

While this comparison is more favorable to the brighter sources, it still is far below what might be expected from a consideration of the brightness of the respective sources. Since no other means have yet been found for increasing these ratios, it is only reasonable to suppose that great losses are still present in the various optical systems and the fact that these losses exist is proof that they either are not generally known or else are inherent in the systems and cannot well be removed.

In point of efficiency it is safe to say that the optic system designed for the Mazda Lamp has the advantage over all others. This is true for the reason that the ease and convenience of handling the Mazda lamp assists greatly in the design of a system which is as efficient as present knowledge of the science of optics can make it. It would not be wrong to say then, that the Mazda lamp system is the ultimate in efficiency under present conditions. The fact that this may be changed in the future bears no significance to this argument so that we need not concern ourselves with changes which are likely to come.

With the electric arc sources, on the other hand, the reflector arc is the most efficient system which has yet been devised and, while this system is far superior to the old methods of projection, it still is somewhat below that of the Mazda lamp strictly from an efficiency standpoint.

This line of reasoning may appear to be wrong with those proponents of the reflector arc system who believe it to be the last word in optical systems, nevertheless it is a cold fact that the Mazda lamp outfit still ranks first in point of efficiency.

Light Angle No Definite Measure

No small number of people believe that the only thing required of an illuminator (a source and condenser system) is that it intercept as large a solid angle of light as possible. In other words, it is pointed out that since both the reflector arc and Mazda lamp systems intercept 120 degrees of light, the systems are equally efficient.

This is a logical line of reasoning and would be correct if no other factors were present to upset it. The principal reason why it is not true is found in the physical construction of the electric arc which acts to introduce a very serious loss in any optic system in which it is used.

In the old arc systems the combination of heat and inclination angle of the electrodes acted to limit the pick-up angle of light. With the reflector arc system, the electrodes introduce a serious shading loss despite the fact that the pick-up limitations have been removed.

The shading which results from the unavoidable placement of the carbon electrodes in the path of the light beam has been grossly underestimated by most people concerned with the handling of reflector arc outfits who are more inclined to consider this loss of light as ratio of the center hole area in the mirror to the entire mirror area, whereas the thing to be considered is the shading due to the positive electrodes and its holder. If the area of the center hole alone be considered a loss of but 5 or 10 per cent under the most favorable conditions.

Variance in Theory and Practice

This loss, especially in the case of the low intensity arc, is sufficient to cause the discrepancy between theoretical and actual screen illumination as will be shown.

Taking the case of the reflector arc using an elliptical mirror we find that the crater of a 12-inch positive electrode is placed 4 inches away from an 8-inch diameter mirror. The holder for the positive electrodes for a full turn, grips the carbon at or near the opposite end and this holder grip measures approximately 1¼ inches in diameter.

With the ordinary elliptic mirrors this carbon holder is roughly 8 inches distant from the aperture. If, from the central point of the aperture, two lines are drawn so as to touch the top and bottom of the holder gripping the positive carbon and are then continued to the mirror, we find that a circle measuring 3¾ inches is the actual amount of mirror area which is hidden or shaded from the central point of the aperture. This area represents 22 per cent of the entire usable area of the mirror and this much of the mirror is useless as far as providing light to the projection lens is concerned.

If these same two lines are now projected back from the central point of the aperture so as to strike the projection lens, we find that under average conditions (in fair sized theatres) the central portion of the projection lens is shaded and receives no light from the mirror.

In the case of projection lenses ranging between 6½ and 7-inch E.F., the amount of lens area shaded will be between 20 per cent and 25 per cent, which closely approximates the loss as figured at the mirror.

The maximum output with the reflector arc at present is about 2500 lumens. If it were not for the shading loss as described above, this output would be increased to better than 3,000 lumens.

Now, comparing this with the output from the incandescent lamp outfit when the same E.F. of projection lens (6½-inch to 7-inch) is used, we find the latter to be between 700 and 800 lumens. Thus, on this corrected basis we find the ratio of the Mazda lamp and low intensity arc illuminations to be 1 to 4 or 4½, which is quite close to the theoretical ratio of 1 to 5 as above pointed out.

With the shading loss to be considered, however, the best ratio obtainable is about 1 to 3, which indicates the seriousness of this loss. It is extremely doubtful whether this loss will ever be eliminated because of the inherent construction of the electric arc.

Poli Theatres to Install Sentry Safety Control

The Poli Circuit of theatres has arranged to install Sentry Safety Control in all the theatres of the chain. Installation will be made as soon as possible. The Sentry concern has recently enlarged its factory in Philadelphia and has been catching up on orders.

The Poli Circuit is one of many theatre chains that have placed blanket orders for Sentry Safety Control.

Tony Sudekum Opens New House in Sheffield, Tennessee

THE Ritz Theatre in Sheffield Tennessee, is the newest house in the chain controlled by Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, and also president of the Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., of which corporation the Ritz is a property.

The Ritz was formally opened July 9, at 6 o'clock in the evening, the regular film show getting under way at 7 o'clock. Work on the theatre was finished two nights previous to the opening and nothing was spared that might add to the beauty of its appearance. The exterior of the building is of white stone, which is offset conspicuously by the variegated colors of the marquee and the lobby. On the marquee are approximately 600 blue and yellow electric lights. Outlined on three of its sides is the name Ritz, and these lights burn continuously while the evening performances are on. The border of the marquee is lighted with hundreds of "crawling" lights of a yellowish hue. In the outer lobby are located three sheet display cases and three photo display cases. The color scheme of these is in tan, blue and light green. The foyer has a tile flooring and a base with tan wainscoting.

The Ritz has a seating capacity of 628—408 in the orchestra, 173 in the white balcony and 101 in the colored balcony. The floors are of concrete and the aisles and area behind the back railings are laid with battleship linoleum.

The color scheme of the auditorium is pink and a delicate shade of green, the panels being in the former color and the remainder of the walls in the light green. Draperies are in black velvet with bright borders and fringe. Four pink silk covered light fixtures hang from the ceiling and eight pilot lights are situated around the side and rear walls.

The Relation of Sound Film to Theatre Design

By Victor A. Rigaumont, A. I. A.

A prominent theatre architect advances some interesting ideas regarding the distribution of amplified sound based on a thorough study of the problems of acoustics and the special requirements of sound pictures.

This article, of interest to theatre owners and theatre architects, was written especially for The Showman and will be illustrated with diagrams showing the suggested method of wiring theatres.

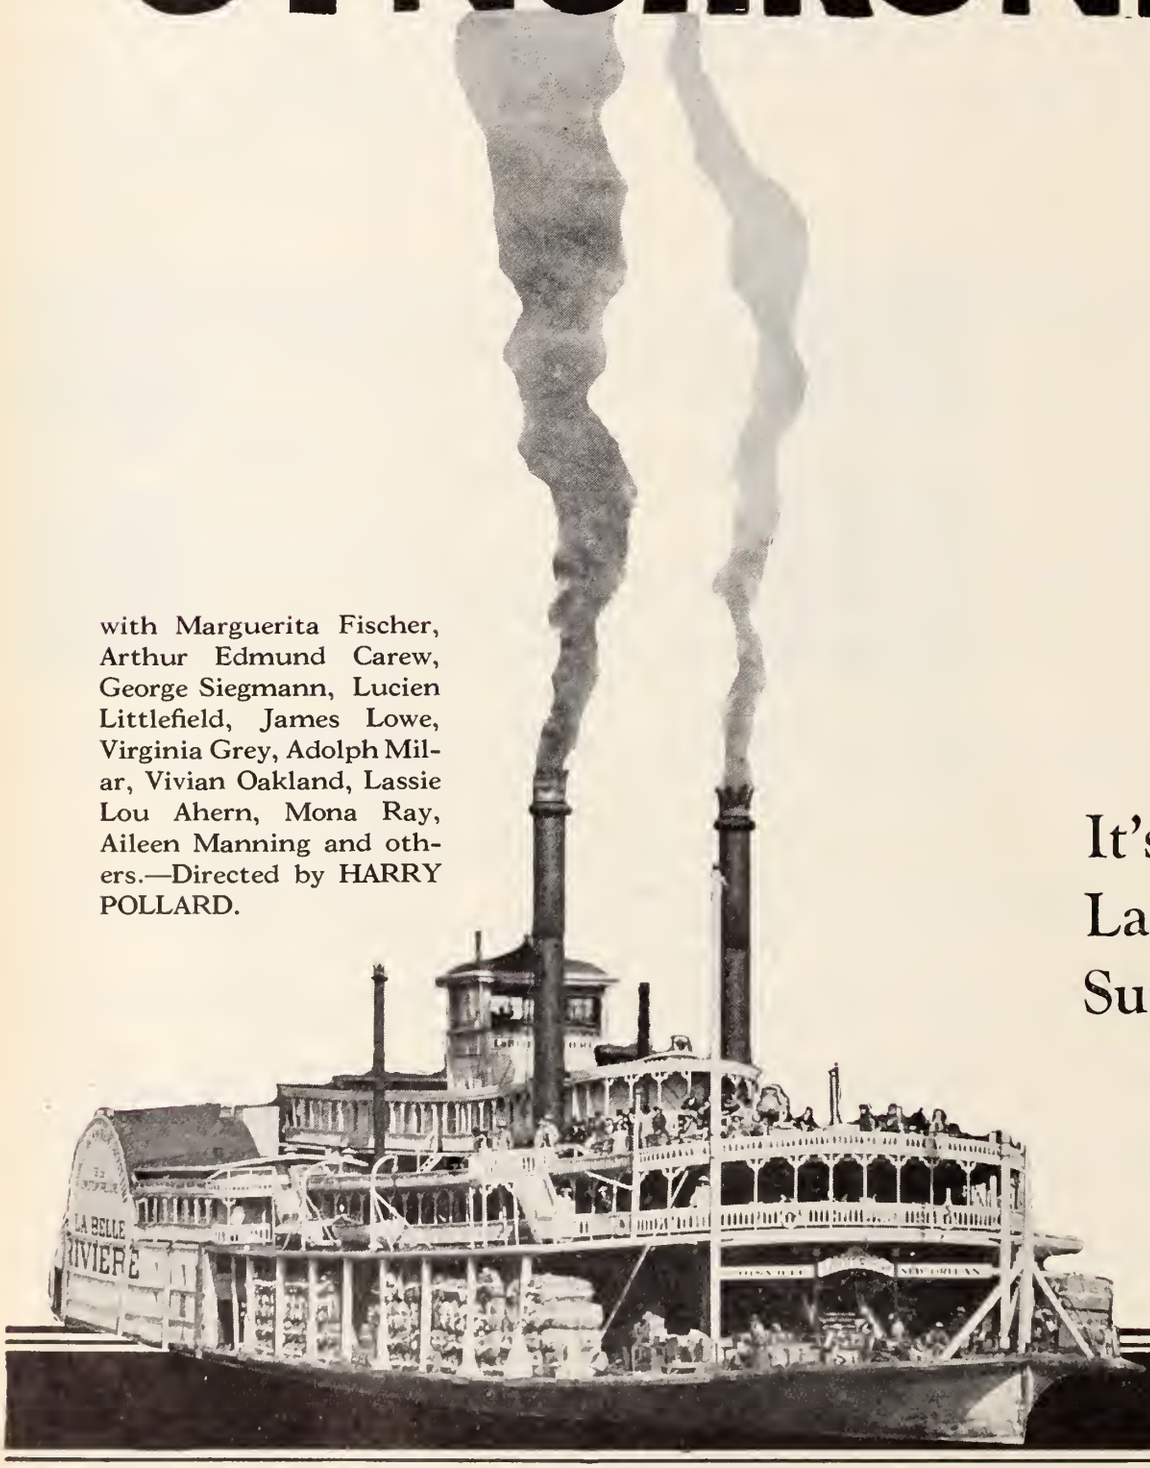
Points of Trade

Did you ever stop to think how you've become accustomed to reading certain periodicals and newspapers —how other magazines and papers seem uninteresting and difficult to digest?

And further, that your favorites carry a group of advertisers that have become almost your exclusive points of trade?

You have confidence in your pet publications—they are high-class and so are the advertisers.



You must know that the same conditions exist with readers of publications in the fields in which your own company is advertising. You want to choose mediums that instill reader loyalty—that gain for your company recognition and the trade from these readers.

In the motion picture theatre field Motion Picture News can claim this reader loyalty. For fifteen years our constant circulation, covering the real buyers, proves this. Our records of subscription renewals—year after year from the same subscribers, many of whom during this period have become the industry's leaders—make the News the most effective advertising medium in this field.

You can advertise elsewhere—you can carry on heavy campaigns—but you just can't hope to gain that invaluable recognition which Motion Picture News advertisers enjoy. For it's the News advertisers that are the points of trade for the theatre field.

HARRISON'S REPORTS

"The Cop"—with William Boyd

(Pathe, August 19; 7,054 ft., 82 to 100 min.)

There is a hold-up scene in this picture which, for realism, has not been seen in pictures for years. I doubt if a true-to-life hold-up scene could give one greater thrills. It is so cleverly conceived and so well executed that one gasps for breath until it is all over There is, of course, a master mind among the crooks, who plans it, and his men carry it out without a hitch. First, one car, at the appointed time, drives in front of the armored car that carried thousands of dollars, and stops it. Then a heavy truck, driven by another confederate, drives at high speed, bumps against the armored car and wrecks it, tearing it apart. The crooks then carry the money away Confederates posted in shops and rooming houses with machine guns complete the picture. There are other thrilling situations in other parts of the picture, but the situation just described is the most thrilling The action holds one's interest from the very beginning. And one is made to feel friendly toward the hero by proper characterization. In the beginning he is shown as a draw-bridge tender At one time he secretes a crook with a bullet wound in his arm; he had been chased by the police immediately after a hold-up. But the hero's kind-heartedness is rewarded by the crook's stealing his coat and $25, while the hero was out to buy grub to feed the crook with. The hero becomes tired of his work and joins the police force. It was during his beat that the armored car had been held up and the money stolen, and his friend, also a cop, killed He then vows to catch the murderers, whose leader happened to be the very same man that had stolen his money and his overcoat. By following the heroine, member of the gang, he is able to locate the hiding place of the master mind. But when he gets into the house, he finds the master mind gone. However, he telephones headquarters to cover the river and to leave the bridge to him. He then suggests to the heroine, for whom he had felt an interest, because of dawning love, that it would be dangerous for her to go to the bridge that night. He goes to the bridge, but finds the heroine there. He realizes that she had gone there not to warn the crooks but to tell him (the hero) that his life was in danger In a pistol duel with the crook, the hero comes out the victor, he had aimed at and shot the master crook in the head, being the only vulnerable spot, his body being protected by a steel jacket. The wounded crook drowns in the river The heroine promises the hero to give up the "racket." (It is implied that they married.)

The plot has been founded on the story by Elliott Clawson, it has been directed with great skill by Donald Crisp, from a screen play by Tay Garnett. Mr Boyd does good work as the hero, Robert Armstrong as the master criminal, and Jacqueline Logan as the heroine. Alan Hale is good, too, as the chief of the homicide squad.

Although a crook play, it leaves no bad impression.

PATHESERIALS, box-office magic workers for fifteen years, will be the fireworks this season for thousands of exhibitors. The fans like action—mystery—daring danger! They want to be kept guessing—talking—wondering—expecting. They want life in the raw—realism—red blood—quick twists of plot—changing fortune—big stakes—colossal rewards—dramatic dynamite! These factors never play to empty seats. Patheserials bring 'em in—keep 'em coming, fix their interest week after week. Where a feature may be gone and forgotten, the Patheserial goes on gathering momentum—gathering the shekels.

LET'S GET DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

THERE'S TOO MUCH HOOEY in this business today. A lot of picture people who spend more time eating lunch than tending to business are giving out half-cocked statements on what's happening in this business. They don't know!

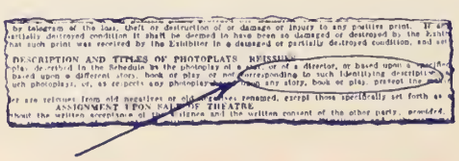
THE only trouble is that some exhibitors are puzzled by such hot air. They are worried by this schmoos. Naturally they turn to the one organization which has both feet solidly on the ground!

HERE'S THE LOW-DOWN!

(10 reasons why exhibitors are depending on M-G-M for their continued prosperity in picture business)

1 HOW ARE YOUR RECEIPTS?



DO YOU KNOW what product on the market is doing the most business at the box-office? Listen! A box-office check-up of 500 percentage houses, many of which play all products, shows that M-G-M pictures have taken the biggest share of all business in all of these houses. It's natural that M-G-M is the most sought-after product on the market.

2 STARTING THE NEW SEASON WITH A BANG!

SEPTEMBER 1st M-G-M opens its new releasing season with William Haines in "Excess Baggage." Hollywood is already talking about it. Prepare for one of the greatest pictures that has ever swept an audience with thrills, heart-throbs and laughter. Then M-G-M delivers in rapid-fire succession "Our Dancing Daughters" (with Joan Crawford) of which the Daily Review says: "A mop-up any way you look at it. 100 per cent picture"—Lon Chaney in "While The City Sleeps," (it could run on Broadway at $2) —Monta Bell's ingenious mystery thriller, "The Bellamy Trial" based on the famed Saturday Evening Post serial and novel. We make this prediction now: No company on earth is in a position to offer you productions of this calibre to start off the new season and M-G-M in '28-29' will again be the Talk of the Industry.

3 THE PUBLIC WANTS REAL STARS!

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE between stars offered you as "identifying descriptions" (stars which have been made because there was no title to sell and because the mere all-star classification was not enough) and M-G-M stars, each of which is a star in "drawing power", the greatest group of established marquee names ever assembled by any company in this industry's history. Compare these big names with other "identifying description" names: Lon Chaney, John Gilbert, William Haines, Marion Davies, Greta Garbo, Ramon Novarro, Norma Shearer, Lillian Gish, Karl Dane & George K. Arthur, Buster Keaton, Lew Cody & Aileen Pringle, Tim McCoy. Not to mention M-G-M featured players whose drawing strength is greater than the so-called stars ("identifying description") of other companies. A few M-G-M featured players: Joan Crawford, Lionel Barrymore, Renee Adoree, Conrad Nagel, Ralph Forbes, John Mack Brown, Nils Asther, Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian, Polly Moran, Marceline Day, Bert Roach, etc.

Extra! Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gets the prize stage property of years "The Trial of Mary Dugan". The vehicle, they all were after. The vehicle M-G-M got. 11 months on Broadway and still going strong. M-G-M will be first to synchronize with complete dialogue a current Broadway stage hit, hot from its metropolitan triumphs.

4 M-G-M ATTITUDE ON SOUND WINS EXHIBITOR CONFIDENCE!

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER will lead the field in Movietone and Vitaphone. Depend on Young Blood, ever in the forefront of this business. Ours is a sound sound policy. No rash promises. Delivery! We're well along right now. Many exhibitors have congratulated M-G-M on its level-headed handling of the sound situation, its refusal to stampede exhibitors with exaggerated sound announcements. M-G-M knows, as all exhibitors know, that it will be a long time before the majority of theatres are sound-equipped. Far in advance of that, M-G-M will be ready with the last word in quality sound pictures, features, shorts, newsreel and other one-reel novelties. Meanwhile thousands of exhibitors place their security in M-G-M, greatest in resources, greatest in stars, livest in promotion, to fill theatres week in and week out with box-office pictures.

5 SOUND STUDIOS COMPLETED BY M-G-M

WE ARE LOOKING BEYOND the novelty stage in sound. While others have been making elaborate promises, M-G-M has been rapidly constructing at its vast Culver City, California, plant the finest and best equipped stage for sound synchronization in the world! It's finished. We're all set to go. But as for making promises—hell no! We'll deliver! That's M-G-M policy always. And in addition to our West Coast sound studios watch for the opening of the great Cosmopolitan Studios in New York City for the production of sound subjects. This puts M-G-M in a strategic position for the creation of synchronized subjects since the Cosmopolitan Studios are more accessible than any others to the talent-sources of Broadway.

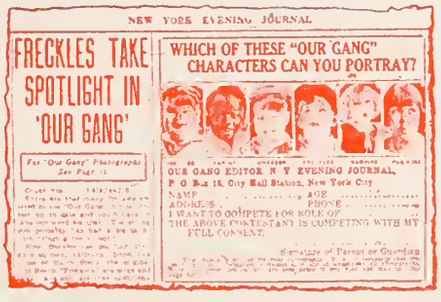
6 M-G-M CLICKING RIGHT NOW!

THE OUTSTANDING money-making pictures of the current season are all M-G-M. While other companies talk pictures, M-G-M gives theatres John Gilbert in "The Cossacks", which Variety reports "biggest business on Broadway", and held over for second smash week at Capitol, N.Y. It is a sensation and is doing the biggest business of every town it plays. William Haines in "Telling The World" comes to theatres with the backing of United Press newspapers all over the country, enjoying advance publicity worth millions in the form of serials, feature stories, photographs in the press. It is doing record business at Warfield, San Francisco; Allen, Cleveland; Capitol, N.Y., and everywhere. Other big pictures for coming weeks that insure your business in spite of any conditions are Marion Davies in "Cardboard Lover"; John Gilbert in "Four Walls"; Greta Garbo in "Mysterious Lady", and others. "White Shadows in the South Seas", which M-G-M exhibitors have already bought is so good that it is now playing at the Astor on Broadway at $2, thereby enhancing its value to you!

7 SHORT SUBJECT SUPREMACY!



DE LUXE HOUSES one after another are cutting expensive presentations and at the same time stimulating attendance by building their presentations around Hal Roach M-G-M quality-short-subjects. No other shorts are of sufficient class to merit this handling, therefore the "Our Gang", Charlie Chase, Laurel-Hardy and Roach All Star comedies are delighting audiences in thousands of theatres. M-G-M's distinguished Great Events in Technicolor as well as M-G-M's UFA Oddities are equally important in the building up of today's programs. M-G-M Shorts will be further enhanced by the addition of Movietone. The M-G-M Movietone News is well under way.

8 PROMOTION DIRECT TO YOUR PUBLIC!

ONCE AN M-G-M EXHIBITOR, always an M-G-M exhibitor! Not only because M-G-M's product is great but because M-G-M believes in extending its services after you have signed your contract. Space permits mention of only a few activities that reach direct to your public and help sell tickets at your box-office. This year the valuable M-G-M SCREEN FORECAST is on the screen. A thrilling reel has been prepared, showing actual shots from the big, spectacular M-G-M productions of next season. A marvelous advance ballyhoo that tells your public of the bright, popular stars who will entertain them during the year '28-'29 in glamorous new hits. THE SCREEN FORECAST contains shots from many features and shorts, and besides being a convincing piece of salesmanship it's a brilliant novelty for any theatre to run. M-G-M continues to reach millions of fans over the radio, through the M-G-M Movie Club programs broadcast over twenty-six nationwide stations. M-G-M fan ad-contests in the national magazines are engrossing ticket-buyers the country-over. M-G-M's system of publicity services means that by actual check M-G-M leads every company in the business in the amount of photographic and press propaganda obtained for M-G-M stars and pictures.

9 M-G-M GETS BEHIND ITS GREAT SHORT SUBJECTS!

THE IMPORTANT PROMOTION is done by M-G-M, not alone in features but in short subjects. The National "Our Gang" Movie Talent Test is the biggest promotion ever put behind a short subject.

Tie-ups with newspapers all over the country, the selection of youngsters resembling the various members of the "Our Gang," the actual filming of a comedy in each contest center with the "Our Gang" winners in the cast—this represents a stunt of magnitude. Right now, also, M-G-M is extending to exhibitors its services in the promotion of "Joy Week", fighting hot weather with ideas, giving showmen free of charge banners, slides, posters to put over "Joy Week" in their theatres. The tie-up between Kellogg's Pep and the "Our Gang" kids is only one more of the many live ideas which M-G-M week after week devises to help sell tickets at box-offices.

10 LEO'S WORLD TOUR SELLS SEATS FOR THEATRES!

BEYOND THE rosiest expectations of M-G-M is the reception accorded M-G-M's newest world-wide promotion event following the Trackless Train. Leo, the M-G-M lion and company trade-mark, took Washington, D. C., by storm, continued his triumphal march through New York City and is now on his way across America and thereafter the world. Steady!

Present Crisis Demands Cool-Headedness and Common Sense

By William A. Johnston

A SERIOUS economic situation is developing as a result of the sound movie frenzy. The business machinery of the industry is by way of being badly gummed up, if not actually stalled. Exhibitors are in a state of uncertainty.

The condition appears to be widespread. It is reported to us, first-hand, by one of our own staff who is touring the Mid-West. Numerous other bits of evidence, all pointing in the same direction, are at hand. It is time for serious thought on everybody's part.

* * * *

It is, of course, true that the industry plunged into the heralding of sound movies before it was ready to deliver. Make no mistake about it, the public is very quick to sense developments of this kind. That cannot be helped. Neither can it be doubted for a single moment that the public wants the sound movie.

But—and here is the most important point of all—the public, in the great mass, cannot get the sound movie for months. By which we mean—the big majority of theatres will not be equipped, and the result will be that by far the largest percentage of moviegoers will have to be content with silent pictures for some time to come. Apparently, not more than 1,000 theatres will have installations by the first of next year.

* * * *

Yet it is imperative that the industry make a determined effort to preserve its business balance in the interim. The silent picture will have to be the chief basis for our economic existence for many months.

In this critical situation, some positive steps are greatly to be desired. There should be a clear statement on interchangeability. It has not been forthcoming thus far, for what reasons we do not know.

* * * *

It is also vital that the production forces in Hollywood realize that the silent picture is still the chief entertainment fare of the public. Sound is a valuable adjunct to the picture. But the picture is the thing, and Hollywood will be making a grave mistake if it gives all its attenton to sound at the expense of picture.

In plain words, Hollywood is tackling the biggest problem it ever had to face. It must experiment with and perfect a new technique for sound pictures, under the pressure of overwhelming public demand, and at the same time not cheapen the silent picture. A great responsibility, which should be carried out, not on the basis of emotional frenzy, but cool-headedly and with everybody's feet firmly on the ground.

* * * *

And this also is true, as we said several weeks ago:

At this critical juncture the producer will need to sell his regular output of silent film as never before. It is a crisis; no doubt about that. And, for once, distributor and exhibitor ought to work together to help each other out. The plain fact is that silent pictures have got to be sold to the public. It's going to take advertising, ingenious effort, untiring zeal,—in other words, Showmanship.

Opinions of Readers on Sound Pictures

In accordance with its long-established custom of opening its columns to full discussion of important topics, whether the views expressed by readers are in agreement with ours, or not, Motion Picture News continues the publication of letters on sound pictures:

July 25, 1928.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

I just read, with the same interest I do all of your editorials, "The 'Sound' Crisis," in reply to Mr. Powell's letter on this subject.

I agree entirely with your statement that it is inconceivable that the public should go on forever paying to see standardized black and white pictures, but I am certain the public will continue to patronize black and white pictures that contain real value. With the novelty of the "talkies" still very much in their favor, I do not see that they are outdrawing our excellent silent pictures.

To my mind the success of this new development depends entirely on its being used with discretion. No one can question the immense value to all types of theatres of the use of this development for the musical accompaniment of and for sound effects in features and of both of these, plus singing and talking, in short subjects. The danger lies, in my opinion, in the indiscriminate use of dialogue in features. Take for instance the first all-talking feature. The production of this picture at the present time may be regarded by some as good showmanship because it is timely, but I believe it not only provides an excellent example of the wrong use of this marvelous new development, but is apt to prevent the accomplishment of what is possible by reason of this new development, and that is the making of new patrons.

The Usual and the Unusual

It must be remembered that in this fast moving age of ours, the "unusual" of today is the "usual" of tomorrow. Lindbergh's feat resulted in reams of newspaper copy which was read avidly by millions—Miss Earhart's feat excited but little comment and I question whether many read more than the headlines.

Consequently, while the novelty of the dialogue feature will draw new faces, it will not hold them unless they view quality articles on their first trips to the movie theatre.

And when the movie fan's attitude is considered, it must be remembered that he has made the motion picture his chief entertainment fare because he loves the pantomimic art which has set the motion picture apart from the speaking stage. Consequently, it seems ridiculous to me to think that any producer would make of his product an imitation of the speaking stage when that imitation at best can be but a poor one. Furthermore, in doing so he cannot help but sacrifice the other two vital elements that have made the motion picture popular, action and space.

The apathetic condition of the industsry today, to which you refer, is not going to be cured by Dr. Novelty alone. The cure lies in the production of films that will be rated as good in any theatre, and the addition to these basically good pictures of proper musical accompaniment, sound effects and dialogue judiciously used, for theatres that are wired for sound. So long as the producer regards sound in its proper light, as an accessory, we will show progress. Otherwise, we may witness the sorry spectacle of the destruction of one illusion by another illusion.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) R. B. Murray,
Director, U. S. Army Motion Picture Service, Washington, D. C.

From An Old Timer

Wisconsin Rapids, Wisc.,
July 25, 1928.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

I presume Exhibitor Powell's letter anent the "talkies," and your reply will provoke considerable discussion, and as an old timer, I am interested. I saw my first motion picture 35 years ago and for the past seventeen years have been connected variously in the exhibiting, distributing and producing "ends" of the game, and I think you are peculiarly right when you say: "The movie business was decidedly better off when it was kicking and squealing with infant pains."

In my opinion, which is as good as (and no better than) any other man's, the entertainment value of the motion picture per se, is now decidedly over-capitalized in the exhibition "end." First: the original reason for movie patronage was curiosity; second: it has seldom risen above secondary entertainment—i.e., it has seldom had any appeal to the intelligentsia and a large percentage of patrons came because they found around supper time that they had no place else to go; third: as drama it has rarely been able to compete in merit with the spoken drama except as to illusion; fourth: although properly styled "the silent drama" it has always had the need for a musical accompaniment, but not for jazz bands and irrelevant vaudeville.

Now what do we find, after all these million dollar picture palaces have been built? Curiosity no longer exists, and as secondary entertainment the movies have thus become much less attractive. The intelligentsia has not yet been won away from the meritorious spoken drama, and we, the purveyors of the silent drama, are apparently being placed in a position where we must successfully compete with the spoken drama or perish. Al Jolson's screen version of "The Jazz Singer" has been successful, but certainly less than fifty per cent of his stage personality was expressed. The magnetism of a Lionel Barrymore cannot get completely through to an audience through mechanical devices which merely reproduce sound, any more than with mechanical devices which photograph action. So, no matter how mechanically perfect our machinery may be, I fear the thrill of actually seeing and hearing the real Al Jolson or Lionel Barrymore on the stage will be notably lacking. So that, after the original curiosity aroused by the advertising of these devices has disappeared, we will be in precisely the same dilemma we are now, with an added financial burden of equipment and maintenance to bear.

Ford As An Example

Your advice to Mr. Powell was, I think, exemplary. Only a couple of weeks ago, a real showman in a real key center said to me: "I'm going to be in no hurry to buy any sound device or to install one on any terms. What I want is that my competitors will install them and then I will augment my orchestra; pay still greater attention to my accompanying musical program and play to the great public which really likes the 'silent drama' when the stories are good and well directed."

For a number of years Henry Ford overstepped the whole world with the sales of his flivver. Then sales began to drop and Uncle Henry finally got panicky, stopped production and permitted his factories to lie idle and his dealers to suffer, until by and by he placed an entirely different car on the market. Yet there remained hundreds of thousands of prospective customers who had grown accustomed to buying a new flivver once a year. They were satisfied with it and didn't want to have to learn a new shift. If Ford had remained in production with a part of his mammoth plants on his old machine he might, I sincerely believe, have continued to make a profit himself, assisted his dealers in maintaining their businesses, and retained a tremendous number of satisfied customers who are now driving other makes of cars.

Any small town exhibitors who wants to operate with any chance for profit, will, if he is wise, leave the sound devices severely alone and spend his time and money on the best pictures and the best accompanying music he can contrive. In a couple of years the patronage of sound pictures will be, in my opinion negligible, while there always will be a sufficient market for silent drama entertainment so that the exhibitor who knows his business and is not overburdened with investment can make money.

(Signed) J. J. Gruwell

Baltimore Skeptical Over Sound Devices

MANY exhibitors in Baltimore appear to be in a quandary as to whether to have the sound and talking pictures mechanism installed. It is pointed out that the cost of operation is very great and there is a question as to whether theatres can get a decent profit out of the increased expenditure after the mechanism is installed.

One manager pointed out that the admission could be raised five cents but there is great danger in tampering with the standard prices. However, it is understood that about twenty-five theatres there will be equipped to handle the sound and talking pictures during the coming season.

Public Demands "All-Talkies", News' Staff Man Finds

Charles E. Lewis, on Mid-West Tour, Reports Exhibition Conditions First Hand; Theatres in Rush for Sound

(Editor's Note.—This is the first of a series of articles by the exhibitor member of the staff of Motion Picture News. Opinions expressed by Mr. Lewis are naturally his own, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Editor of The News.)

By CHARLES E. LEWIS
Editor of "The Managers' Round Table Club"

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 28.—If New York City and sections surrounding it have gone crazy about sound pictures, then some of the towns and cities I have visited must be mad. Wherever you go, whomever you meet, it's the same thing all over again. "When will your talkie plant be installed?" Its on everybody's tongue and in everybody's mind.

So far as the public is concerned, the situation is alike all over. They want more talking pictures, but they want them to be all-talkies. They will, it seems, be apt to turn up their noses at the ordinary good feature which has only been synchronized with music. In some of the towns I have visited, they have taken this attitude already. Even some exhibitors with Vitaphone and Movietone equipment are holding back on next season's product until they get a better idea of what their patrons want on their sound devices.

As for the exhibitors, the size of the town does not seem to matter, nor does the amount of business they may do. Whether they will make money or lose money also seems to be lost in the mad struggle for the talkies. I found an exhibitor in one town of less than 3,000 people, and very little to draw from, that was busy figuring how he could put in an installation.

Two Important Factors

In order that sound pictures may mean profit and a stimulant to the average small town or city, two important factors stand out as of vital importance. First: the necessity of securing an installation at reasonable price; and second: the need of securing synchronized product and acts at a price reasonable enough to insure a small exhibitor the chance of making a fair profit on his investment.

After these two factors the next thing to consider is the incidental cost surrounding an installation, such as elimination of the orchestra, the keeping down of the pay roll in the booth, both items of importance where union conditions prevail. The service charge and all the other expenses that go with talkies. To my mind, an exhibitor should consider every single detail before plunging into an investment so large and of such importance to his theatre.

As to those theatres and towns where talkies have already made their bow, the opinion about them seems to vary with just two points. First: where the exhibitor controls his town I generally found that he considered his plant a great success and a big money-maker. Second: Where he did not control the town he was crying that the novelty had worn off and that the cost of pictures for his plant was eating up all the possible profit he could make.

Kennedy Urges Conservatism

Suggests Going Slow on Talking Pictures; Advocates Economy and Building Up of Co-operation; Plans Trip Abroad

By EDWIN SCHALLERT
Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

(Copyright, 1928, by Motion Picture News, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 30.—The era of renewed golden prosperity is not in sight yet for the motion picture.

This I gleaned from Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O, during a conversation with this executive, who now occupies a salient position in the film industry as a result of his association with the Pathe-Keith-Albee interests and First National, in the capacity of "advisor."

Kennedy does not make predictions regarding the future. He deals in current facts, but he puts these forcibly enough for anyone to draw his own conclusions. He averred during the course of conversation that he believes an executive's work should be concentrated in action, and not in talk. He has, by the same token, seldom been interviewed.

Sees Serious Condition

"This business is still in a very serious state," he said. "Patronage at the theatres is not what it should be, and there will have to be further improvements in the general management of affairs in production and other departments. There is nobody in motion pictures who can afford not to be concerned.

"Conditions were complicated enough before the advent of talking pictures but these render the working out of the motion picture's problems many times more intricate. We are already speaking of talking pictures as an actuality, when most of the companies haven't even the stages to make them. Those who are in any way prepared are winning enormous success in the theatres in which they can show these features, but the number of such theatres is exceedingly limited. When I left New York the installations amounted to 350. I would say that today they are not more than 375. Equipment is supposed to be going into the theatres at the rate of 125 a month, but I believe that if you halve that it will be closer to it.

"The expense that the industry will have to undergo because of talking pictures will be very excessive, and we are not assured by any means, as yet, that the public are going to approve this type of entertainment wholeheartedly. It behooves the utmost care and caution in handling this new invention so that it is properly and judiciously placed before the public, and not induce expenditures out of all proportion. There are too many concerns in this business within 6 to 7 per cent of going in the red for any wild flinging about of money at present. That is far too small a margin."

Kennedy suggests no remedy, except possibly the very general one of conservatism—persistent economic measures without any lowering of the quality of pictures. His accomplishments in this field, it is said, are likely to become very far-reaching, although he will tell nothing of his plans. "I believe in minding my own business, and saying nothing," he continued. "There is always plenty to do to figure out the next move commercially and economically without indulging in any ill-advised predictions about the future."

As to the Remedy

Nevertheless, Kennedy did hint that the thing most necessary at the present time is a strong restoration of confidence, and the get-together spirit among all branches of the industry. "A psychological condition is at the bottom of most of the difficulties, and too little mutual understanding of problems that concern everybody fundamentally," he said. "Producers, stars, distributors, exhibitors, legislators, and even foreign countries all have differences and disagreements regarding the industry, which seem constantly thrust into the limelight. If these could be even partially forgotten about, the improvement would be remarkable."

From Hollywood, it might be noted, Kennedy is going abroad in an effort to straighten out the foreign situation as far as the interests he represents are concerned.

Paramount's Earnings Climb in New Reports for Periods

ESTIMATES of $3,870,000 for the six-month period ending June 30, 1928, and $1,605,000 for the quarter ending the same date, are offered by Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation, in its financial report, after all charges and taxes, and including its undistributed share of earnings of the Balaban and Katz Corporation, a 65 per cent owned subsidiary. These earnings amount to $5.63 per share for the six months' period and $2.33 per share for the three months' period ending June 30 on the 687,443 shares issued and outstanding.

The profits for the first six months of 1928 are figured to be approximately 9 per cent ahead of the corresponding six months of 1927, which period was the previous record first half year of the company.

The figures for the first six months earnings of 1928 compare with those of the previous two years as follows: 1928—$3,870,000; 1927—$3,532,300; 1926—$2,587,500. The figures for the second three months earnings of 1928 compare with those of the two previous years as follows: 1928—$1,605,000; 1927—$1,465,000; 1926—$937,000. These earnings as above for the first half year of $5.63 per share of 687,443 shares outstanding compare with $5.60 per share reported as earned during the first half year of 1927 on 575,406 shares then issued and outstanding.

The increase in earnings available for common stock the first six months of 1928 is estimated at 20 per cent above those of 1927, a comparison of the amount available for the common stock for the six months' periods of the two years and also that of 1926 being as follows: 1928—$3,870,000; 1927—$3,222,000; 1926—$2,268,000.

Veteran Exhibitor Dies

William J. Sweeney, Prominent Figure in Theatre World of Middle West, Passes Away at Age of 67

WILLIAM J. SWEENEY, veteran exhibitor and pioneer in exhibitor organization work, passed away July 26 at his Chicago residence and was burried in Calvary Cemetery on July 28, after a requiem mass at St. Peter's, the church which he attended regularly for the past 40 years. He was 67 years old and is survived by his widow.

Five of the six pallbearers were motion picture men who had known and loved "Big Bill" for many years and a large number of film men and exhibtors attended the services.

No man connected with the industry in the central west had more friends than Mr. Sweeney and few of them but could repeat some story of Bill's many good deeds and kindnesses to his friends in the business. As far back as 1900 Mr. Sweeney was a showman, at that time being owner of the State Street Museum, which adjoined the amusement place operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer. He was an early day friend and adviser to many motion picture men who have since attained local and national celebrity as leaders in the business, including such figures as Sam Katz, Schaefer Brothers, Jack Miller, M. A. Choynski and many others.

In 1905 Mr. Sweeney acquired the Standard and Ideal theatres in the 63rd and Halsted street neighborhood and operated them successfully for a number of years. He, with eight others, founded the Illinois Exhibitors League, the first organization of its kind in this state, and was a moving factor in bringing the various stage organizations to Chicago in 1912 for the first great motion picture theatre owners convention, Ludwig Schindler being president of the local organization and Mr. Sweeney, secretary. Slightly before this time, he got out of the exhibition business and devoted himself, from then to the time of his death, to organization work.

Mr. Sweeney was a prominent and popular figure at every national convention to date and at the time of his death was Office Manager for the Exhibitors Association of Chicago.

Mr. Sweeney had been in failing health for some months but it was only for the past four weeks that he was confined to his home and was unable to come to the office, which was a great disappointment to him.

Films Get Equal Break on K-A-O Programs

IN accordance with the new Keith-Albee-Orpheum policy, motion pictures will share equally and in some instances dominate the billing in the houses of the circuit. House managers are being instructed to materially increase their publicity and advertising on motion pictures. The K-A-O circuit has booked Pathe product 100 per cent.

"Noah's Ark," in Work 2 Years, Finished

"Noah's Ark," which Warner Bros. rates as its most expensive and pretentious production, was finished last week after two and one-half years of preparatory work and filming. The concluding Vitaphone sequences are done and the thousands of feet of film shot by Director Michael Curtiz have gone to the cutting room for the finishing touches.

Warner Bros. announced plans for filming "Noah's Ark" early in 1926, when research work was inaugurated. Since that time the director has worked in close intimacy with Production Supervisor J. L. Warner, Darryl Francis Zanuck, author of the story, and William Koenig, studio manager. With the introduction late in 1926 of Vitaphone, the company decided to expand the scope of the production with sound sequences. The script was elaborated and a technical unit was added to the production forces under Curtiz. Camera work began last winter.

The story is two-fold and after the manner of "The Ten Commandments" embodies a biblical tale and a modern one, with a parallel drawn between them. The largest set for the story was that of the Temple of Jaghut, photographed with 5,000 extras appearing before the cameras.

In and Out of Town

JACQUES SPECTOR, film distributor and operator and for several years Universal's representative in France and Belgium, returned to France on the SS Lapland recently. His wife, who joined him in New York six months ago, returned with him. Mr. Spector will manage a circuit of theatres abroad and will also represent a syndicate of small independent producers.

AS soon as H. M. Warner returns from his vacation the first week of August, his brother, Major Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Bros., will begin his period of rest. He will be away from the home office ten days in all and will spend his time in the Adirondacks fishing and golfing.

A. P. WAXMAN, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros., is back from his two weeks' vacation divided between Long Beach and Atlantic City.

LOUIS WEISS, vice-president of Artclass Pictures, who has been on the Coast supervising production, left Hollywood on July 22 for a tour of the Artclass exchanges. He is expected at the Artclass offices about the middle of August. Mr. Weiss took with him a completed print of "The Mysterious Airman," new Weiss Bros. serial.

PHIL RESIMAN, general sales manager of Pathe, left this week on a trip that will take him to Chicago, Milwaukee, Toronto and Montreal. He has just returned from a visit to the Albany branch. Other Pathe sales executives on the road are: J. F. McAloon, manager of exchange operations, who is now visiting the middle west; E. J. O'Leary, feature sales manager, who is making the rounds of the eastern and southern branches; and Harry Scott, short subject sales manager, who is at present on a tour of the middle west exchanges.

CARROLL S. TROWBRIDGE, personal representative of Douglas Fairbanks, has returned to his office following several days' absence caused by illness. He will shortly go to Hollywood for a conference with the star-producer concerning his new picture, "The Man With the Iron Mask."

CRESSON E. SMITH, assistant general sales manager of United Artists Corporation, has left New York on a sales trip to midwest exchanges in the interest of United Artists' new program of pictures.

JOHN MURRAY ANDERSON, theatrical producer for the Publix Theatres Corporation, arrived in New York Tuesday of this week, following a two months' tour of Europe.

Broadway Producers Enter Sound Picture Field

Shuberts, Woods, Brady, Hammerstein and Others Purchase Vocafilm and Will Produce Own Stage Plays

J. J. SHUBERT, Al Woods, William A. Brady, Arthur Hammerstein and other Broadway producers have entered the motion picture industry in competition with present producing organizations. An official announcement made by them Wednesday tells of their purchase of Vocafilm Corporation of America. They will use this disc recording and reproducing device for the production of their stage plays. This product will be shown first under the road show plan in such legitimate houses as are available and later will be released to the picture houses of the country.

The announcement issued from the offices of J. J. Shubert, says that this is the first answer of the spoken drama to the increasing importance of talking and sound pictures as entertainment. The price as announced by the purchasers is in excess of a million and one-half dollars.

Details of production and other plans of the Broadway producers have not yet been perfected, except that they will start production in the near future, and a majority or all of the stage plays produced by them will be immediately reproduced as talking pictures.

Production Plans Made

Plays will be in production only for a sufficient length of time for them to become absolutely smooth running before they are reproduced on the screen. The utmost in economy will be applied in the production of these pictures, in that they will use the original stage settings, the actors will not have to be rehearsed in the picture, and not a moment of time, as a consequence, will be lost in the shooting of the picture.

The idea is to call in a picture production expert as soon as the play has become smooth running. This expert will follow the script and action carefully, and while the play is in progress make such eliminations from the stage play as are necessary to improve the picture. When he has the picture version set to the satisfaction of the manager, the cast will be called to the studio and the shooting done.

Just who else is associated with the quartet of producers already named is not yet revealed, but there are said to be several others whose names will be made public at an early date. At any rate, Broadway plays will be reproduced in such numbers as to assure a steady output the year round by the Vocafilm process.

The new organization has a working agreement with a number of authors, so that when the new program goes into production, it is likely that subjects not seen on the stage will be screened and recorded by Vocafilm. According to the announcement, negotiations are under way for an arrangement with one of the first-line distributing corporations for the handling of the product after it has been road-showed by the producing managers' own organization. This national distributing organization is understood to be Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., of which E. W. Hammons is president.

Hammons and Vocafilm

Mr. Hammons for some time past has had an exclusive contract for Vocafilm, and as a part of the contract all Vocafilm product must go through him. Just how this matter will be arranged between the purchasers and Mr. Hammons has not yet been revealed. The latter also was vested with full authority to make contracts for all Vocafilm installations. If Mr. Hammons elects to do so, it is stated, Educational will become the distributor for the talkies of the legitimate plays to picture houses. David R. Hochreich has been president of Vocafilm since its first public introduction, and will remain in that capacity, according to the official announcement.

Among the Al Woods productions on schedule this season, and which will be reproduced as talking pictures, are: "Jealousy," starring Fay Bainter and Glenn Hunter; Florence Reed in "The Legacy," the new Shipman-Hymer play; "Fast Life," "A Man With Red Hair," "Scotland Yard," "The Great Jewel Robbery," and "The Censor's Holiday." Other Woods productions that will be screened are: Florence Reed in "The Shanghai Gesture," "Crime"; Ann Harding in "Stolen Fruit," and the Potash and Perlmutter series. All of Mr. Brady's impending plays are included in the program, such as "Camera," and Grace George in "Divorce a la Mode," and in all probability those of Brady and Wiman.

The Messrs. Shubert, producers of both dramas and musical works, will present all of their forthcoming productions on the screen. These include the two Willard Mack plays, "Gang War" and "Paid Off"; the Marcin-Shipman play, "Trapped"; "Big Pond," in association with E. H. Knopf and W. Farnsworth, and "Congratulations," the Stanley Weyman operetta; "The Red Robe"; "Chopin," the operetta based on the life and music of the composer of that name; "A Good Fellow," a musical play from the French; the new Kalman operetta now running in Vienna, entitled "The Duchess of Chicago," and numerous others that have not yet been announced for stage production. "My Maryland," "Countess Maritza," "Lovely Lady," and "The Silent House" are also included.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

ANOTHER feverish week of sound picture activity . . . and talk. . . . How these talking pictures make film fo'k talk! . . . . But, then, the industry was never great for silence, anyway, in its own ranks. . . . Conversation has been one of the chief products of the business. . . . It's time now to cut out a lot of the talk and get down to business. . . . What do you say? . . . Paramount steps out with the announcement of a big radio station in Los Angeles. . . . One of the most powerful in the country. . . . A progressive move. . . . Quoting Jesse Lasky: "Motion pictures and radio are the two greatest forces in the world today. The future of the two arts is as limitless as the sea. Paramount is not entering the broadcast field in the customary sense of the term, but it does intend to use the radio as a medium through which exhibitors and the public can gain a first-hand impression of the work accomplished in the film capital" . . . A significant statement. . . . We wonder whether this move will have any possible connection with television some time in the future? . . . Anyway, Paramount is now in the three big allied fields: the motion picture, sound, and radio . . . .

* * * *

M-G-M introduced "White Shadows in the South Seas" to Broadway this week. . . . Unusual is the term for this picture. . . . Marvelously beautiful backgrounds. . . . A story that carries along nicely. . . . Sound effects that enhance. . . . But the film will be fine without them. . . Looks to us like box-office, with or without sound. . . . An opinion backed up by the remarks of a critical exhibitor who sat near us. . . . "That's box-office," he said. . . Soon Broadway will be dotted with sound pictures. . . . Then the race for real quality will start. . . . On this Broadway and all the Broadways. . . . Let's hope Hollywood will get that idea firmly in its head. . . . In this machine age, the life of novelty is not so long. . . . Little old public becomes more and more sophisticated every day. . . . Another thing we hope the industry will have the good sense to do . . . or not do . . . and that is, don't give away to the public all the tricks of sound pictures. . . . It's a great mistake to destroy illusion. . . . The show business is illusion. . . . Why throw away its biggest asset? . . . There has been too much of this sort of thing with silent pictures. . . . Did you ever stop to figure that maybe the giving away of production secrets had a lot to do with the decline of public interest in the "silents"? . . . But, getting back to news developments . . . Legitimate producers are about ready to break with their plans for "sounding" plays . . . and shooting them out into legit. houses at admission prices of 50c and $1. . . . How far-reaching this development may be, nobody can tell. . . . Of course, it would seem that these attractions will go to the regular picture houses after the key runs. . . . So there will be plenty of talkies. . . . And the legit. people will furnish some new angles. . . . So, no doubt, will Actors Equity. . . . On the question as to whether stage people can work at will in the talkies. . . . And, if so, for how much. . . . Oh, yes, the talkie thing is a real revolution. . . . It hits the whole amusement business. . . .

* * * *

Much ado about nothing. . . . A while back, there was considerable fuss over an alleged big deal about to be concluded between Ufa and the Italian Luce concern. . . . In some of the European papers this was called a corner stone of the huge European film fortress pointing solely at America. . . . Our Berlin correspondent tells us this week that the deal was never ratified and very likely will fall through. . . . Ufa, anyhow, has made an official statement that there are no anti-American tendencies in the management of the company. . . . So that's that. . . . Coming a little nearer home. . . . Louis Goldstein, M-G-M manager in Cuba, arrived in town the other day with some interesting news from Havana and thereabouts . . . first and foremost being the fact that Mrs. Goldstein presented him with a nine pound boy on Saturday, July 28. . . . But that is not the only increase in and around Havana. . . . In spite of the fact that the sugar business is not at all good at the present time, Mr. Goldstein's exchange supplies product to 48 out of a total of 51 theatres in Havana. . . . The way Goldstein does this is that he does much more than secure a contract. . . . Has been in the business 16 years, knows a theatreman's troubles and doesn't mind lending a hand . . . can take tickets when a jam occurs, run a projection machine and put out fires when the occasion comes up and personally sees that pictures receive the proper amount of exploitation. . . . Only one theatre with a modern refrigerating plant in Havana and this house is doing a fine trade. . . . More of them to come, however, and also the possibility of Saenger building a new theatre there. . . . This big circuit already has a paying venture in central Cuba. . . . Many obstacles for exhibitors to overcome in Latin communities . . . boys cannot take the girls to movies unless they take the whole family as a chaperon and with the sugar business in such bad shape both the boys and the exhibitors are getting a tough break . . . imagine that condition in New York and other cities. . . .

Kodacolor Not Yet Ready for Professional Market

Must Be Perfected, Says Eastman; Process Hailed as Portent of Simultaneous Action, Sound and Color

KODACOLOR, George L. Eastman's new color process, while ready for the amateur market, to which it is a boon, must first be perfected in several ways before it will be ripe for professional use, the inventor stated at a demonstration of his new process held at Rochester, New York, this week. The new process stirred enthusiastic commendation from the guests attending the demonstration and the papers reporting it. James G. Harbord, head of the Radio Corporation of America, hailed it as the foremost achievement in photography since the inception of the motion picture.

Difficulties in taking colored copies from the original film will have to be overcome before the process will be available to the trade at large, intimated the inventor. The new color film, he said, while holding out possibilities, will not be perfected for some time. The same may be said with regard to the Eastman speaking film, he added.

The Kodacolor process is based on a three-color light filter, a new film and minute cylindrical lenses. Thomas Edison has called it " a very simple process, a simple solution of what was thought to be a complex problem." The process itself consists of invisible cylindrical lenses, each 1/559 of an inch in width and running lengthwise on the film, embossed on the side of the new film opposite the sensitive coating. The rays of light are separated by these cylindrical lenses, the rays passing through the three segments of the light filter to the camera. The three segments—red, green and blue—admit into the camera only the rays of their own color, the different rays registering on the film as black and white. Although the rays register in black and white, the lenses so distribute the rays that the different colors register on the emulsion as a black and white impression for each color at this point. The three-color light filter is provided for the projector and the light from the machine penetrates the cylindrical lenses on the film and is directed through the filter. It is claimed that the combination of the three colors gives every possible hue.

James G. Harbord sees in Kodacolor a possible influence on the future of television. "If we have television with color photography," he declares, "it will make as much difference over ordinary television as the difference between color photography and ordinary black and white pictures. This should be its greatest affiliation with radio."

The interest shown by amatenrs and the general public in color photography shows that color television will eventually be demanded by people, considers Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, a pioneer experimenter in television. He says both television and color photography must be perfected and then joined.

The demontsration occurred at Mr. Eastman's home in Rochester. Witnesses of the event were: Thomas A. Edison, Michael I. Pupin, Dr. G. K. Burgess, director of the U. S. Bureau of Standards; Hiram Percy Maxim, inventor, and president of the Amateur Cinema League; Frederick E. Ives, pioneer experimenter in color photography; E. W. F. Alexanderson; D. W. D. Coolidge, of the General Electric research laboratories; Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of directors of General Electric; General John J. Pershing, Columbia University physicists.

Suit for $58,500 Brought Against Midwesco

Thomas Saxe, John Saxe, and Oscar Brachman, formerly associated with the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, started three suits in circuit court in Milwaukee on Friday of last week to enforce payment of a total of $58,500 against Midwesco Theatres, Inc. Each of the complainants is suing for $19,500, claiming that in November, 1927, Midwesco agreed to buy 195 shares of stock in the Capitol Investment Co., Madison, at $100 a share, from each of the complainants. The suits charge that the payments have not been made. The Capitol Investment Co. controls the Capitol Theatre in Madison.

Ask Government to Revoke Decision

Following the report that the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors had rejected "Dawn" for public showing in the 400 theatres of Ontario, 22 branches of the Canadian Legion in Ontario passed resolutions calling upon the Government to change this decision. Canadian Education Films, Limited, Toronto, holding the Canadian distributing rights, has appealed for consideration of the case, it is said. So far "Dawn" has been approved in Manitoba but has been rejected by Saskatchewan's censor.

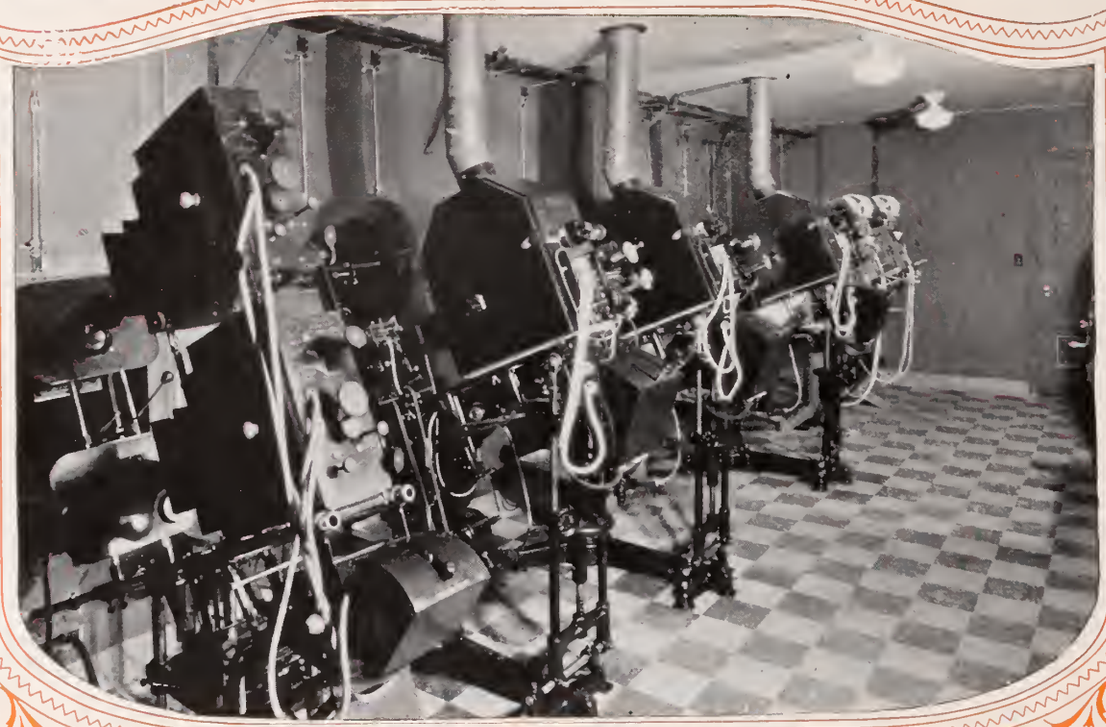
Atmospheric Theatre In The South



One of the most recently completed and one of the most typical of the atmospheric theatres is Loew's, in Richmond, Va. This colorful playhouse, seating 2500 persons and occupying a site on the corner of 6th and Grace Streets, is in the heart of the city. It follows faithfully the details of the Mexican-Spanish type of architecture which its designer has adapted to the modern principles of theatre planning.

Projection Room in Loew's State Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.

In the projection room are two Brenkert Spot lamps, three Simplex projectors with Hall & Connolly High Intensity lamps and one Brenkert Stereopticon and Effect Machine.

You'll agree that this is a fine installation in a fine projection room.

All of these machines are equipped with Rockbestos Motion Picture Cable.

Inferior cable would be out of place on this high grade equipment.

Of course Rockbestos costs more, but it is worth more. It has appearance, will not deteriorate, and is built right.

Replacements are fewer, therefore, in the long run it is cheaper.

Think this over and when you need cable ask for Rockbestos—the extra flexible.

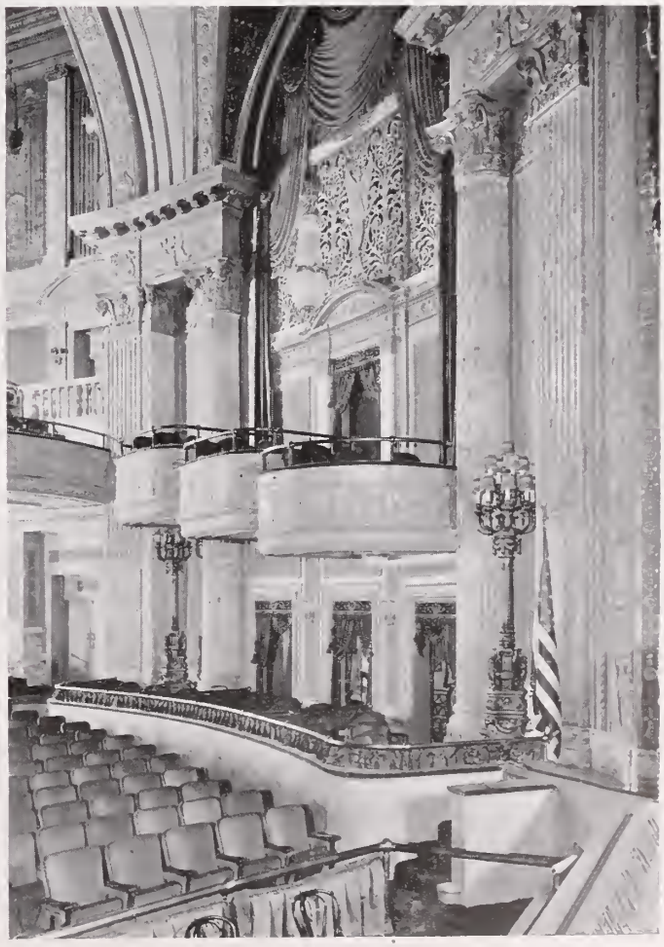
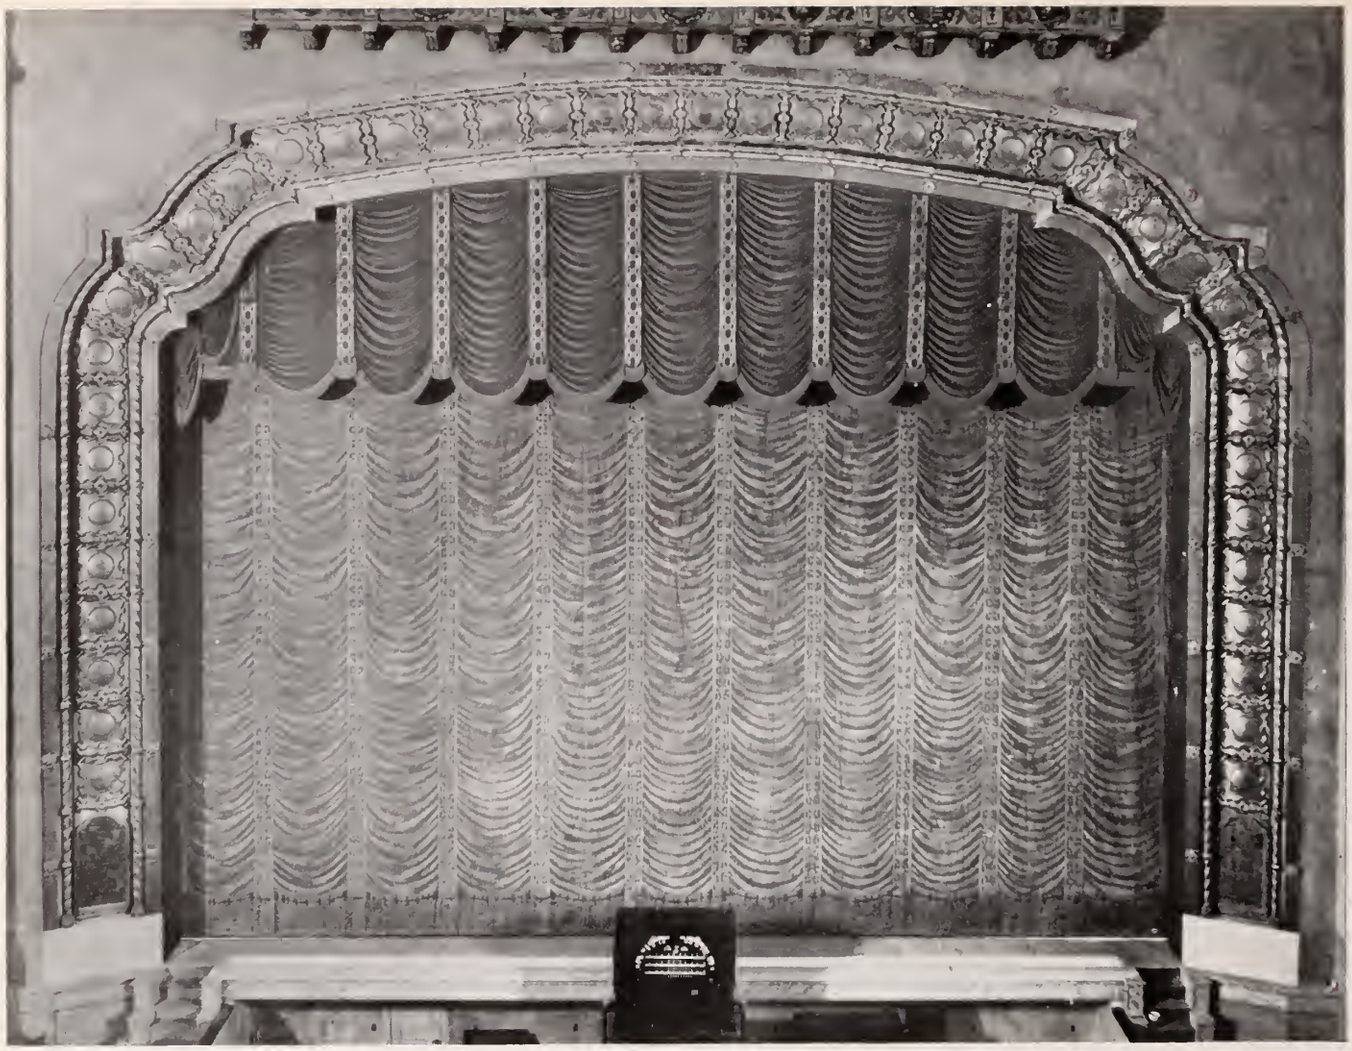
The house is equipped with modern ventilating and air cooling system, and it is now being wired for sound picture presentations.



INTERIOR DESIGN OF EARLE THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA, STRIKING FOR ITS DIGNITY



PLAYHOUSE DEVOTED TO VAUDEVILLE AND FILMS AND OPERATED BY THE STANLEY COMPANY OF AMERICA REPRESENTS A DIGNIFIED INTERPRETATION OF THE GEORGIAN STYLE IN A STRUCTURE PLANNED TO ACCORD WITH MODERN ARCHITECTURAL PRACTICE IN THEATRE DESIGN

The Earle Theatre has a seating capacity of 3,000, and for impressive appearance and the comfort afforded the patrons of vaudeville and pictures is one of the finest modern examples of design, decoration and equipment. Shown at the left is a portion of the meazzanine promenade, a broad, sweeping corridor with a well opening into the inner lobby and luxuriously furnished. EL CAPITAN IS LARGEST THEATRE IN SAN FRANCISCO

3100 Seating Capacity of New Playhouse Executed in Spanish Style

THE El Capitan theatre, situated on the east side of Mission street between nineteenth and twentieth streets, San Francisco, is the largest in that city, having a seating capacity of 3,100 persons. The theatre had its formal opening June 29th.

The theatre was built by Ackerman, Harris and Oppen at a cost said to be $1,500,000. The exterior, executed in terra cotta, features the Spanish style of architecture, this same note being carried out in the interior decoration and desgin.

The dominating idea upon which the plan of El Capitan was drawn was that of large size and great capacity, but at the same time an effort—visably successful particularly in the auditorium—was that of achieving an atmosphere of intimacy.

Entering from Mission street through the vast entrance vestibule, which is more than 40 feet wide, with its quarry tile floor in a medley of color to harmonize with blues, reds, and gold, ornamental walls and ceilings. Passing thence through a similar lobby to the grand promenade foyer which is 100 feet long, 20 feet wide, and 35 feet high. From this foyer is an entrance from Capp street to accommodate the patrons using the parking space at the rear of the theatre.

This promenade foyer encircling the auditorium is flanked at each end mezzanine foyer, which is in the nature of a loggia overlooking the promenade. Off these foyers there are ladies' retiring rooms and men's smoking rooms, telephone booths, offices and rooms for usherettes.

From the spacious promenade foyer one enters the auditorium through Spanish doors to behold the beauty of the richly decorated old Spanish beamed ceiling, directly under which runs a cloister. Behind this treatment is a midnight sky revealing gold stars.

The orchestra pit, one of the largest of any theatre in the West, accommodates as many as 60 musicians. One of its features is the electrically-operated organ console lift.

The stage has a proscenium opening 50 feet wide and a depth of 35 feet. There are more than a dozen dressing rooms back stage with shower baths and all other conveniences of the modern stage.

One of the unusual features of this theatre is the specially-designed lighting fixtures. The usual method of lighting—that of candles—is used in lobbies, grand foyer and stairways. The mezzanine foyer is lighted by standards. The auditorium ceiling fixtures are of star-like shape which works unusually well with the general architectural scheme. The fixtures were designed and manufactured under the supervision of the architect, always keeping in mind the architect's general scheme of decoration of the building.

The fixtures throughout the building are finished to represent old rusty iron with the details brought out in a soft Spanish gold.

DESIGN UTILIZES ALL AVAILABLE SPACE FOR SEATS

AN interesting example of a theatre designed to realize the maximum seating capacity for the space it occupies is the Stahl theatre in Homestead, Pa. This strictly modern playhouse, the standard bearer in Homestead of an organization which operates other theatres in that town, provides seating facilities for 1,800 people and is built on a plot approximately 140 feet long by 110 feet deep.

The construction is orchestra, mezzanine balcony and balcony. There is a standard regulation stage for vaudeville and road show presentations, but the theatre is devoted mainly to motion picture shows.

The mezzanine balcony is a feature of the house and the highest priced seats are located there. The balcony is a necessity and offers the lower priced seats.

The style of architecture is of no particular period, but is the product of the office of Victor A. Rigaumont, specializing in the design of theatres.

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from June 15th to July 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the three months' period from June 15th to July 15th. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the better theatres in these cities during the period covered. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in Motion Picture News, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

THIS thirty-day report as well as our preceding one indicates that a change is taking place in the theatre building field. This change is a tendency toward the smaller house requiring a lesser investment. For example, during the period of June 15th to July 15th, 43 new theatre projects were announced, only four of which are to cost from $500,000 to $1,000,000 and only one over a million. All together these 43 projects will require an investment of $9,065,000 and will seat 49,250. These figures give approximate averages of $220,000 per theatre with 1,150 seats and $192.00 the cost per seat.

Comparing these figures with the average for all theatres built during 1927 shows a material decrease in the cost per house as well as a moderate reduction in the average seating capacity. However, theatres, as far as numbers go, are maintaining a pace equal to the 1927 schedule.

Whether or not the tendency of building smaller theatres at less cost has been inaugurated to extend over a considerable period is beyond accurate estimation though the building of the smaller house was anticipated in our report published the first of this year wherein we predicted that the number of theatres built during 1928 would be as great as in 1927 though the size of the average theatre would be reduced.

It is only fair to note, however, that an average investment of $220,000 for 1,150 seat house is indicative of fine theatres even though these figures are less than the averages for 1927.

In this thirty-day report, the North Atlantic states again lead with the heaviest building program. In this district 11 new theatres, 3 of which will cost over $500,000, call for an investment of $3,535,000 and will total a seating capacity of 14,000. The averages for this district show $285,000 per theatre, 1,273 seats and $224.00 as the cost per seat.

Next in line is the West Coast where a program of 8 theatres is called for, seating 7,600 and representing the total investment of $2,500,000. One theatre on the West Coast is scheduled to cost over $1,000,000. Averages for the West Coast states are as follows: $312.00 per theatre with 950 seats and a cost per seat of $329.00.

TWO groups of states, the Middle and Southwestern, have a building program each of approximately $1,500,000. In the Middle States, $1,740,000 will go to build 12 houses seating 13,900. The averages for this group of building are $145,000 per theatre with 1,160 seats, and $125.00 per seat. The Southwestern, $1,485,000 will build 8 new theatres seating 8,700. The averages for these theatres are $185.00 per house with seating capacity of 1,090 and $170.00 per seat.

In the Southeastern district, 2 new theatres of 1,200 seats each are scheduled to be built. These two theatres together will cost $265,000.

Only one theatre has been projected for the Western States, which will cost $65,000 and seat 950.

New England failed to report any new building while Canada reports one theatre to cost $275,000 and seat 1,700.

In regard to the leadership of individual states in theatre building, the same group which has been prominent in our past reports again takes the leadership in this survey. Pennsylvania, with six theatres, ranks first, where $2,500,000 will go to build 9,100 seats. California is second and will invest $2,475,000 in seven theatres seating 7,300. Building for Illinois calls for four houses which will seat 5,700 and cost $775,000, while, Texas with three new theatres, will invest $635,000 for 2,900 seats. New York reports a lack of big theatre projects, as four theatres will cost only $575,000 and seat 4,400. Ohio also reports four new theatres projected which will cost $450,000 and seat 4,700.

The sale of equipment exclusive of sound apparatus has been satisfactory for the period June 15th to July 15th. However, the sound picture has proved a disturbing element in the sale of some types of equipment, as many exhibitors, through lack of a definite understanding of the sound picture situation show a hesitacy in placing orders for equipment which runs into considerable sums for fear of being found unprepared financially for purchasing sound equipment installations. However, this situation is rapidly clearing up and those equipment lines which were affected by the first announcement of sound pictures are now gaining momentum through orders now being placed by theatre owners. It appears that the theatre industry will be called upon to assimilate the cost of sound picture installations gradually as deliveries on this type of equipment will necessarily be relatively slow for the next year or two as companies manufacturing this equipment are not geared up at present on a big production basis.

HEAT and humidity spelled out doom in red letters for a number of theatres in the key cities during the June 15 to July 15 period. Most cities had the kind of weather that could not be beaten, and the results speak for themselves on the attendance averages map on the preceeding page.

That most of the theatre men were hapless but many of them not helpless during the heat wave develops from the fact that all of them whose houses are equipped with cooling systems were not so badly hurt as those without such apparatus, and that those who drew for their bookings pictures of outstanding appeal attracted sufficient patronage to more than cover expenses.

Another factor which clamors for mention at the outset of this report is the performance at the box offices of talking pictures. The talkies did all the sensational things that turned up in our reports for this period. But the picture industry cannot count too heavily on the talkers now or for some time to come—a point which is being overlooked in the more enthusiastic sections of the cheering stands for the talkies—for the reason that the good silent picture grosses more money and goes further to keep the industry going than the most sensational sound feature. This is natural enough, since now there are only a relatively few theatres equipped to show sound pictures. Thus, the picture which heads this month's list of "ten best" at the key city houses, is 100 per cent silent. This is "The Cossacks," which turned in high figures at a large number of the key city first runs during the June 15 to July 15 period. This it did in towns where competing houses had sound pictures and also in houses that are wired. "The Cossacks" perhaps did not do any more record business per house than some of the dialogue pictures, but it played more houses, and that is what counts in the final gross.

The following notes culled from the record tell some of the story of the triumph of talking pictures during the period we are covering in the report. "Tenderloin" at the Garden, Milwaukee, only attraction in town to get real business, week of June 24. . . . "Lion and the Mouse" big at Metropolitan, Boston, during week that was generally bad, week of June 24. . . . "Lion and the Mouse" close to house record at Blue Mouse, Portland, opening day. . . . "Lion and the Mouse" at Mark Strand, Albany, did capacity though the mercury was around the 90 degree mark most of week. . . . "Tenderloin" at Troy Theatre, Troy, proved one of best money-getters of recent months, passing highest figures for house during hot-weather months. . . . "Street Angel" sets new record for McVickers, Chicago. . . . "Lion and the Mouse" at Victory, Salt Lake City, does record business and is held over for second week. . . . Tudor, New Orleans, opens with "Glorious Betsy" and does capacity. . . . "Tenderloin" did big business at Stillman, Cleveland, though other houses in town were off during the week. . . . Strand, New York City, has good week with talkie bill, though Paramount and Roxy were off, week of June 23.

THAT is not the complete record, but it is sufficient to prove that talking pictures stole the box office show during the period covered by the current report.

The map shows New York at Under Average, the result of adverse weather conditions and a somewhat mediocre run of films. Broadway picked up two weeks ago—thanks to a break in the weather and some films that attracted the fans—but that is something to show in the next report. Chicago, on the other hand came back to an average rating. The other Under Average cities, besides New York, are Milwaukee—blame the heat and weak attractions; Cincinnati, where the heat was excessive; Central Pennsylvania, summer complaints caused slump; Kansas City—two quite poor weeks, the thermometer touching 100 at one time, offset two pretty fair weeks; and Baltimore, where the summer weather was too much for the majority of the theatres, though here and there during the period there were some pretty good figures registered at box offices.

The "ten best" of the period, as related previously, is headed by "The Cossacks," which scored well in practically every showing it had at the key cities during this period. Second in line is "The Lion and the Mouse," with "Ladies of the Mob" next, and the following rating in the order of their appearance: "Telling the World," "Happiness Ahead," "Tenderloin," "The Racket," "The Actress," "?The Actress?" Glorious Betsy."

General business continues at a fairly even level, maintaining about the same pace of activity in some lines and more or less sluggishness in others that prevailed previous to and during the tidal wave of speculation which struck Wall Street and which washed out again after its crashing impact against the cost of money, which the bankers made grow to such heights that there was no denying it. Corporation reports for the second quarter or the first half year show both advances and recessions, but on the whole indicate a greater number of advances over similar periods for the previour year.

This same condition obtains in the theatre business. Those houses which have been showing good returns continue on the uptrend, while theatres which have been slipping are still enjoying only spotty business.

In Pittsburgh the general condition has greatly improved, due to the fact that five houses have gone dark for the summer season.

Another local event worthy of note is the sudden return to popular favor of the 5th Avenue theatre in Seattle. This house with some pretty good films and the West Coast "Idea" shows, has come back with a bang, outdrawing consistently for the past few weeks the newer Seattle, the Publix presentation house in Seattle, which, of course, means feature pictures and the Publix unit shows. Only last Spring the Seattle opened with a flourish and to such crowds that for several weeks the other houses in the town did a very limited business.

Know Your Public—First Rule and Last Word in Successful Showmanship

Profits Measure Management's Ability to Give Patrons Shows They Like

An Interview With

GEORGE B. ODLUM

WHILE theatre management with each new development in entertainment forms and architectural and mechanical advancements becomes increasingly complex, the very A. B. C.'s of showmanship, "know your public," remains today the rock upon which successful theatre operation is built, according to George B. Odlum, a showman with twenty-two years' experience as an owner-operator, stock and motion picture theatres.

"After all is said and done, red-fire exploitation, sumptuous structures in which to entertain the public, novelty, etc., and so-forth, the thing that makes a theatre successful is its ability to give its patrons the kind of entertainment they like best, and you cannot do that unless you know what they like and find the way to get it to them, whether you are an owner-manager or a manager of an independent or circuit theatre," Odlum continued in the course of an interview with a representative of this publication during a recent visit to New York.

Mr. Odlum is known to readers of this publication through contributions to the Theatre Management department, which was forerunner of The Showman as one of the features of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. He visited New York recently after closing for renovations during the summer months the Colonial Theatre, in Akron, Ohio, operated by Feiber and Shea, and is now engaged in promotional work in connection with private interests at summer resorts.

"I'll anticipate your question," he went on, "as to how the theatre manager can best establish contacts which will keep him informed as to his patron's preferences—which in important as well as minor details are undergoing constant change—by saying that from my experience and observation each man according to his individual method of doing things must work out his own system. For my part, I can't tell you in exact and minute detail the plan which I carry out to keep informed on the tastes of patrons of a particular theatre I am operating.

"There are many ways, but in the last analysis it is simply a matter of developing your observation to a point where the reactions of a mass of people are sensed as it were by a 'sixth sense.' I spend a great deal of time in my theatre and much time with my audience. If I find it difficult to obtain a definite idea of the patron's reaction to a certain show by standing in the back and listening and watching, I take a seat somewhere in the auditorium and listen and watch. Sometimes if I am doubtful I join the crowd at the 'break' and walk up the aisle and out the theatre as one of the departing audience for it is at this time of departure that people comment on the show.

"Occasionally a manager can establish acquaintances with regular patrons who will give an honest expression of opinion when it is solicited. But I have found these cases rare rather than common. Soliciting the opinions of departing patrons, with whom the manager is not on terms of real solid acquaintance or friendship, is the finest way, I have found, to become misinformed. Such solicitations as 'how did you enjoy the show?' addressed to casual acquaintances generally bring the reply 'very well indeed,' or 'fine,' or some other rather complimentary expression. People for the most part will not say or do anything to offend a friendly gesture like a courteously addressed question by the manager. They will spare his feelings—which is nice and which speaks volumes in praise of the good manners of the American theatregoers, but which goes to prove nothing so far as is concerned the manager who is anxious to obtain an accurate estimate of his show from his patron's standpoint.

"The ability to correctly 'size up' a town or location is highly developed in those managers who have established reputations as 'theatre doctors,' who successfully administer to the ills of an ailing theatre. Starting the theatre 'in the valley' on the upward trail that leads to profits really begins at this point of gauging the town or location and spotting into the bill the kind of entertainment its potential patrons like best.

IN cases where I am doubtful about the appeal of a particular type of show I sometimes make it a point to send people who represent different notions. I have frequently called upon members of my family to help me in this. My mother is something of a standby in these emergencies. She, I know, will give me a frank opinion and it will represent the old-fashioned idea about things. But regardless of the effort involved to obtain all the information possible regarding patrons preferences, I have always found that the result more than compensated for the time and work and invention put into the enterprise.

"Some of the theatre operators employ an usher report system, supplying attendants with blanks upon which to write out comments picked up from the audience. Others occasionally try the written form for patrons, upon which there is printed a request that the patrons note their comments, criticisms or complaints. The former is, to my mind, better than the latter method, while the manager's own investigation is superior to both. The remarks reported by ushers supply the right kind of information, the expressions are made to companions and are unhampered by conscious effort to register praise or criticism. But when you ask a patron to write out his comments he then becomes a critic, weighing his words and his judgments rather than merely expressing his feelings. Besides there are only certain types of people who can be persuaded to comment in this way—they are the letter writers whose opinions you see printed in the papers, usually signed 'old reader.'

TO get the real mass opinion the manager must take all the comment he can pick up while sitting in with the audience or walking out the aisles with crowds at the end of a show and add to it all he can pick up by observation as to their reactions while the show is on.

"The ability to properly gauge these reactions and to make the show conform to local preferences is perhaps the greatest weapon which the individual theatre operator has to command in his competition with powerful circuit theatres—where rules, inflexible and necessary to the conduct of a large enterprise embracing many theatres in many towns, hamper the manager and often cause him to go on giving the public what they do not like.

"There is, however, always a way to tighten up the show along lines that appeal to the potential patronage of any theatre. This may be done by the kind of music presented, the method of presenting it, and the 'personality' with which the manager imbues a house.

"The theatre reflects the personality of the manager in a hundred little ways, but in a big way by the attitude of the theatre attendants and workers. An aloof attitude at the top soon trickles down and reaches the patron through the manner of the cashier, doorman and ushers. I had an experience not long since which proved this again to me. Visiting a town where a large circuit

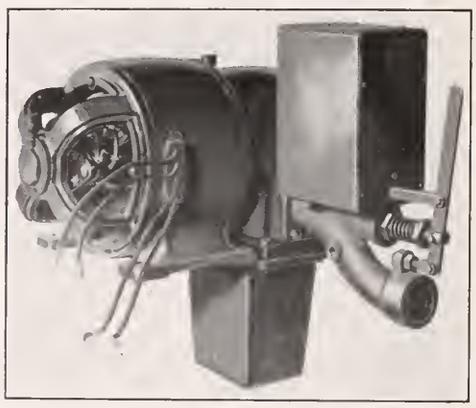
Curtain Control Designed for Synchronized Shows

THE increasing popularity of sound pictures and the importance with which this type of entertainment is considered as a factor in the near future is being reflected in inventive activities connected with all mechanical features of the theatre. Among the most recent introductions of a device especially designed for use in connection with sound picture presentations is the synchronized curtain control recently announced by the Vallen Electrical Company, Akro, Ohio.



The basic idea worked out in this new stage feature is the fact that the stage curtain equipped with the control may be started, stopped or reversed instantly from the projection booth by merely pressing a button, and the fact that the operator at all times has before him an indicator which shows the exact position of the curtain on the stage.

In a statement announcing the Syncontrol, the name given this new device, E. J. Vallen, head of the company manufacturing the apparatus and the designer of it, explains as follows the principles governing the invention and the method of operating it:

"The adoption of talking pictures brings presentation very near to the legitimate stage, which long has looked to the curtain for the creation of proper atmosphere. The majority of synchronized pictures are more or less dark and the distance from screen to booth is such that the projectionist, with his responsibilities, may easily misjudge the position of the curtains—resulting in mishap. The Syncontrol is so timed as to permit synchronization of sound, scene, and curtain. Further, the projectionist in his booth, by means of red and green indicators, knows the exact movement or position of the curtains on the stage.

The hydro-electric motor designed for use in theatre emergency lighting systems is shown above

The Syncontrol permits instant starting, stopping, or reversing of the curtains, in keeping with the requirements of any synchronized picture—all by pressing one button. The indicators function automatically and change the instant the button is pressed; that is, when one presses the button to start, stop, or reverse the curtains, the indicators automatically operate in their respective relation to the position of the curtains.

The wiring for the Syncontrol consists simply of four wires from Syncontrol, located on stage, to control station in the booth. As many of these control stations as desired may be placed in the circuit.

Hydro-Electric Emergency Lighting Unit

A NEW equipment recently offered to the theatre field and one which appears to embody features which assure it of wide application is the Hydro-Electric Emergency Lighting Unit which is distributed by the Ensten-Hydro-Electric Co., Inc., of New York City. This unit which is shown in the accompanying illustration is a combination water turbine and electric generator. It is so constructed that it can conveniently be connected to the water supply system of a theatre from whence it derives its power for operation.

This hydro-electric emergency lighting unit is manufactured in various capacities depending on the work which it will be called upon to do in case of trouble with the regular power supply. Installations are installed which will carry the regular house lighting load and also operate the projection machines.

An advantage claimed for this unit is its ability to develop an emergency lighting supply on the same voltage as the regular power supply furnished a theatre. In this way the system does away

This is the first installment of an article by a theatre architect who has made a special study of amplified sound distribution and who after intensive investigation concerning the problems involved offers some interesting and advanced ideas which may provide a practical approach to new requirements in theatre design which will appear with the newer developments in sound motion pictures. The concluding installment will appear in an early issue of The Showman.

The Relation of Sound Motion Pictures To Theatre Architecture

Numerous "Sound Stations" May Be Ultimate Solution of New Problem Facing Designers in the Near Future

By VICTOR A. RIGAUMONT, A.I.A.

THIRTY-TWO years ago, I heard the first synchronized sound picture at the Galleries Dufayel in Paris.

It was in 1896 that I had the opportunity of seeing not only the first cinematograph but also hearing the earliest forerunner of today's furore of the film world.

This flicker picture, one of Edison's first, lacked the polish of today's production, but today's sound and talking effects lack the human element which the actors back stage—behind the screen—did give this initial attempt at presenting entertainment for both the eye and ear.

Today's sound reproductions will bear the same chance for refinement as did the picture of the past, and until this is accomplished, the silent drama will be favored after this grand rush into the "talkies" has resumed normalcy.

We all know that sound pictures are nothing new. The Gaumont Palace in Paris, in 1914, very successfully broadcast sound synchronized with a comedy picture of happenings in a dentist's office. It was extremely entertaining. This theatre was at that time the largest movie house in the world—seating close to 5,000 persons—and the sound reception compared favorably with reception today, although the latest products do have considerable advantage due to modern knowledge of radio and photograph.

The truth is that the problem still remains the same—that of imparting the human element into the mechanical contraption. Silent moving pictures distinctly were attaining this goal, because in addition to fine photography, acting and direction, there was always the incentive of the audience to think for themselves and to use their imaginations, which made them a living part of the play before them on the screen. Moving pictures have done a great deal toward teaching people to think, and have broadened them in many channels heretofore unknown to them. (Crime pictures excepted.)

Therefore, for many years, the older and younger generations have learned to look and think and not listen. In fact, noises were and still are annoying when one is thinking. Now, all of a sudden, an old and wonderful invention is reborn, with many improvements and much advertising, and now we will listen to many pictures.

"The Present Method of Placing Four Large Horns Behind the Screen Leaves a Problem of Reaching the Rear Seats Under the Balcony on the Main Floor. The Answer Is Sound Distribution by Means of Many Stations," Says Mr. Rigaumont.

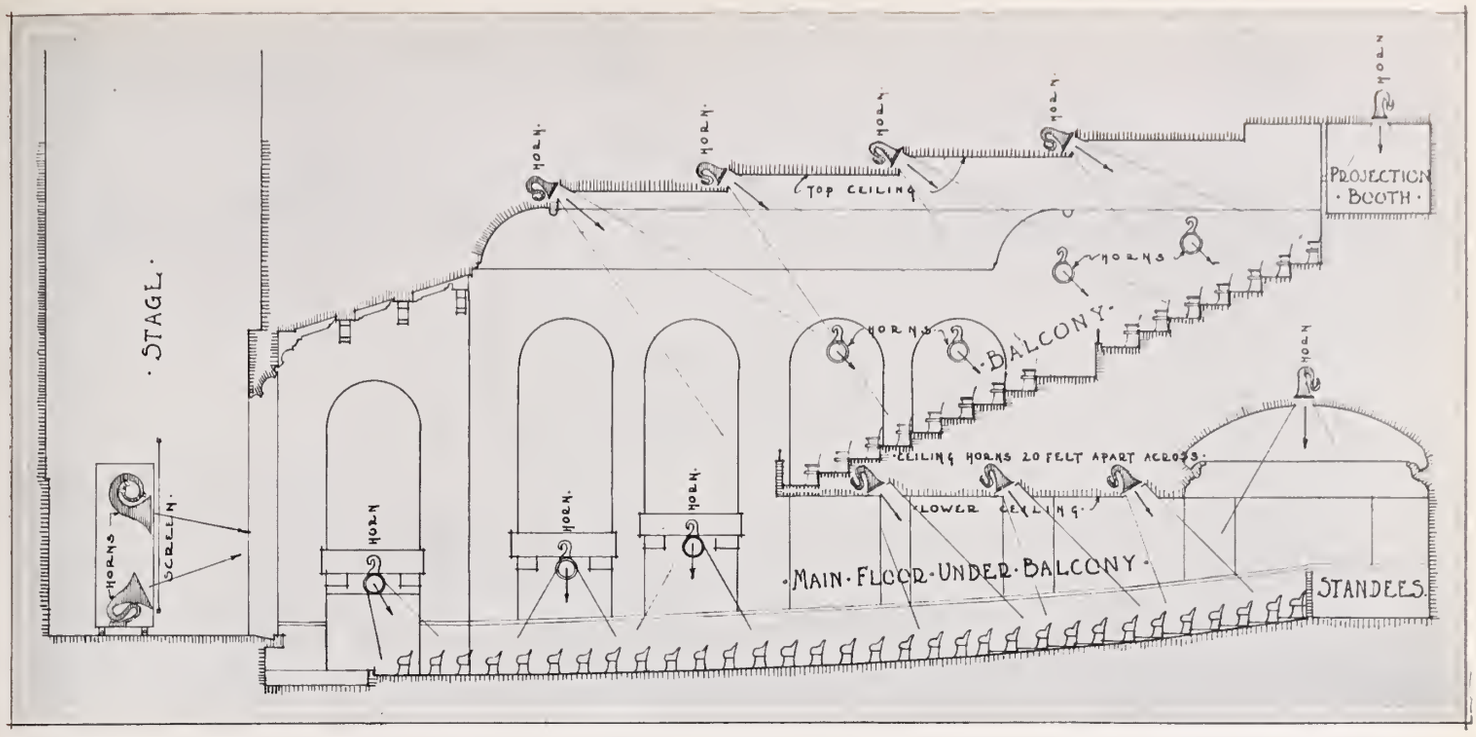
The most important improvement that is desirable to the average listener is a sound deadener, a silencer or tone modulator. Just now the public must patiently sit before the broadcasters and have their ears blown in or out, as the case may be, if they happen to be down in the front rows. This is now the case in many installations of sound projectors where, in order to reach the back rows, the volume is stepped-up, accompanied with the usual needle scratches of the record, and other raucous noises very similar to the well-known phonograph horn of the late '90's.



Sound distribution is very similar to air distribution in a theatre. In ventilation, concentration of forced air must be avoided because of noise and drafts. Therefore, diffusion must take place and to this effect the auditorium walls and ceiling are used to spray new air—equally distributed—above the audience, which if scientifically done will be beneficial without distracting attention or causing discomfit.

The same principle applies to the loud sound or noise effects of today's vintage. It is my opinion that synchronized speech must be distributed from many points throughout the auditoriums and stage—each station being modulated to an ordinary conversational tone, not too loud. The stations being numerous enough to accomplish this and being so directed that the flow of tone should face the listeners whenever possible, so as to prevent any effect of ventriloquism and still preserve that desirable idea that the voice is coming from the direction of the stage.

THE present method of placing, behind the screen, four large horns which are sometimes of two intensities—loud to reach the balcony, not so loud to reach the main floor because of the front seats, leaves a problem of reaching the rear expensive seats on the main floor under the balcony, which are far removed from the stage.

The answer is sound distribution by means of many stations.

In rebuttal, the engineers claim that they do not want to distract attention

SUGGESTED PLAN FOR SOUND STATIONS

The Plan Illustrated Above Was Made by Mr. Rigaumont to Show the Method He Proposes as Best Adapted to the Proper Distribution of Amplified Sound in Motion Picture Theatres. All Horns Are Concealed Behind Plaster Grilles from the screen. Therefore, they place the horns for sound emissions on the stage, behind the screen, and thus create the impression that the voice comes from the stage from whence spoken plays have always originated. True enough and fair enough, but my point of contention is that silent moving pictures are so ingrained in the mind and temperament of all peoples and the acting is so fine that the picture and its acting are of main interest and what is spoken is merely secondary. We must not forget that sight and thought travel faster than sound. Therefore, sound should be deadened and reduced in volume to a spoken tone so as not to become obnoxious in trying to crowd out the real attraction, which is the picture.

The rush for the installation of sound projection instruments will naturally result in many theatres not obtaining satisfactory results, although the companies doing the work endeavor to place their equipment in theatres having suitable accoustics. Nevertheless, the truth is that either the theatre must be designed for sound projection, or the equipment must be designed for the particular theatre.

There is no question of doubt as to the success of talking films. The public want them. They are interesting, will be well developed and quickly perfected. Many attractive avenues are open for fine plays, for a new type of actors and directors, and for the possibilities of bringing into smaller towns and communities all of the entertainment advantages enjoyed by the large cities.

The stage has a powerful rival, lacking only the human contact touch, which may be obtained somewhat through the use of colored film, as experiments develop completely satisfactory results in this direction.

The ladies of the ensemble, and the colored settings of the stage will always have their followers, although it may be safe to assume that talking colored moving pictures are going to push the legitimate actors up against the asbestos curtain. But handsome actors and beautiful actresses of the screen with fine diction and technique, together with Sarah Bernhardt voices will reap the harvest—providing that the loud speaker faithfully reproduces "I adore you" with softness of intonation and without barking.

We are on the threshold of great picture theatre prosperity and just how the principle of sound distribution will play its part in theatres of greater seating capacities than heretofore constructed will be discussed and illustrated with diagrams in the concluding installment of this article in the September SHOWMAN.

Soft Clothes Make Audience Absorbent of Sound

BECAUSE clothing worn today is soft, loose and porus, "an audience is almost totally absorbent of sound," according to R. V. Parsons, acoustical engineer for Johns-Manville in the Fox theatre now nearing completion in Detroit. "Carpets absorb as high as 25 per cent of sound, while plaster walls absorb less than 5 per cent," he continues.

"Determining mathematically the effects of porosity and flexibility in all the materials to be used in the interior finish and furnishings of the new theatre was necessary on the part of acoustical engineers in deciding just what treatment to give the walls and dome to insure good acoustics.

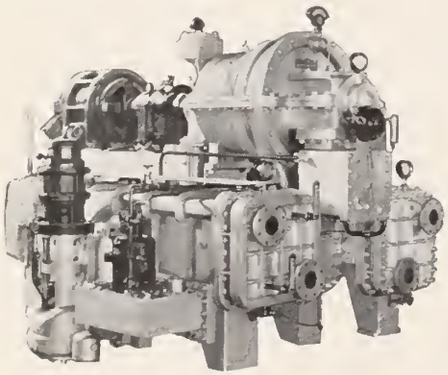
"If the interior finish in a theatre is too hard, highly reflective, and non-porous, sound will travel from wall to ceiling, ceiling to floor, floor to wall, etc., many times before the sound-energy is completely dissipated, and echoes result.

"Ventilating equipment must be designed before installation so that noise caused by fans and the rush of air through the grilles in coiling and walls, couldn't enter the theatre. The plan of having escalators instead of stairs and elemators was abandoned because of accoustical problems.

"Elaborate hangings also aid in perfecting the acoustics. Carpets used in the aisles, corridors, and foyers prevents noise from walking and shuffling feet.

"Most materials used in interior finishes absorb much more sound in the upper register than they do at the average pitch of speech and music; but since in music the overtones and partials provide quality and character to the fundamentals, it is desirable to use materials to absorb the same amount of sound over the entire scale of pitch so that orchestrations will be maintained in their original relationship."

Ironwood Theatre Called One of Northwest's Finest



AFTER almost a year of construction work, the Ironwood theatre, Ironwood, Mich., was formally opened last month by its operators, the Ironwood Amusement Company. This handsome playhouse, incorporating in its design the latest ideas in theatre architecture, is elaborately decorated and equipped. It has been called the "finest theatre in the Northwest."

What is Theatre Refrigeration?

Some Facts Concerning the Use of Refrigeration in connection with Air Conditioning Equipment

What is Theatre Refrigeration?

REFRIGERATION is an essential part of a complete air conditioning system as installed in the modern theatre today. It is important that the refrigeration unit or units should be installed and considered as an integral part of the entire air conditioning system, comparable in every respect with such essential units as the boiler, which is used to heat the theatre in the Winter and the fan, which is used to distribute air to the theatre at all seasons. The refrigeration machine is not used to make ice according to the popular conception. Its real purpose is to cool the water which is used during the hot, humid season for the purpose of washing, cooling and dehumidifying the air supplied to the theatre as it passes through the spray chamber.

This is the latest model Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration unit. Safe, simple, compact, automatic. The unit is complete as it stands. There are no external expansion or condensing coils or receivers.

CARRIER CENTRIFUGAL REFRIGERATION has met with remarkable success in the cooling and dehumidification of theatres and public buildings because it was designed primarily to meet the many peculiar requirements of air conditioning and as an integral part of the air conditioning system. The machine is completely automatic in its control, assuming and releasing its load according to every fluctuation in weather conditions and the size of the crowd. It is absolutely safe for installation in public buildings since it uses a harmless liquid refrigerant. It occupies less than ¼ of the space required for other refrigeration equipment of like capacity.

The Comfort Zone

THE prime use for your refrigeration unit in connection with the air conditioning system is to produce comfort for your patrons and not to shock them or chill them. The American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers has, through long research, laid down for us combinations for temperature, humidity and air movement which are conducive to the maximum state of comfort for the average person. On the basis of this, we recommend the following temperatures to be maintained in your theatre according to the variations in outdoor temperature:

Outside Temp.	Theatre Temp.
75°F.	73° F.
80°	74-5°
85°	76°
90°	77°
95°	78°
100° & above	79-80°

FOR all of the above conditions we recommend a relative humidity in your theatre ranging from 55% to 60%. A more elaborate table and recommendation for the maintenance of these conditions in your theatre will be sent for the use of your engineer upon request.

Refrigeration and Publicity

OBSERVATION in hundreds of air conditioned theatres throughout the country has taught us that unfavorable reactions result from operation at exceedingly low temperatures. We recommend that your engineers be instructed carefully on this point. We recommend that you do not emphasize refrigeration as such, but build your publicity on conditions of healthful comfort.

A RECORDING thermometer placed outside your theatre to show the indoor temperature at the breathing zone will prove an interesting and valuable means of publicity. But—tell the truth! Be sure that the sensitive bulb of your thermometer is situated to record accurately the temperature at the breathing zone and that it is properly calibrated. The public will find you out if you do not tell the truth and you will pay the penalty in lost patronage.

*Manufactured Weather

THE Carrier System for Air Conditioning provides the theatre with the means of creating and maintaining ideally comfortable and healthful conditions every day in the year regardless of outdoor weather, the season or the size of the crowd.

IF you have Manufactured Weather* tell your patrons about it in connection with your advertising. The beautifully executed bronze tablet shown in the accompanying illustration will be presented to the owner of any Carrier Conditioned Theatre upon request. This tablet displayed in the lobby or foyer will serve as a permanent announcement to your patrons that you have provided Manufactured Weather* for their health and comfort.

WE shall be pleased to have you ask for a visit from one of our engineers, also for the Book, "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning."

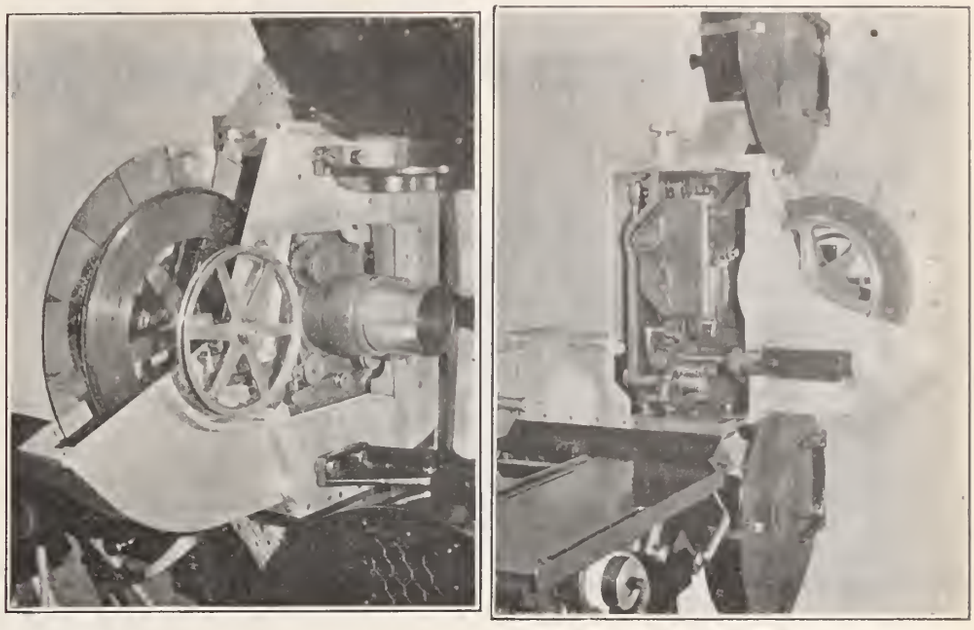
Demonstrate Continuous Type Projector

Discloses New Features of Design



THE writer had the opportunity of witnessing a demonstration of a projector that has been in the process of development for the past nine years. This machine, which is of the continuous projection type, has been developed by the Motion Picture Improvement Company of Boston. No arrangements have yet been made for marketing this machine, and even though the motion picture industry may not be offered the opportunity of purchasing this continuous projector, at least in the immediate future, yet some of the features which it incorporates are interesting and, therefore, deserve mention.

As in other continuous projectors which have been developed in the past, the transition from one picture to a succeeding picture on the film takes place without the use of a shutter, the film moving at a continuous and uniform rate of speed by the aperture. The dissolving action of one picture into another is obtained by the movement of rotating lenses.

The optical system consists of two overlapping revolving lens wheels and a stationary front objective lens. The revolving lens wheels are identical in construction. Each wheel has a glass periphery made up of 16 lens sectors; and all lens sectors are alike and plano-convex in form. The principle involved is variable refraction (see construction of lens wheels in accompanying views of machine). The optical system contains no mirrors, prisms or other reflecting means, and the mechanism operates without cams or other variable speed devices. The only movement employed is simple rotation at a uniform angular velocity.

The simplicity of this continuous projector was one of its features when contrasted with other machines designed to project pictures continuously. A change which is to be made in this present model will also eliminate nine of the gears which are now used, which will make the total for the machine very low.

The advantages claimed for a continuous projector are, of course, generally known, they being a lessening of the strain on the firm resulting in increased life for prints; elimination of the shutter and, therefore, theoretically an increase in the ililumination. It is also claimed that the quality of the picture is improved due to one or more pictures continuously being shown on the screen and no persistance of vision called upon to produce the illusion of motion. The machine itself appears to be quite simply constructed.

Photographic views of mechanism of new continuous type projector, seen from front in photo at left, and from rear, on the right.

The model demonstrated caused an unsteadiness in the picture. It was claimed, however, that mechanical imperfections in its construction were the source of this trouble and that corrections for this unsteadiness were to be made.

Library Cooperation and the Second Run Theatre

By INA ROBERTS

THE library-film cooperation carried on by The Cleveland Public Library has been a big thing from the first; because it was a thing for which there was and is a big need, it became at once popular when it was started five years ago and has steadily grown more extensive and more popular since that time.

M. A. Malaney, publicity director of Loew's Theatres in Cleveland, was the first person to whom I told the idea, then a dream of what might be. He at once saw its possibilities and began to work with me on it; he has continued ever since to give The Cleveland Public Library most complete and reliable cooperation. Neither does Mr. Royal of Keith's Palace leave anything undone that makes for strengthening library film cooperation in either the case of ordinary films or in general. What we are now doing is endeavoring to perfect as well as to deepen and strengthen the cooperation in all its angles, which are many.

This will be realized when one considers one little feature. For instance, not only the main library but also the branch and smaller libraries in this great system are now pasting copies of library-film bookmarks in every copy they have of every book listed on the bookmark. Just consider how greatly this adds to the motion picture's importance as a part of life in Cleveland. It is only a question of time when all public libraries will do the same.

Another phase that is occupying the thought and time of those concerned just now is the increasing and perfecting of cooperation of libraries with the second run and neighborhood theatres. The branch libraries are doing and always have done very much of this but we are now trying to systematize the whole thing on a bigger scale and save time and labor by rotating the exhibits to the various libraries at the time the picture is booked in the same neighborhood.

We sometimes have in the Main Library as many as eleven different exhibits connecting with a film at the time of the first run or road showing. By the plan we are now putting into operation these exhibits, consisting of stills, posters (hand-lettered by our curator of exhibits Albert C. Young), book jackets and lists of the books to be displayed, can be rotated all through our system.

Films often run but half a week in smaller theatres and the newspaper notification in the previous Sunday's ads does not leave sufficient time in which to LARGE theatres and small theatres acclaim the outstanding performance of Page Unit Organs.

This is natural, because the Page organization is known for a thorough understanding of theatre requirements—for concentrated specialization in organ craftsmanship—and for a proven ability to construct superb organs of a wide range of size and function.

These are the reasons why Mr. Macon is so sincerely enthusiastic in the letter reproduced here.

Mr. Macon's organ is the famous M-X-40, ideal for smaller theatres. It is a complete unit organ with two manuals. It can also be played by roll, taking two ordinary 88-note piano rolls. Thus it provides pipe organ music of high excellence at low cost.

Whether you have a large theatre or a small one, it will pay you to investigate what a Page Unit Organ will mean to your success.

How Will Talking Pictures Effect Present Theatre Workers?

THE widespread introduction of synchronized pictures not only bids fair to completely alter the complexion of theatre programs but also threatens to create serious employment disturbances in a number of departments which heretofore have been considered as permanent institutions in all large motion picture theatres.

These disturbances in a number of cases will be merely in the nature of a readjustment to the new conditions and are not likely to cause serious changes in the present set-up of the departments involved. Others, however, appear to involve an almost inevitable disemployment of large numbers of persons whose position in the theatre before the presaged worldwide use of the talking movie had come to be considered as one of permanence.

The department of the theatre most immediately affected is that of projection and, by a most fortunate combination of circumstances, it is the one department which is likely to derive the most benefit from the talking movie.

The synchronized picture now appears in the nature of a boon to the thousands of projectionists scattered over the world, and certainly, in this country at least, it can do little else but increase the projectionist's value to the care by virtue of the specialized knowledge which he will be forced to acquire in order to hold down his job.

Specialized knowledge naturally commands a higher wage in return for services rendered since it acts to restrict the number of persons available who can perform such work. Thus the projectionist has an additional protection, aside from that offered by his union, which has little control over major economic changes in the country's industries.

The protection thus afforded is of an economic nature and is of greater value, in some respects, than that which results from a consolidation of the interests of individuals, each of whom is subject to personal failings.

Not only does the talking picture hold forth the promise of better working conditions for the projectionists but it is also more than probable that it will strengthen his organization by way of increased membership, attained by the employment and training of more men to fill the new jobs thus created. That new jobs will be created appears certain as the duties in the projection room will have been greatly extended when talking pictures have become firmly established in the theatres.

All in all, then, the projectionist seems to be the most favored of all the forces engaged in the direct operation of the theatre and he should be thankful, indeed, for the golden opportunity thus thrust into his hands.

Less fortunate are other departments in the theatre, or those outside the theatre but dependent upon the theatre for a large share of their livelihood. The electrical workers, for instance, are even now engaged in a strike in a number of large cities in an effort to secure for themselves the right to do all electrical work of a general nature connected with the installation of synchronized pictures. Aside from the force of the union influence so exerted, there is a serious question as to whether the average electrical worker is competent to handle this work in a manner which would augur well for the successful operation of the system after it had been installed.

THE question here involved is one of competence rather than a desire to deprive persons of work which seems to be logically theirs. It might be said that the same conditions obtain with respect to the projectionist because they, too, are at present incompetent in the operation of synchronized equipment. But, whereas it is possible to train a mobile body of men to travel the country making installation of equipment, it is altogether another matter to train from twenty to thirty thousand men to satisfactorily operate that equipment after it is once installed. The sensible thing to do is to effect a simple extension of the duties of the men now employed in the thousands of projection rooms to include the operation of synchronized equipment.

These men can be easily trained as they have the necessary groundwork which should enable them to fall into step with the new procession with the least possible disturbance.

The installation of synchronized equipment, however, entails highly specialized effort by skilled workers, with laboratory experience, so that it is easy to see why the manufacturers are extremely reluctant to have this work pass from their hands. Furthermore, talking pictures have reached only the threshold of their domain and are still in the experimental stage where considerable knowledge is to be acquired for the future perfection of the art. The installation work and the supervision required afterwards, then, must be in the hands of specialists if troubles are to be diagnosed and a remedy effected.

It is not altogether improbable, however, after some semblance of an orderly progression is attained, that much of the work attendant upon the installation of synchronized pictures will revert to the general electrical workers as a logical part of the ordinary theatre work.

The trend in this direction has been evident for some years and various forms of "canned" musical contrivances have appeared to meet with varying degrees of success. Whether or not "canned" music in theatres will eventually displace the artists now engaged is a matter of conjecture—one guess is as good as another. But the very possibilities of the situation are enough to cause complications.

There has been considerable talk to the effect that the theatre musicians throughout the country's theatres have, or will, devote the fabulous sum of ten millions of dollars for the sole purpose of fighting "canned" music to the extent that they will be permitted to retain their positions. Whether the sum be ten million, or twenty million, or yet thirty million, will have no effect upon the ultimate destiny of the musician in the theatre because the thing that is economically right is the thing that will survive. Mere money has never yet permanently retarded progress in this world which is governed only by the economies of the particular situation.

THE salvation of the musician lies not in his own efforts to combat the new order of things but rather upon the acceptance of the "canned" music by the general theatre-going public. Whether or not the large majority of theatre patrons will be satisfied with a continuous diet of music which, manifestly, is not to be compared with that provided by an orchestra of artists is altogether another matter.

At the moment, exhibitors seem to be fascinated with the possibility of choosing between an electro-mechanical outfit costing about twenty-five thousand dollars, with a nominal operating expense, and an orchestra which stands them each year as much as, if not more than, the same amount.

It is quite conceivable that "canned" music will be a boon to those theatres which ordinarily could not afford even a small orchestra, but it is not so easy to see how the de luxe house can chance the lowering of the quality of its program which will certainly result from the displacement of a high class orchestra by a device which, even at its best, cannot provide musical renditions comparable to those of any first-rate orchestra.

It will not be for the musicians to stifle the promoters of "canned" music; nor will it be for the exhibitors, regardless of the savings involved, to force this music upon their patrons. The final choice will be made by the public and upon it only rests the final decision. Either synchronized pictures and "canned" music will provide better entertainment than anything yet offered, or they will not survive the racket.

Outlines History of Supply Business

JOE HORNSTEIN, New York Manager for National Theatre Supply Company, recently celebrated his 24th anniversary in the motion picture supply business, and took the occasion to recount some of his past experiences, dating back to the store show days of the films, which have more than passing interest as a background of contrast between these and the early times in the industry.

"In 1904," Joe reflected, "I made my debut in this industry by cranking a projection machine in Billy Inman's dance hall at Coney Island, and, believe me, those were the flicker days. Twelve dollars a week for 18 hours' work, seven days a week. I graduated from that post to a job with Pop Rock of the Vitagraph Company on Nassau Street. They assigned me to a small town in Jersey, where I cranked out a few pictures in the back room of a beer saloon.

"My third job in the motion picture industry consisted of singing and projecting illustrated song slides through the family entrance of a Groggery in Linoleumville, S. I.

"In 1907 I was made manager, projectionist, chief mop, sign painter, advertising manager, cashier and musical director of a Honkey Tonk Nicollette called the Hippodrome, on Fifth and Washington Streets, Hoboken, New Jersey. Them were the happy days, projecting a picture without any booth on an old Power's No. 3 Projector with a relief machine manufactured by Pop Rock called the Vitagraph, consisting of a wooden base-board, several gears and a star and cam thrown together. I soon tired of this regular routine, and started selling motion picture supplies, which consisted of a couple of rolls of tickets under one arm, a half dozen tension springs, and a sprocket in my vest pocket, and a dozen carbons in my coat pocket. Up and down 14th Street, which then consisted the Film Row.

"There used to be an employment agency for vaudeville artists, piano players, and what not, called Len Spencer's on 14th Street, and I obtained desk room there, and became sort of a free agent for everything in the business—any thing from scenery to broken down vocalists, and in consideration of the fact that there were not many Nicollettes at that time, it was tough going.

"I sold the first projection equipment to Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, William Fox, Sol Brill, Lee Ochs, William Brandt, Pop Landau, and various other pioneers in this business. Later I became connected with H. A. Mackey, who opened up the first supply house, and who was distributor for the Edison Kenedescope Projector—working on a commission basis, which Mackey soon tired of, to use his own terms, because I was making more money than he.

From Mackey I went to work for Miles Brothers. Here were the real pioneers in our industry. Herbert, Harry—now deceased—and Joe Meyers, including the Van Meters, and the Lucas Brothers from the South were encouraging individuals going into the Nicolette Business. Miles Brothers ran a combined Film Exchange, Motion Picture Studio, and Motion Picture Supply House. Then the first big trust came along, the Patents Company. Meyers went out of the picture there.

"I went to work for a new company called the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, which was owned by H. T. Edwards, Walter E. Green, sales manager, and Joe Hornstein, salesman, Chief Bottle Washer, etc. I saw the real hard days with this company. Every time pay day came around, I loaded the old motorcycle with all sorts of supplies and brought in the cash so that we all could have some money to spend and to take home to our folks and wives.

"The Picture Theatre Equipment Company prospered in a small way, and later, we had the first large supply house—the United Theatre Equipment Company. At that time I was in charge of the New York Branch, which was the nucleus of all the other branches.

"In 1919 I formed the Howells Cine Equipment Company—was President, General Manager, Sales Manager, and what not.

"On June 30, 1926, I joined ranks with the National Theatre Supply Company. And that brings the record up to date."

Names His Two Best Goodwill Builders

M. G. LEE, veteran theatre owner and operator, whose theatres in Cuthbert, Ga., and Eufaula, Ala., have a Good Will value that makes them outstanding among picture houses in this country, during his long experience as a specialist in developing cordial relations with his public has found that the two most successful exploitation efforts he has ever attempted are the stunts he uses to celebrate the anniversaries of his theatres, and the birthday cards he sends to a large list he has built up through long effort.

From time to time he has put into practice many exploitation ideas but he regards these two, which he repeatedly has tested, as the most successful. Lee makes coupon books good for $2.50 worth of admissions and which are sold for $1.00; a feature of his Anniversary celebrations.

Four years ago he launched the coupon book sale. The first year the sale grossed $300.00; the second year it jumped to $900.00; the third year it climbed to $1,100.00; the fourth year, for which the sale was recently concluded, grossed $2,200,000. Those figures tell a story in themselves.

The coupon book sale lasts just six days—opening Monday morning and closing Saturday night of anniversary week. But interest in the event continues because, after all coupons are used up, the backs represent a credit for the purchase of a new book—$2.00 in cash and the backs buy a new book of coupons worth $2.50.

Mr. Lee explains that for 30 days following the coupon book sales the cash receipts fall off appreciably, but he adds that attendance is nearly doubled. "The people are looking for bargains," Mr. Lee believes, "and the coupons give admission at a bargain price."

The other stunt that Mr. Lee inaugurated many years ago and continues to use with increasing satisfaction is the birthday card system. Lee knows the birthday anniversaries of his patrons for a radius of 20 miles. To each of the patrons or potential patrons on his list he sends a birthday greeting card, on behalf of the Lee Theatres and encloses therein two tickets to the theatre as well as a program for the week's offerings.

The fortunate people who receive the courtesy are enormously flattered and pleased and almost without exception they flank the theatre by letter—and use the passes to enjoy a performance.

Although Mr. Lee supervises the operation of both his theatres, dictating the general policies, devising special stunts,

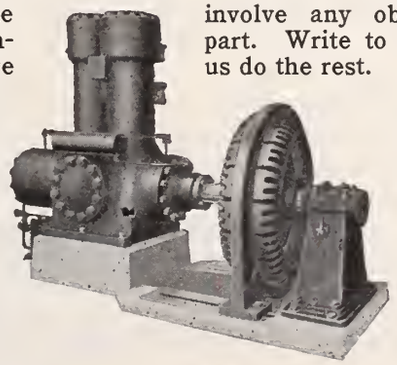
How many motion picture theatres shut down in summer?



"Closed until September" is a sign which is becoming a less familiar sight as theatre owners are turning more to air-cooling and air-conditioning. On hot nights a cool, comfortable theatre is more tempting to a fan than a production featuring his favorite star.

There is one certain way to keep your house cool during the hottest weather. YORK air-cooling and air-conditioning equipment will do it—and do it economically, too. Many of the leading theatres throughout the country have turned to YORK for the answer to profitable summer operation.

The YORK engineering organization has had many years of experience in analyzing the requirements of various types of theatres and installing equipment that can be depended upon to keep the temperature down. We offer you the benefit of this long experience.

Organizes Employes Club to Promote Good Fellowship

FOR the promotion of good fellowship and the creation of a spirit of closer understanding between employer and employee, the Publix-Saenger Employees' Recreational Club, composed of attaches of the State, Superba, Palace and Capitol theatre in Raleigh, has been formed.

The club was organized at the suggestion of W. G. Enloe, city manager for Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina, Inc., operators of the four local theatres, who believes it will be the means of creating better fellowship among the members of his organization.

A committee has been named to visit every member who should happen to get sick and the committee is empowered to draw on the treasury for flowers to be sent to such ill members. An entertainment committee will arrange for the monthly outings. A discipline committee was also named. Its duty will be to hear complaints and suggestions from members for the betterment of the service in the local theatres. When this committee decides that any member of the club has violated the rules and regulations and is thereby disbarred from membership, that member will be automatically discharged, Mr. Enloe said.

"I hope and believe this club will be the means of bringing all of us closer together within the Publix-Saenger organization," he explained. "All for one and one for all, is our slogan."

R. B. Wilby, of Atlanta, vice-president of the company, when he learned of the formation of the club, was so well pleased with its plans and purposes that he announced his intention to be host to the club at a barbecue at an early date.

with the necessity of installing auxiliary lighting wiring in order that a low voltage system may be operated in case of emergency as is required with a storage battery installation. Also, this system does away with all storage batteries and is therefore a very compact and, in the end, economical equipment.

The operation for emergency lighting from the hydro-electric unit is automatic. The device is so designed that in the case of the regular power supply being cut off, the hydro-electric unit automatically is put into operation on the regular lighting system.

An unusual application of this hydro-electric emergency lighting unit is predicted by its manufacturers. This application is for theatres having atmospheric conditioning refrigerating units where quantities of water are constantly used during the summer for the operation of the cooling system. In connection with these systems it is pointed out that the hydro-electric unit could be kept in constant operation by the water used by the cooling system. This would mean that the theatre could manufacture its own supply of electrical power at no cost as the water supply for the cooling system is required whether or not the hydro-electric unit was operated. During those times when the atmospheric conditioning system was not in use, arrangements will be made whereby the regular city power supply will be thrown into use.

Kliegl Spotlight No. 1700—An exceptionally powerful, long distance, spotlight, floodlight, and effect projector; completely equipped for white and color lighting, framing, fading, and spotlight attachments—providing in a single unit everything needed in the operation of a projector; and having all controls centralized—and other accommodations—to facilitate convenient, speedy, and easy operation.

A Remarkable Spotlight

of greatly improved design—more convenient controls, greater flexibility of operation, and higher lighting efficiency—with an entirely new principle of spot-flood control, wherein the arc lamp remains fixed in position and the lens travels for focusing the light beam. A 125 ampere, long distance projector; complete in every respect; providing in a single unit everything required; spot-, flood-, and color-lighting; framing shutters; effects; etc.; compact design; sturdily constructed—nothing fragile or complicated to break or become inoperative; hood, lower in front—so that operators' line of vision is unobstructed; projects any distance up to 150 ft.; gives anything required from a 4 ft. spot to a 50 ft. flood—and all colors desired. Truly a remarkable spotlight. Examine it at our plant—or write for full details. Nothing like it has ever been available heretofore. It is far superior to any long-range spotlight now used in the theatre. We are enthusiastic about it—and you will be too—when you see it.

Library Cooperation and Second Runs

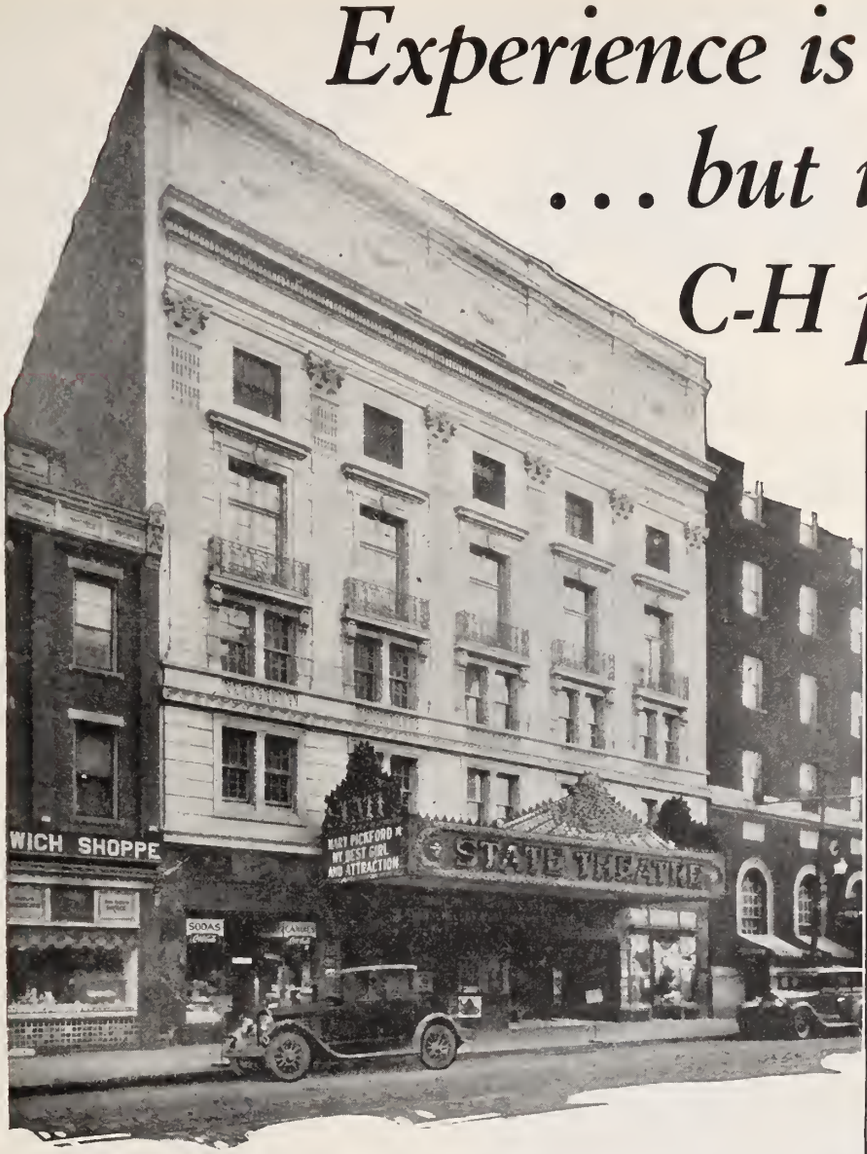
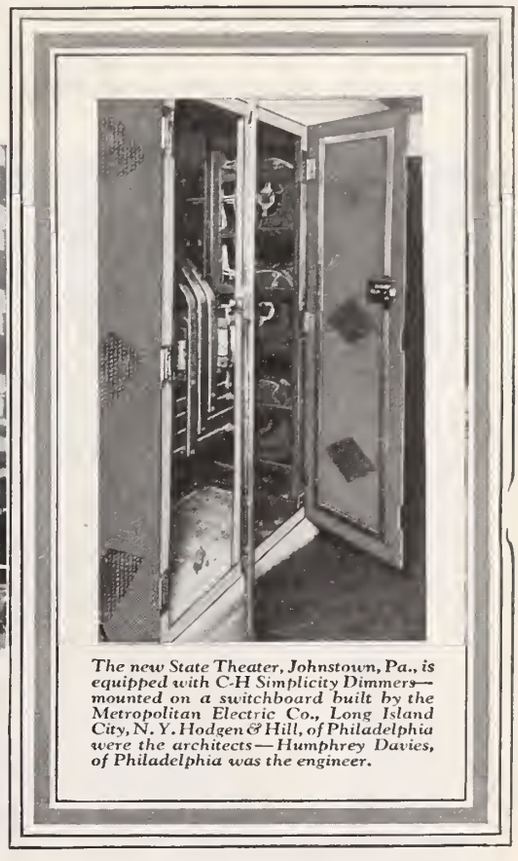
get the exhibit to the branch library and install it. I have therefore, written to the managers of all the second run and neighborhood theatres in Cleveland, enclosing a list of the films approved for cooperation by The Cleveland Public Library, and asking him to notify me at the Main Library of his bookings on these. Of course this advance information must be kept confidential but this is an easy matter as no one needs to know the dates of the bookings or their nature except myself until the exhibit is sent to the library concerned a week before the date set for the showing.

When one considers that most of the theatres in Cleveland cooperate with the public libraries by making and showing slides telling about the book side of films it will be understood what a tremendous thing library-film cooperation can be made with both factors pulling strongly and together.



Of course the matter of the short subject is still untouched in library-film cooperation but I am looking forward to the time when there will be stills made of more short subjects and they will be booked in series and advertised. When that day comes the libraries will cooperate with these in a way that will make the present library film cooperation, big and splendid as it is, seem by comparison as our sun is compared with the star Betelgeuse, which is three hundred times its size. Of course I mean the short subjects that have book connections and not the slapstick comedies.



As an example of what may be done with comedy pictures I may cite the cooperative publicity which was used by the Cleveland Public Library in connection with a local presentation of Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy."

The Fiction Division posted stills from this picture on its winged frame. This winged frame, it may be well to explain, is like a large book which hangs on the wall. On the various pages, which are like bulletin boards and which swing like pages of a book, are posted various exhibits connecting with matters of current interest. Some of the stills from "Grandma's Boy" which were suitable for such display were numbers 7A-1513, 2 A-19 a, and 5 A.

Many libraries throughout the country are increasing or starting film cooperation. During last summer a steady procession of librarians visited the Cleveland Public Library to learn how the thing is done. Among these are the Enoch Pratt Free Library of Baltimore, the Oakland Free Library and the Birmingham Public Library. Exhibits wishing to take up with local libraries the matter of film cooperation and desiring first to learn the technic of this cooperation from either the theatre or the library side or both may become informed by writing me care of The Motion Picture News.

Experience is a long road ... but it leads to C-H performance

The new State Theater, Johnstown, Pa., is equipped with C-H Simplicity Dimmers—mounted on a switchboard built by the Metropolitan Electric Co., Long Island City, N. Y. Hodgen & Hill, of Philadelphia were the architects—Humphrey Davies, of Philadelphia was the engineer.

IN hundreds of theaters, C-H Simplicity Dimmers have given universal satisfaction. Because of this reputation, uncompromised over a long period of years, experienced theater managers, architects, and electrical contractors use C-H Dimmers to assure the smooth control and color blending of lights so essential to modern presentations.

Talk over the advantages of C-H Dimmers for your theater with your architect or contractor—regardless of its seating capacity or scheme of decoration.

Write for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater" which describes C-H construction advantages which have built this reputation

Superiorities of C-H Simplicity Dimmers

Solid soapstone bases have high heat dispersion and insulating qualities—great continuous load capacity—freedom from burn-outs and maintenance.

Contacts on both sides of plates allow twice as many circuits in the same space. Plates can be taken out by removing one screw. Plates of any capacity can be substituted, allowing easy adaptation to all theaters or any remodeling plan.

Low-ratio rack and pinion drive eliminates play and backlash. 110 distinct steps with no overlapping of contacts assure flickerless dimming from full brilliancy to black out. Brushes of Cophite—a non-oxidizing, self-lubricating material.

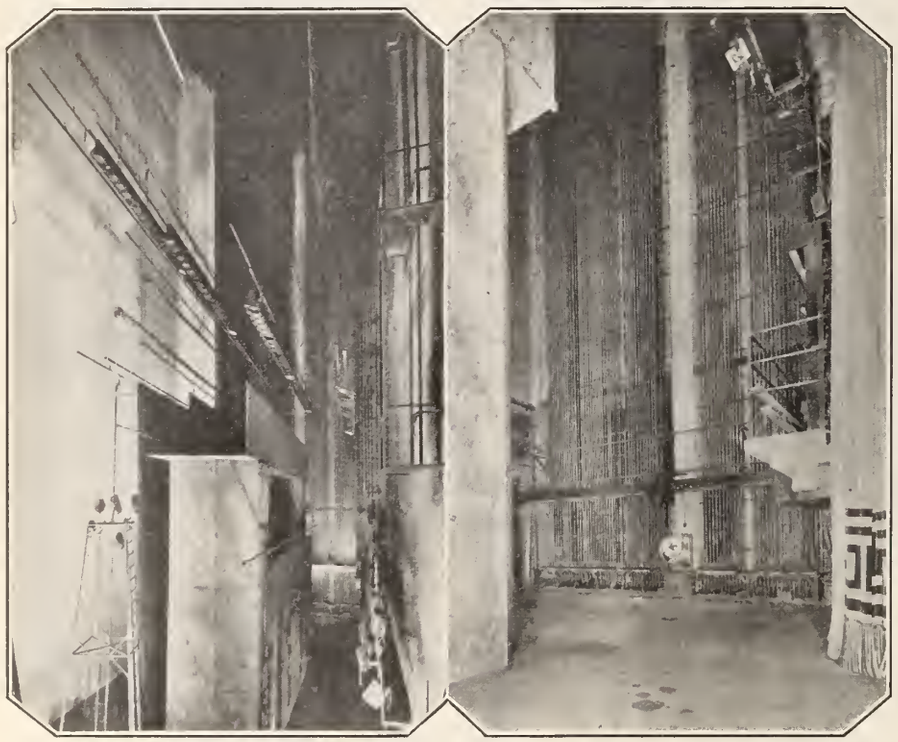
and working out new means of community co-operation he leaves the execution of his plans and the actual management of the theatres to his captains—the managers in charge of the houses.

In Eufaula, Ala., Manager J. R. McCarthy is in command. He has been associated with Mr. Lee more than eight years and he is regarded as a manager and showman of unusual ability. He subscribes heartily to Mr. Lee's policies and he carries them out faithfully—and successfully. Mr. McCarthy encourages worth while community undertakings by co-operating with such undertakings. He gives his support alike to churches, clubs, schools, and civic enterprises.

Recently, for instance, when the Boys' Club (a group from the farming section) were entertained by the Rotary Club of Eufaula, Mr. McCarthy had the entire group of boys as his guests at the Lee Theatre. Many of those boys had never seen a motion picture before, and to all of them the occasion was a delightful and unforgettable event. Later McCarthy extended the same courtesy to the Girls' Canning Club.

While Manager McCarthy was bearing aloft the banner of the Lee Theatre in Eufaula, Walter Harrison, a young man of real talent and now in his seventh year as manager of the Lee Theatre in Cuthbert, Ga., was signalizing himself for similar good work. Manager Harrison co-operated with the Women's Club of Coleman, assisting them to put on a special program at the Lee Theatre to which the club came en masse, and patrons overflowed the house. The Women's Club received a percentage of the receipts, the theatre made money, the tie-up with the club made friends for the theatre—and from every standpoint it was successful.

The managers of both theatres send passes to the pastors of all churches in their towns, and to the children under 16 in the families of those pastors. What is more, the ministers are regular patrons of the theatres. Last Saturday night five pastors attended the Lee Theatre in Eufaula. A revival had been going on all week, but there was no church service Saturday night, and the theatre drew them. On Sunday the same theatre was given over to two different denominations for two different services.



Managers Carry Out Policies

To what extent Mr. Lee depends on his two able managers to carry out his plans may be understood from the fact that he himself is a railway mail clerk, and has been for the past 28 years, working regularly for Uncle Sam. H ecan and does plan for his theatres, but he gives the credit for the fulfillment of his plans to those two captains on the firing line.

Not long ago Mr. Lee saw the realization of a cherished ambition in Eufaula —a new Lee Theatre, modern in every respect, larger than the old one, and as attractive as could be found in any town that size.

Despite the fact that he is a very busy man Mr. Lee personally supervised the construction of his Eufaula theatre and his new Cuthbert house.

Representative citizens and leaders in Eufaula and Cuthbert long ago took knowledge of the splendid service that the Lee theatres render their communities. They manifest a genuine pride in the theatres and express their approval and good-will in concrete terms. The Eufaula Daily Citizen recently published a signed article from the pen of the Rev. J. W. Heyes, rector of the First Episcopal Church of Eufaula, commending motion pictures as the greatest factor in the world today for promoting international understanding and good-will. The attitude of the Rev. Heyes indicates his regard for the theatre in Eufaula and for the part it plays in community life.

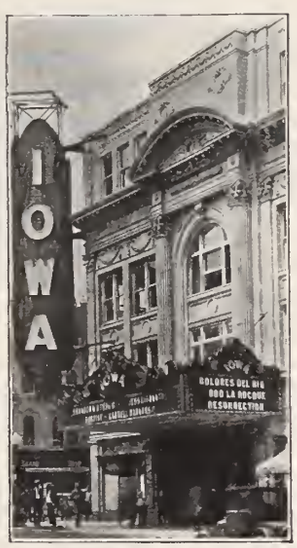
from

Four Bare Walls

to one of America's finest houses!

The IOWA

exemplifies the great advantages of National's One-Contract Plan. . . . . .



Calvin Bard

owner of the New Iowa, says:

". . . it was left, without restrictions, to the National Theatre Supply Company to start with four bare walls and accomplish the 100 per cent perfect job of today.

"I feel glad that I selected this organization to equip my theatre. I am glad for the harmony and efficiency which have prevailed during the installation. The harmony and smooth working of all details could not have been possible had I dealt with half a dozen individual firms.

"My dealings with National Theatre Supply Company have saved me time, worry, and expense."

National's

One-Contract Plan

is the ideal means of producing a completely and excellently appointed theatre with minimum expense.

Constant cooperation with the architects during the construction of each One-Contract Theatre assures best results from projection and other necessary equipment—as well as the selection and adaptation of various equipment units to the individual requirements of the architect's design.

Another important feature of the One-Contract Plan is its arrangement for financing in part or complete from the ground up.

The new IOWA, at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is an excellent illustration of the many things that make National Service the most complete, the most effective and reliable, ever available to the theatre industry

First Rule Of Showmanship—Know Your Public—Last Word In Successful Theatre Management

operates practically every theatre in the downtown district I went first to one of the smaller houses. It was an extremely hot day and a person of my ample proportions is likely to be rather sensitive to extreme heat, so I was carrying my jacket over my arm. I had no intention of entering the theatre divested of the garment, but I had not put in on up to the time I approached the ticket booth, at the street line. Before I even had opportunity to ask for a ticket the cashier commanded 'you'll have to put your coat on if you want to go into this theatre.' I gave assurance that I intended to do so and was given a ticket. Before I could collect my change I heard the doorman sing out through the lobby 'hey! put your coat on.' Well, I put my coat on and went into the theatre, but trying to put myself into the shoes of an average patron I had the feeling that I would not have a very good time at that show even if it was good.

"Then I went to another house—operated by the same company—and I carried my jacket over my arm. The cashier sold me a ticket and as I walked up to the ticket-taker at the door I started to put on my jacket. He was friendliness itself, and he was also good enough an observer to know that he could tell me 'Oh, keep them rolled up, be comfortable,' Of course, I put the coat on just the same, but what a difference in the impression made on a patron by the attitude at this theatre and that at the first one I mentioned!

"It is a safe bet that the manager of the first house is the type that 'gives orders.' Probably he noticed that many men were entering the theatre carrying their jackets and he thought it was lowering the tone of his house—which it would do. But instead of telling his attendants to correct the evil by some courteous method he probably said 'make them cut that out.' And that is just what his cashier and doorman were doing, 'making them cut it out.'

"The town and the theatre were not the places where that sort of thing would make a favorable impression. At that theatre the manager was not giving them what they liked, which the manager must do with his entertainment and his service if he wants to keep them coming back. The 'come backs' are what make a theatre pay. It is not so difficult to get a week's business, that can be done with a whoop-'em-up campaign or an occasional 'knock out' attraction. But the manager who gives them week-in and week-out something that they like is the one who gets the 'come backs'."

Opinion of Judge, Guest of Management, Favors Show

M. A. Malaney, in charge of publicity for Loew's theatres in Cleveland, staged a private pre-release screening of "The Bellamy Trial" prior to its opening at the Allen theatre, for Chief Justice John P. Demspey, his associate judges, Beebe, Meck and Seltzer, and chief clerk Murphy. The come-back was a personal letter from Chief Justice Dempsey endorsing accuracy of the picture from a legal standpoint.

Judge Dempsey said in his letter to Loew's Theatres, Inc., "We found it (the picture) very interesting, especially the depicting of the trial itself which was very realistic. The picture is an accurate and clever presentation of the story."

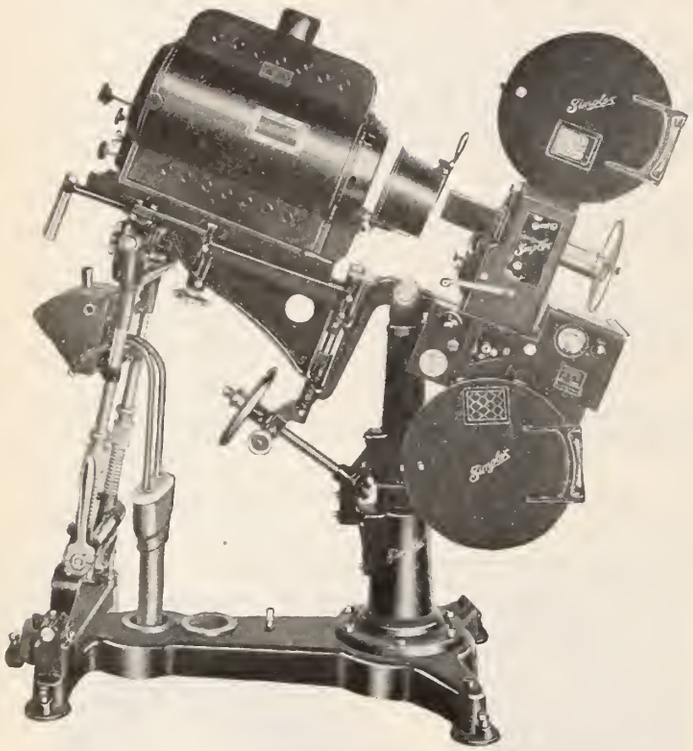
The Buck Private of the Projection Army

Meet the buck private of the projection army—THE LENS. All the rest of the army, from the light switch to the shutter, pass the buck to the lens.

And just as the performance of an army depends on the men in it, so does the kind of pictures a projection machine produces depend on the lens.

That is why the Cinephor Lens makes an ideal part of the projection machine. It is a well trained, strictly disciplined, sharp shooter. It aims to bring the monies into the box office till, and it invariably scores a bull's eye.



Once you get a Cinephor "in the army now" it is in for good. You pay nothing for the term of service except the original purchase price.

If you are looking for a real recruit, enlist a Cinephor.

Mo. Clergy Fights Shows; Ia. Town Solves Problem

Ministers of Columbia, Mo., have banded together to fight against the proposal for opening the motion picture theatres of Columbia on Sundays. Merchants of the town are losing much trade because Columbians motor to Jefferson City and other neighboring towns that permit movies on Sundays. Columbia will vote on the question of Sunday shows at an early date.

Conway, Iowa, has solved the Sunday show question very effectively. Church services are held each Sunday night in an open air theatre. The services end promptly at 8:30 p.m. and are followed by a 6-reel feature film and some short subjects. The congregation may see the show by paying the admission price.

Both the church people and the theatre owner are satisfied with this arrangement. Attendance at church services and the theatre have increased.

Montreal Realizes $813,979 on Amusement Tax

The amusement tax brought a revenue of $813,979 to the City of Montreal during 1917, according to the annual financial report which was presented at the City Hall July 27. This is all velvet to the city because the tax is collected by the exhibitors and paid over to the Province of Quebec which, in turn, hands it over to the city for special expenditures.

There are 54 moving picture theatres in Montreal and these paid license fees of $48,137 to the city during 1927. Five circuses paid $1,000 per day into the city coffers for five days during the year.

Washington Board Rules Technicalities Be Kept Out of Arbitration

THE arbitration board of Washington, D. C., in hearing a case in which First National, Paramount, United Artists, Pathe and Universal charged the Payette and Dalke circuit in Virginia with bicycling and holding over films, recently handed down an important decision in declaring that arbitration boards are courts of equity and are not bound by technicalities that might tie up proceedings in courts of law. The board ordered the circuit to pay the distributors $4,500 damages, an award said to be the largest ever made by the Washington board.

The circuit, through Sam Boyd, a Washington attorney and its representative, had filed motions with the board requesting the exchanges' complaints be dismissed because they were, it was claimed, first, indefinite, and second, brought under the copyright law of the United States. These motions were opposed by the local exchanges, represented by Louis Nizor, attorney for the New York Film Board of Trade, who contended that there was no motion picture procedure before arbitration boards involving pleadings and that any other ruling would be introducing the legal technicalities of the courts, which, Mr. Nizor emphasized, it is the purpose of arbitration boards to prevent.

The Washington board ruled against the motions filed by the circuit, declaring that the complaints offered by the exchanges were proper.

Paramount Coast Studio to House Radio Station

New Contact With Public Will Be Opened in September; Policy Will Be to Foster Goodwill Towards Screen

A RADIO broadcasting station, to be known as "KNX, Paramount Pictures-Los Angeles Evening Express Station," will be opened early in September at the studios of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation in Hollywood. The new station will have a strength of 5000 watts. Ground has already been broken and construction work begun, while equipment is being rushed from the east for the studio and transmitter, the latter to be located in the San Francisco Valley at Sherman Oaks. The program orignating in the studio will be carried via private telephone to the transmitter, a distance of 12 miles, and from this point the messages will be broadcast from the antenna towers.

Paramount plans to use the station as contact with picturegoers throughout the country and also to make this air service an aid to exhibitors. Besides fostering goodwill towards the screen, by educating non-theatregoers to its entertaining qualities, it is the intention of the company to inform exhibitors, as well as the public, of the latest developments in the moving picture center.

KNX has heretofore used 500-watt energy, but they are now enabled to increase their power 10 times and to install transmission equipment of 50,000-watt capacity for future use. It is said that a change from 5000-watt to 50,000-watt operation can be made within 24 hours, when the station is in operation. KNX, in operation for some time under the Los Angeles Evening Express, will continue under that management. The staff is composed of Naylor Rogers, manager and program director; Glen Rice, assistant manager; Harold Isbell; Eddie Albright; N. D. Garvey, chief technician, and Loyal Underwood, announcer.

The Paramount lot will house the broadcast studio and rehearsal room.

These New York executives pointed out that it was only on July 12, 1928, that Mr. Schenck was re-elected president and chairman of the board for another year. He will return to the United States next month following a visit to Russia in the interests of United Arists pictures. Sunday Shows Headway Made in Ohio

Ohio has added to its laurels as a controversial site for Sunday shows. Martins Ferry is the latest city to join the ranks of seven-day performance. After having heavily advertised in the local newspapers that the majority of the citizens seemed to desire Sunday shows, and that compliance with said desires would materially improve the general business of the city, the Fenray Photoplay Co. proceeded to give Sunday exhibitions at both their houses, the Fenray and Elzane.

The Sunday show will be decided by the citizenry of Ashland, O., in which city the exhibitors, sponsored by the Ashland Theatre Owners' Association, have forced a referendum. The public will be given the opportunity to express their preference by ballot the middle of August.

A picture program in honor of Frank P. MacLennan, noted owner, editor, and publisher of The Topeka State Journal, and ranking member of the Board of Directors of the Associated Press, who is recuperating at a private hospital in Topeka, was given at the hospital last Wednesday evening.

FBO in Deal with Ideal

Joseph P. Kennedy Closes for Distribution of 1928-29 Product in United Kingdom

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of FBO, of the consummation of negotiations between Simon Bowson, representing Ideal Films, Ltd., of England, and FBO Pictures Corporation, whereby the FBO 1928-29 product will be distributed throughout the United Kingdom by Ideal Films, Ltd., one of the oldest and most important distribution agencies in Great Britain. The deal was consummated by cable between Mr. Kennedy, who is in Hollywood, Mr. Simon Rowson, in London, and Ambrose S. Dowling, manager of FBO Export Corporation, in New York. Sol G. Newman, FBO's representative in London, was also instrumental in closing the deal.

The completion of negotiations between Mr. Kennedy and Ideal Films, Ltd., marks the third year of this international alliance.

It will be recalled that in September, 1926, Mr. Kennedy completed negotiations for the distribution of the 1926-27 FBO product in the United Kingdom by Ideal Films, Ltd. This alliance established a definite union between a big American producing corporation and a leading British renting organization, and was a genuine progressive step toward the establishment of more friendly relations between the motion picture industry in America and Great Britain.

In August, 1927, Mr. Kennedy again completed negotiations with Ideal for the distribution of the 1927-28 product in the United Kingdom, and the completion of negotiations between Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Rowson for the distribution of the FBO 1928-29 product by Ideal was announced this week.

During the past two years, the Gaumont British Corporation, of which Ideal Films, Ltd., is an affiliated company, have made unusual progress.

Their first move was the acquisition of the Davis group of theatres, said to be the largest picture theatre circuit in the United Kingdom. Then came the deal with the Denman Theatres, which brought under their direct control a number of the best theatres in England. This was followed by the amalgamation of General Theatres and British Gaumont, which further augmented their already powerful position.

Through these new affiliations, Gaumont British Corporation find themselves in control of over two hundred theatres in which are numbered some of the finest houses in Great Britain. Next October, they plan to open their biggest house at Croydon with a seating capacity of over three thousand. The house at Croydon will be one of the Davis circuit of theatres. Thus the FBO product will be exploited through this powerful distributing agency to over 200 of the biggest theatres in the United Kingdom.

Ideal Films, Ltd., are making elaborate preparations to launch FBO's 1928-29 program. Sol G. Newman, FBO's representative in London, who was instrumental in closing the new deal, will take an active part in the campaign.

With the selection of Sue Carol as leading lady in the Glenn Tryon comedy, "It Can Be Done," a new co-starring team comes into existence. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, last week placed his stamp of approval on the choice of Miss Carol for the role in the picture, the title of which is, by the way, the motto of the Universal president.

Fred Newmeyer is to direct "It Can Be Done," which will go into work inside of a few days. Mann Page and Edward Montagne have just put the finishing touches to the script.

St. Louis Firm Signs for Chesterfield Program

Progressive Pictures, Inc., St. Louis regional distributors, have signed for the ten Chesterfield productions comprising the 1928-29 schedule. Contracts for the distribution of the firm's product were signed last week between George R. Batcheller of Chesterfield and John R. Walsh of Progressive.

Progressive is a re-organization of the old Progress Pictures of St. Louis. Thomas H. McKean is president and Walter Light, vice-president.

Paramount Signs Taylor Holmes' Son

Phillip R. Holmes, son of Taylor Holmes, the actor, and one of the Princeton sophomores taken to Hollywood to finish a role with Charles Rogers in "Varsity," has been signed as a featured player by Paramount. After signing the contract, he left Hollywood for a vacation in New York.

Young Holmes has been in Triangle Club dramatic activities at Princeton.

K-A-O Washington Stanley House, Report

EXHIBITORS in Washington, D. C., are watching with interest the reports and rumors—mostly the latter—of the negotiations now under way in New York looking to the acquisition of the Stanley owned Earle Theatre there by Keith-Albee-Orpheum. Local representatives of the organizations involved, however, have little to say, declaring the matter is in the hands of the men in New York.

The Voice of the Screen

News and Comment on All Phases of "Sound" Pictures

Roach Skeptical of Sound in Shorts

Producer Fearful of Abating Laughs By Use of Dialogue

DUMB acts are usually the funniest on a vaudeville program and short screen comedies unadulterated with dialogue should get the most laughs, according to Hal Roach, who bemoans the fate that brought the talkies just at this time, when the short comedy had really come into its own.

Don't be mistaken, however, about Mr. Roach; he is going to have some sound and some dialogue in his comedies for the coming season, but he is very skeptical about the success of the venture.

Farina's voice is going to be heard if it is only to say "hello" to the picture public. In fact, the voice of every member of the "gang" will be registered and reproduced on the screen, as will those of Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy and others of the Roach comedians.

Just how far Mr. Roach will carry out the scheme he does not know at the present time. He is in New York at the M-G-M offices for a series of conferences and the "talkie" situation is giving him no end of trouble. He says frankly that if he could be sure that every other producer was going to use dialogue he would not. He thinks the novelty would be a quite welcome one and he is sure of his silent comedy. He is not so sure of the effect of sound and dialogue; in fact he is fearful that it is going to cost him laughs, and Mr. Roach does love his laughs in his comedies.

"I am not just sure what I am going to do," said the short comedy producer, "but we will have to have some sound in our comedies. Just how far we will go with it I don't know yet. I don't see where much dialogue fits into the short comedy and I doubt if we will inject many lines, but I guess we will at least have to let the movie going public hear the voices of our comedians if it is only to have each of them read a line.

"Sound and dialogue are all right for the feature picture. I can see where a sound effect here and a few lines of dialogue there might give considerable strength to a long picture, but I am fearful that it will slow up the short comedy in which speed is one of our main assets. We build comedies to cram in as many laughs as possible. Our main aim is to get in just one more laughs and the only result I can see if we make our comedians stop to talk is a general slowing up of the process.

"It is a different thing in a short comedy sketch on the stage. There the laughs can be timed. A comedian can wait until the mirth of the audience has subsided and the longer he has to wait the funnier his stuff goes over. He can regulate his speed to suit any audience, but it is not yet clear to me how that can be done with the short screen comedy.

"You might say you can leave certain pauses for your laughs on the screen, but that is impossible. There are rarely two audiences that react alike to a comedy gag or situation. One person in an audience who has a contagious laugh and uses it can convert the whole house to see the humor of a situation whether it exists or not. A laugh might last a second or it might last for minutes. What is going to happen in the midst of these laughs if the comedian bursts into dialogue. The audience is going to be afraid of missing the lines and must stop the laughter abruptly. If this is not done some of the patrons are going to be annoyed and once annoyed it is going to be a more difficult matter to wring laughs out of them.

"As an illustration of what can happen with a comedy I'll tell you something that occurred out in Santa Barbara where I visited a picture house with some friends. It was a program of talkies and I thought that was all, but they suddenly announced on the screen a Hal Roach comedy and I started to feel ashamed of myself, for I knew it was a rotten comedy.

"Well just about that minute a girl about seventeen or eighteen years old stepped into a box with two young fellows. That girl had the most contagious laugh I ever heard and the opening situation struck her funny. She laughed out loud and in a moment the audience joined in with her. It was a laugh all through that picture and when we were leaving the theatre my friends told me how good it was. As a matter of hard fact it got more applause than any talkie on the program.

"The magnetism of the 'gang' is their naturalness. We tell them to walk over to a table and pick up a certain thing. They walk over and pick up something else; they do it naturally. It really improves the thing when it is done silently, but if it carried a sound effect it would have to be done over and would scare them to death. The fact that a microphone was close by would make them nervous and once nervous they could no longer be natural.

"Those are some of the things we are going to have to overcome when we turn to sound in our short comedies. Of course we will find ways and means of doing it, but it is going to take a lot of patience and a lot of thought. We really had reached a point where the short comedy had arrived and our sales are about thirty per cent in advance of what they have been in the past at this time of the year. We will have to use sound, of course, but I wish it had been delayed a while longer at least, or I wish I could be sure that everybody else was going to employ sound. If I was sure I'd give them a real novelty with the silent two-reel comedy. However, you can be sure of this; we will give them the best comedies to be had, whether we employ sound or not.

Victor Planning Expansion on Non-Synchronous Service

VICTOR TALKING MACHINE COMPANY is planning an extensive increase in non-synchronous service to theatres which promises to become very popular. The new $250,000 plant of the company will be used for making non-synchronous records as well as Vitaphone and Western Electric Company discs.

So popular have become these non-synchronous discs that a number of houses have already dispensed with their orchestras and more seem destined to be out of the pits in the near future. Victor is now supplying cue sheets and records on pictures and in many cases the orchestras are no longer considered necessary where the theatres go to the expense of equipping.

This non-synchronous service is applied to houses that have already installed Western Electric equipment under Victor's deal with Electrical Research Products, a subsidiary of the Western Electric Company. Western Electric equipment reproduces Vitaphone, Movietone and stock records by the addition of two turntables. The two turntable system is non-synchronous, the double turntable being employed to permit continuous playing. Whole or portions of a record may be played and one person can operate the machine.

It is said there are about 125 theatres now using the non-synchronous service and Victor is cueing a number of current releases. In cases where stock records do not provide the desired music special records are prepared. The record service is supplied to theatres on a weekly charge basis. The company is preparing to put on the market records adaptable for any film.

Penn. Governor Asks Sound Censorship

Will Use Influence to Place Measure Before Legislature

GOVERNOR JOHN S. FISHER, of Pennsylvania, served definite and emphatic notice in a public statement issued at the executive offices in the capitol at Harrishurg, on July 25, that he is in favor of censorship of the "talkies," and that he will fight for it by placing the influence of the State administration behind a proposed bill in the 1929 session of the legislature, to amend the existing law to extend the picture censors' authority to include supervision of the "talkies" also.

The Governor's announcement came after a conference with the members of the picture censorship board whom he summoned to the capitol from their headquarters in Philadelphia to discuss the fight that is now on in the state courts over the question of the right of the board to censor talking motion pictures.

"The law relating to censorship of talking films," the Governor said, "seems as necessary as that relating to the movies," and he let it he known that he intends to have the state law strengthened to give the censors unquestioned authority over the "talkies," regardless of what the courts may ultimately decide in the present conflict as to the hoard's authority to supervise the new form of entertainment under the existing statute.

Two directly conflicting decisions have been given, in two courts of equal jurisdiction in Philadelphia, regarding the rights of the censors with relation to "talkies" under the present censorship law. Judge Martin, of one hranch of the Common Pleas court, ruled that dialogue in sound pictures is subject to censorship now, and dismissed the case of Warner Brothers versus the State Board. Warner Brothers have indicated their intention, through counsel, to appeal this ruling to the higher courts.

On the other hand, Judge McDevitt, in another branch of the Common Pleas court, in Philadelphia, having equal jurisdiction, ruled that the picture censors have no authority under existing statute to supervise the "talkies." This was in a test case inaugurated by the Fox interests. It is intimated that this decision also will be carried to the upper courts.

It was these two conflicting decisions that, it is understood, brought the question to the point where Governor Fisher decided to call the conference with the censors, the upshot of which was his announced decision to seek to have the Legislature amend the law to extend the authority of the censors to the talkies. The next biennial session of the Legislature comes next year. Lawyers about the capitol at Harrisburg are of the opinion that such an amendment would legalize censorship of the dialogue in sound movies, regardless of what the highest court of the State ultimately may decide are the rights of the censors with relation to "talkies" under the existing statute.

It is the belief in Harrisburg that Governor Fisher, with the influence of the State administration, could easily induce the Legislature to adopt the proposed amendment. Pennsylvania was one of the first states to adopt picture censorship and all the successive administrations since the board was created, have supported the principle notwithstanding there has been keen opposition expressed at various times by the picture interests.

1,000 Film Soldiers Will Rended "Marsellaise"

ONE thousand voices of film soldiers will sing "La Marsellaise" in movietone for D. W. Griffith's "The Love Song," raising their voices in the din of a battle that will be recorded in sound.

William Boyd, Jetta Goudal, Lupe Velez, George Fawcett and Albert Conti already have been signed to appear in this new Griffith picture. Dr. Karl Vollmoeller, author of the book of "The Miracle," wrote the original story from which the film has been adapted. The locale is the France of Napoleon III and the recorded battle scene will occur in a Franco-Prussian war sequence.

Root Writing Dialogue for "Varsity"

The first writer to break forth as a creator of dialogue for sound production on the Paramount lot is Wells Root, former New York newspaperman, who was brought to Hollywood to write Charles "Buddy" Rogers' first starring picture, "Varsity."

Root is now engaged in preparing the spoken sequences for the Rogers' picture, working in conjunction with Jesse L. Lasky, producing head, and Roy J. Pomeroy director of sound effects.

In addition to Rogers, the voices of Chester Conklin, Mary Brian and Phillips R. Holmes are being synchronized with the picture.

Atlanta Territory Closing Contracts

Twenty-five additional theatres in the Atlanta territory have closed contracts for Western Electric equipment and are soon to be wired for Vitaphone and Movietone. Several important installations are now in progress and others will be completed just as rapidly as engineers can handle the work.

Fifteen of these installations are scheduled for theatres in Florida, the group including every town where E. J. Sparks is operating.

Florida houses now being wired, or soon to he wired, include the Republic, Jacksonville; Rex, St. Petershurg; Jefferson, St. Augustine; Star, Arcadia; Beecham, Orlando; Milane, Sanford; Arcade, Ft. Myers; Palace, Bradenton; Capitol, Plant City; Florida, Gainesville; Dreka, Deland; Howell, Palatka; Sunrise, Ft. Pierce; Sarasota, Sarasota; Sunset, Ft. Lauderdale.

Installation of sound apparatus is progressing rapidly at Loew's Grand, Atlanta. Fox Movietone will make its debut in that house on August 6. But one week before Loew's Grand gets under way with sound pictures Loew's Palace, Memphis, and Loew's Vendome, Nashville, will have inaugurated Movietone.

British Device Adapted to Film or Disc

H. J. Kuchenmeister, a German inventor, has had registered with the London patent office a device which has created considerable interest abroad. He has secured two patents for an apparatus to be attached to any existing projector, and which, it is claimed can handle any American sound device. It is said to be adaptable to either disc or film synchronization.

Collier Stresses Direction Value

Legitimate Stage Star Sees Need of Aid from Broadway

WILLIAM COLLIER, famed as a star of the legitimate stage, as the director of some of Broadway's biggest shows, and experienced as a screen actor, has some very decided ideas as to how talking pictures should be produced. In the first place he does not think the motion picture director is qualified to direct the talkies, nor does he think the stage director is so qualified, but of the two he considers the latter the most essential to the success of the picture. He should have two directors, with the stage director the dominant figure.

Mr. Collier sees the necessity for an entire change in the technique in the production of sound pictures as they are now being directed and he anticipates no demolition of the ranks of the legitimate stage as the result of this wild rush to the talkies. He is of the impression that the all-sound picture will succeed only for the time being as a novelty and that dialogue will be used quite sparingly in the future to lend contrast and strengthen situations. He also foresees a decided cut in production costs if production is placed in the hands of competent stage producers and directors.

Discussing the subject of sound pictures generally, Mr. Collier said:

"About the most important thing in connection with talking pictures is proper direction. With very few exceptions they will never get anywhere with the directors now presiding over the megaphone. Those directors are alright for the direction of the picture itself, but far more important to the scheme of things is the direction of the dialogue. A stage director is needed for that, and a good one. In fact the ideal combination would be that of stage director, picture director and writer. If you could combine all three in one it would be perfect. In the order of their importance, I would say the stage director came first, the picture director second, and the writer third.

"There are comparatively few actors who excel in reading lines on the speaking stage, and it will take time to teach even these the technique of speaking before the camera. Good an actor as Lional Barrymore is, I could see room for improvement in his direction and in the reading of his lines. Like all of them you see in these talkies, Barrymore has the fault of anticipating his cues and appearing just a trifle too eager to start reading his lines. You will notice, too, that none of them hold their natural positions in talking. They all seem to be directing their voices directly to the microphone.

"There is all the difference in the world the way a line is read. You take even such a sentence as 'I will' and it can be read any number of different ways. It requires a good director to get proper and full value out of every line in the dialogue and these talkies need a lot more value in their rendition of dialogue than they now have. Only the best direction available from Broadway can make the sound pictures successful.

"I doubt if sound pictures are ever going to be successful with continuous dialogue, at least not in the way they are now constructed and rendered. My idea would be just an occasional line of dialogue, perhaps to strengthen situations and for explanatory purposes. A line here and there properly read can add tremendously to the effectiveness of a situation of a climax.

"I cannot see this talk of the talking pictures disrupting the legitimate stage and taking away all of the Broadway stars, at least not until matters are more satisfactorily arranged to the benefit of the actors. You hear a lot about the tremendous salaries the pictures can pay the legitimate actor, but don't forget those excess amounts they might get over their stage salaries would not be all velvet. The Broadway star might get a large contract for a picture or two, but once they are recorded on celluloid or disc the picture producers have them for all times; that is their film record is everlasting and they have been paid for but a few weeks work.

"If the Broadway stars and leading players turn to the pictures it is going to kill the speaking stage for road companies and without appearances on the road the income of the actors is going to be cut into materially. Of course, if some arrangements are mad so that the actor may participate in the profits of a picture, that is something else again, but that would be entirely revolutianary to anything that has happened in the past.

"You also hear talk of production costs mounting with the advent of the talking pieture. I can't see any excuse for anything but a marked reduction in production costs, for if Broadway directors are called in you can be sure there will be a great saving in overhead.

"I recall when I was engaged at the Sennett studios with a good fat salary check coming in every week. Well, I was around there eight weeks before I did a lick of work or appeared before a camera. My conscience really hurt me, for I like to feel I am earning whatever I am paid. I complained at my idleness and pointed out that I was not earning my money, but was told not to worry, everything was all right and along the customary lines.

"You will not find anything of this kind if production is given proper supervision and the shooting is done under the direction of competent Broadway directors. There will be no time lost at rehearsals, a definite schedule will be set and a rapid pace maintained until the picture is concluded. I can see no reason why production costs should not come down materially and I think with proper handling motion pictures with sound and dialogue should have a far greater entertainment value than ever could have been reached with the silent drama.

Tiffany - Stahl Will Synchronize Ten

PREPARATIONS are under way for the synchronization, with sound effects, of ten Tiffany-Stahl special productions for 1928-29. This step was decided upon at a meeting of the company's executives held at the Home Office in New York last week, at which were present the officers of the company and several of the exchange branch managers.

The pictures decided upon to be synchronized include "The Toilers," a Reginald Barker special production, four John M. Stahl special productions, three additional Reginald Barker special productions, and two others to be announced.

Noah Beery To Be Heard In Gotham's First

Harold Shumate will supervise the Sam Sax-Gotham production starring Noah Beery which will be that company's initial singing-talking special. In "The Joyous Villain," Beery will sing as well as talk and act.

West Coast Theatres Now Planning For 120 Installations

SO successful has been the West Coast Theatres whose houses are equipped for sound pictures, that additional installments will be rushed as quickly as possible. Harold B. Franklin, president of the circuit is completely sold on the sound pictures. He says that 120 theatres will have the apparatus installed as quickly as possible at a cost of $1,500,000.

There are thirty-eight of the houses now equipped and orders for the balance have been placed. The West Coast houses where installments have been made are the following: T. and D., Oakland: Metropolitan and Loew's State, Los Angeles; Imperial, Long Beach: Rosemary, Ocean Park: West Coast-Walker, Santa Ana; Alcazar, Bell; Granada, Inglewood; El Portal, Lankershim; Cabara, San Pedro; Granada, Wilmington; The Adams Street, Westlake; Egyptian, Hollywood; Ritz, Mesa; Manchester, Highland; Vista, Granada; Rivoli, Sunbeam and Starland in Los Angeles and Hollywood; Granada, Inglewood and Ontario; Liberty, Redlands; Capitol, Redondo, Regent, Riverside; Criterion, Santa Monica; Glen City, Santa Paula; Rialto, South Pasadena; California, Richmond; California, Salinas; California, Watsonville; Opal, Hollister; Golden State, Hanford; The Visalia, Visalia.

Griffith Pioneered in Sound Production

D. W. GRIFFITH, at present making "The Love Song" for United Artists with William Boyd and Lupe Velez is one of the pioneers of sound synchronization with pictures. Ten years ago he produced "Dream Street" and it had its world premiere at Town Hall in New York with synchronization under the Kellem process.

The picture caused considerable sensation and newspaper editorials forecast a great future for the process. Griffith endeavored to interest capital in the idea but financiers did not grasp its possibilities. Now a decade later sound pictures are all the rage and "The Love Song" will have Movietone vocal and instrumental music and sound effects synchronized with the film. Irving Berlin is composing the theme number, "Where Is the Song of Songs for Me."

Book Sound Picture and Original Act

To synchronize a stage presentation with its counterpart in talking motion pictures, Fanchon and Marco have just signed Bobby Agnew, film star, to tour the circuit of theatres which their acts cover, making personal appearances simultaneously on the silver sheet with his voice recorded on the Movietone.

Providing the public with a remarkable demonstration of how the Movietone operates, the dual presentation will show just how close is the exact reproduction of the human voice, its inflections and how closely it synchronizes movement of the lips and uttered sounds.

Sees New Combination In Story Technique

The screen story of the future will be a combination of scenario and stage play, in the opinion of Bayard Veiller, playwright and producer, who will personally supervise the filming of his most recent hit, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's first all-talking picture.

The talking picture, Veiller declared as he prepared to depart for New York from the coast, will antiquate the screen continuity which is used as the basis for filming today. At the same time, he said, the stage play itself cannot be utilized as it stands. Veiller will return to Los Angeles in September to assume his duties.

"Uncle Tom" and "Man Who Laughs" Ready

The Movietone synchronization of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Man Who Laugh," have been completed. Both pictures have been put into sound with elaborate orchestral effects and settings and with other appropriate sounds, except dialogue.

Movietone prints of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" already have been shipped to Universal exchanges and now are ready for immediate booking. Prints on "The Man Who Laughs" are expected to follow within a week or so.

Both Sound and Color in "Hell's Angels"

Both sound and color will be employed in Hell's Angels," United Artists' air film now being completed at the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood.

Final sequences of "Hell's Angels," in which Ben Lyons, Greta Nissen, James Hall, Thelma Todd and John Darrow appear, are being synchronized with voice and music. Another portion of the picture already has been filmed in technicolor.

It is planned to exhibit "Hell's Angels" in a New York theatre in November.

Virginia Censors to Pass on Dialogue

The Virginia censors have taken up the matter of sound pictures and are insisting that they have supervision over the talkies as well as the silent drama. They have decreed that only such sound pictures as are submitted, together with exact dialogue used, are eligible to their consideration. There has been no trouble with regard to the matter yet, but doubtless a controversy will develop in the near future.

M-G-M Signing Many Stage Stars

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER have made public names of stage celebrities who have already signed contracts to make Movietone shorts for the company. The list is headed by Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw, late stars of "The Five O'Clock Girl"; Louise Groody, star of "Hit the Deck"; Eddie Allen, who appeared with Miss Groody in "Hit the Deck"; Keller Sisters and Lynch, close harmony trio, who have appeared in revues, vaudeville and night clubs; "Sunshine Sammy," one of the "Our Gang" comedy stars, Mabel Wayne, composer of "Ramona"; Walt Roesner and His Capitolians; the Colonial Sextette; the Arnaut Brothers, an act well known to vaudeville; the Locust Sisters, harmonizing quartet, last seen in "Hit the Deck"; and Paul Tiejsen and His Orchestra, now appearing over the Loew Circuit.

Former Diplomat Joins Fox Movietone

William Gleason O'Brien, who for two and a half years has been United States Vice-Consul in Paris, has resigned from the Diplomatic Service to take a position as assistant to J. S. Connolly, general director for Fox Movietone in Europe, according to word received by Fox Films.

Bowes Heads M-G-M Sound Production in N. Y.

In addition to his duties as managing director of the Capitol Theatre, Edward J. Bowes will be in charge of all sound motion picture production for M-G-M at the Cosmopolitan Studio in New York. Chester Beecroft who has been in charge for Hearst at Cosmopolitan, becomes studio manager for M-G-M.

Vitaphone, Movietone For Loew's Dayton

William McManus, manager of Loew's Dayton, Ohio, announces that both Vitaphone and Movietone will be installed in his house immediately, which, he adds, will dent the company's exchequer about $50,000.

Half Million for "U" to Equip Theatres

UNIVERSAL Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., will invest close to half a million dollars in the installation of sound devices in strategically located theatres throughout the country, according to announcement from Charles B. Paine of the "U" Home Office. Universal already has three houses equipped and running with sound pictures, these being the Kenosha Theatre, Kenosha, Wisconsin, the Capitol Theatre, Grand Island, Nebraska, and the Broadway Theatre, Santa Ana, California. These houses are equipped for Vitaphone and Movietone presentations.

Location of the other houses will be announced shortly. H. M. Messiter, assistant to Mr. Paine, is now arranging for the buying and booking of sound and "talkie" entertainment.

Broadway Producers Acquire Vocafilm

Will Shoot Films As Soon As Stage Shows Are Under Way

which Mr. Woods is quoted as follows:

"There is no doubt that talking pictures have a big future, and we feel sure that the public as well as the owners of motion picture theatres want plays with the spoken words more than any other type of screen entertainment. The field for the showing of Broadway plays, treated as they will be by Vocafilm, is limitless.

"By forming an agreement with the New York theatres and other producers, we will be able to stem the raid that is now being made by the prominent picture companies upon the ranks of actors and directors of the spoken drama. It will also work to the best interests of the dramatists as well as to the producers, for the reason that stage plays will now no longer be mutilated when transferred to the screen.

"We will ask the American dramatists and the Actors' Equity for an early meeting to discuss this new development, with the object of bringing about a joint action for the protection of actors, producers and dramatists."

Payments of Royalties

Frank Gillmore, executive secretary of Equity, is quoted as follows regarding the new arrangement:

"The association does not question that the managers will ask Equity for its ruling on this matter before embarking on any such project. But in the meantime Equity members are forbidden to make any such recording of their current productions without first consulting Equity headquarters."

The question of authors' rights also enters into the new plan, but it is believed this will be satisfactorily adjusted by the payment of royalties on all touring films as though these were regular companies.

That some trouble is anticipated with Equity was expressed by a Shubert executive in the following terms:

"When a mediocre actor comes into these offices asking for a job, and gets it, he immediately flashes an Equity contract, which imposes all sorts of conditions on the producing manager. He will play only a certain number of shows a week; he will work only certain hours; he demands this and that, even to compelling the manager to replace a hat that might be lost while he is in the theatre. The contract submitted to the motion picture actor imposes no such conditions; directors may work them twenty-four or forty-eight hours at a stretch; they may do with them much as they please. These managers will not impose any such conditions, but they will see to it that the actor appearing on the stage, and at the same time in a picture, will not have all of the privileges provided him under a present Equity contract."

Williams and Hammons May Handle Vocafilm in England

PERSISTENT rumors that J. D. Williams and E. W. Hammons would jointly handle Photophone in England have been dispelled by Mr. Hammons, who, together with Mr. Williams, arrived in New York from England last week. The president of Educational declares that if he is to handle any sound reproducing device abroad with Jay Dee it will be Vocafilm and not Photophone. Arrangements in this direction, according to Mr. Hammons, have not yet been completed.

Mr. Hammons reiterated the statement made by Mr. Williams two months or so ago that Educational may handle the physical distribution of World Wide Pictures in this country. The latter organization is the British distributing concern headed by Mr. Williams. Negotiations between them, however, have not yet been settled.

Local Act Vitaphoned Proves Big Success

UTILIZING the Vitaphone for the reproduction of vocal music by a crack local organization, the Famous Forty Elks Chorus, Manager Samuel Friedman, of the Capitol Theatre Pottsville, Pa., has found an effective way of "Cashing in" with the "talkies" that is likely to be adopted by other progressive Pennsylvania theatres.

Before a crowded house on the night of July 9, Vitaphone selections by the local singers were reproduced with splendid effect, and then Manager Friedman sprang a surprise by introducing the members of the chorus in person on the stage.

There, under the direction of their leader, Edgar D. Brown, they sang some of the numbers that had just been reproduced on the machine.

It was the comment of a newspaper critic that the Vitaphone music was so good it could scarcely be distinguished from the actual singing of the chorus. The Famous Forty chorus sang for the records last May in the Brunswick studios, New York City.

Blattner to Produce for British Photophone

Blattner Picture Corporation of London will produce sound pictures for British Photophone. The films will be about 3,000 feet in length and will be mostly operatic with but little dialogue. Sound proof stages are to be built at the Ideal Studios at Elstree, where production activities will be carried on. The first subject to be made is not operatic. It is titled, "All Through the Night" and thousands of community singers will be used. "Carmen" is among the subjects to be made.

Technicolor Features Due With Sound

Herbert T. Kalmus, president and general manager of Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, announces that his company will produce feature length photoplays in technicolor. Ted Reed is manager in charge of production.

A story of Viking days, "The Thrall of Leif the Lucky," has been chosen as the first feature. In addition to the natural color reproduction, Technicolor pictures can be produced with sound and voice, using any of the tone methods now employed in conjunction with black and white subjects.

R. William Neill, director of Technicolor's "Great Events" series released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will direct the first Technicolor feature. Jack Cunningham has been appointed head of the scenario department.

New Orleans Approves Sound Films

Western Electric sound reproducing apparatus has been installed in the Saenger Theatre, New Orleans, and Movietone News made its debut in that house July 28. It is expected that Paramount's first sound picture, Richard Dix in "Warming Up" will go into the Saenger within a week or two.

Just four weeks ago Saenger Theares gave Vitaphone its start in the Tudor Theatre with "Glorious Betsy" and that picture, though not originally destined for so long a run, is still holding forth. "The Jazz Singer" is scheduled to follow, but just when it will go in is uncertain for there seems to be no waning of interest in "Glorious Betsy" after four consecutive weeks.

Powers to Write Titles, Dialogue for Warners

Francis Powers, playwright, actor and director, has been appointed by J. L. Warner as a title and dialogue writer for Warner Bros. Vitaphone pictures. His first assignment is not yet definite but it is understood that he will prepare the dialogue for one of several specials to be started within the next few weeks.

Warners Acquire "Stark Mad" As Talkie

J. L. Warner announces another Vitaphone feature with dialogue and sound effects throughout. It will be called "Stark Mad" and is adapted from a story just purchased by the Warner organization.

It is described as a mystery-thriller revolving around the exploits of a half-human chimpanzee.

Cleveland Library Exhibit Shows Talkies in All Phases

IN the Main Cleveland Public Library an exhibit on a bulletin board just inside the entrance calls attention to a larger exhibit on the second floor. In these exhibits an attempt is made to give an interested public some idea of how talking movies are made and operated.

The material shown includes a piece of Movietone film showing President Coolidge presenting Lindbergh with the Government medal on his return from Paris; an enlargement of a piece of film showing Bernard Shaw recording; photographs of a Photophone sound recorder and camera; of a Vitaphone camera padded to protect the recording artist from disturbing sounds; of a recording disc being microscopically examined for flaws; many photographs of the talking movie "The Lion and the Mouse"; photographs of a Photophone loud speaker; of a motion picture projector equipped for both film and disc reproduction; a studio scene showing that recording may be carried on at considerable distance from the source of sound so that the artists may be grouped naturally. There is also a photograph of Thomas Edison, inventor of motion picture film. The exhibit includes an actual Vitaphone record.

Market for U. S. "Talkies"

Great Britain, Germany and France Seen as Best Outlets for American Audible Pictures in Dept. of Com. Report

GREAT BRITAIN affords the best market for American sound productions, states "Commerce Reports," organ of the U. S. Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C. Germany and France are considered next in importance in the order named.

The report is as follows:

"The advanced popularity of the motion picture in Great Britain as a method of entertainment, the language similarity with the United States, and the extensive seating capacity in the large number of houses which open daily, tend to make England especially capable of assimilating the various ramifications involved in the American talking pictures. Many large cinemas are able to undertake the expense of necessary installations for the projection of the 'talking movie.' This fact, of course, should act as a stimulus to financial underwriters for this purpose.

"Germany, after England, offers the best prospect for American 'talking movies.' Its theatres are numerous enough to permit the installation of a large supply of projection equipment; its admission prices are of a scale sufficient to justify cinema owners purchasing this equipment.

"France, third in line of importance of European markets susceptible to this new departure, must be considered only as a remotely potential market. Its cinema admission scales are small as compared with England and Germany. The industry lacks credit and is not inclined to borrow for the future. At present it should be classed with other smaller countries in Europe as a market where the installation of the projection equipment for the talking motion picture is only possible in a few of the large-sized cinemas. In fact, interest in France has only reached the discussion stage.

"In England, circuit cinema owners are already estimating the cost of the equipment installation for the American inventions, so certain are they that they must be ready to provide their audiences with this latest form of theatre entertainment. There are in that country, three or four sound-film processes, which, either by equipment already installed in cinemas or by laboratory development on the ground, have some call on the foreign systems."

2 Sound Recorders Shipped to Pathe

Colvin W. Brown, Executive Vice-President of Pathe, announces that the two RCA Photophone sound recording equipments have been shipped by the General Electric Company to the Pathe Studios at Culver City, Calif. Accompanying the equipment is a staff of engineers. Immediately upon arrival work will be started retaking some scenes with talk in Cecil B. DeMille's personally directed special "The Godless Girl."

This application of dialogue to the picture will be in addition to the musical and sound effect synchronization which is already well under way.

Every department of Pathe production, features as well as shorts, has been actively engaged for months developing plans and perfecting methods for the application of sound. "Show Folks," with Lina Basquette, Eddie Quillan and Robert Armstrong; "The Spieler," with Jacqueline Logan and Alan Hale; "Annapolis," with Jeanette Loff and John Mack Brown; "Ned McCobb's Daughter," with Irene Rich; "Noisy Neighbors," with Eddie Quillan and the Quillan family; "The Leatherneck," starring Wiliam Boyd; "Square Shoulders," with Junior Coghlan and George Duryea, and "Listen Baby," with Lina Basquette and Eddie Quillan, are additional features on which musical synchronization is either under way or else set for early application. "The King of Kings" has already been synchronized.

Ray Hall, Editor of the Pathe News, has been working for weeks on the details of an organization that will apply sound effects to the Pathe News. His technical staff now believes that most of the difficulties have been solved.

St. Louis Houses Rushing in Equipment

With the Missouri, Ambassador and Loew's State theatres entering the sound picture field and the Grand Central already operating on that basis the St. Louis territory is beginning to realize that a new era has been ushered in on the film world.

Keiler's Columbia Theatre in Paducah, Ky., is equipped for both Vitaphone and Movietone, while Lyric Theatre in Springfield, Ill., is also playing sound pictures.

Sound producing equipment has been ordered for the new Majestic Theatre in East St. Louis, Ill., it is understood, while the Mattoon theatre, Mattoon, Ill., and the Illinois Theatre, Jacksonville, Ill., will also play sound pictures in the very near future. Columbia, Mo., also has a sound picture theatre.

Skouras Brothers are considering the Capitol Theatre, Sixth and Chestnut Street for a sound picture policy.

"Nize Baby" to Be Made With Sound, Dialogue

Milt Gross' "Nize Baby" is to be put on the screen by M-G-M with its choice dialogue intact. The production is to be given sound and dialogue accompaniment, and may possibly be made in New York City. Robert Harris, representing the coast studio, has arrived in New York and will make tests for several persons who are under consideration for roles in the picture.

Milt Gross has been at the M-G-M studio for several weeks past and is making the screen adaptation of his story. He will act as advisory supervisor.

Sebastian Signs Sessue Hayakawa for Talkie

Sessue Mayakawa, Japanese motion picture star, has been signed by Harry Sebastian to star in a picture titled "The Bandit Prince." There will be sound in the production, as well as a number of sequences done in technicolor. Hayakawa is the author of "The Bandit Prince." It is likely that Harry O. Hoyt will direct. No definite releasing arrangements have yet been made.

Traveling Camera Shot Made Possible

A new invention is reported perfected by Bryan Foy and Edward Dul'ar. For the first time a traveling camera shot is possible in talking pictnres and several of them will be used in "The Home Towners," Bryan Foy's latest directorial assignment.

Up to now it has been impossible to move the camera during the actual shooting of a sound sequence but the limitation is now removed. The moving shot is available for conveying certain types of action with remarkable brevity and force.

"Spies," German Film, to Be Released by M-G-M

"Spies," a Ufa production, will be distributed in the United States by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to an announcement by M-G-M. It is expected that the film will be given its first showing in the near future. The cast of the picture includes Rudolf Rogge, Willy Fritsch, Hertha Walther and other continental players. Fritz Lang, who made "Metropolis," directed.

Pre-View of Jannings Film at Schenectady Theatre

The State Theatre, Schenectady, New York, featured a pre-view showing of "The Age of Lust," an Emil Jannings vehicle, on the evening of August 1. Louis T. Rogers, who handles the production, arranged for the Schenectady showing with Wiilliam M. Shirley, of the State Theatre, and also made arrangements for a score for the picture and for an advertising campaign in connection with the pre-view.

"Thirst," Gilbert Film, to Have African Locale

John Gilbert's new story, "Thirst," which he will make following "The Mask of the Devil," will have a South African background. Most of its episodes will center in and around a remote region of the Congo. Production will be under Director William Nigh.

M-G-M's two fortheoming pictures, "West of Zanzibar" and "Trader Horn," will also have African locales.

"Show Girl" First National Release in September

"Show Girl," Alice White's initial stella vehicle for First National, adapted from the current novel by J. P. McEvoy, is now nearing the end of filming by Director Alfred Santell and will be released during September. It will be the first of four pictures to star Miss White, whose next will be "Hot Stuff."

Nashville Waits "Lion and Mouse" Opening

"The Lion and the Mouse" will introduce Vitaphone talking pictures at the Vendome, Loew's Nashville house, August 6. On the same bill there will be heard the Kentucky Jubilee Choir, Fox Movietone News and Joe Cook in Movietone.

Union Waiting Action Against Sound Film Problem

MUSICIANS, operators and stage hands' unions seem to have adopted a watchful waiting attitude with regard to sound and dialogue pictures, with indications that labor troubles will further complicate the talkies before the many other difficulties are straightened out.

William J. Canavan, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Machine Operators returned to New York from the Mid-west during the week and declared that a "hands off" policy would be adopted, with any disputes being settled locally. He said his organization was not actively interested in sound films as a national problem.

Meantime the American Federation of Musicians is completing a national survey on the public reaction to sound pictures and canned music. This report is due about the middle of August and future action will probably then be determined.

Ed. D. Haug, president of the Musical Mutual Protective Association Local No. 4, Cleveland, of the American Federation of Musicians opposes the use of mechanical music synchronized to screen action as a substitute for personal orchestra music, in an open letter in the Forum of THE PRESS.

Haug bases his opposition to mechanical music on purely artistic lines, stating that the substitution of mechanical music inevitably debases the art of music. Pointing out that the public taste in music has been greatly improved by the orchestral music provided in the motion picture theatre, he claims that the use of mechanical music is a step backward, which should be a matter of great public concern.

"We are not foolish enough," Haug says in his letter, "to propose that the public should be denied what it wants. If the public wants its music in this form it will get it. We are concerned only to prevent something being "slipped over" on the theatre patron. He may enjoy the synchronization plan as a new toy, but if he is not alert to the consequences he may find later that the toy has become the substitute for good music. It is a "creeping adulteration" of music that we are warning against.

Ed. W. Smith, business representative of the Los Angeles Musicians Union is quoted as saying that musicians affiliated with his union are not antagonistic to sound pictures. He expresses the opinion that eventually the mechanical devices reproducing music will react as a boon to musicians, as the radio has done. In Los Angeles, alone, he says, over $10,000 a week is paid in salaries to union musicians for radio work.

Indianapolis musicians are reported as waiting for word from the national organization before taking any definite action.

"Perfect Crime", FBO's First "Talkie", to Open at Rivoli

F B O has completed its first talking picture, "The Perfect Crime," and it opens at the Rivoli Theatre in New York, Saturday, August 4th. It has also been booked at the Rivoli in Baltimore simultaneously with the New York showing. The production has been synchronized with music, dialogue and sound effects. According to F B O, the film may be run on either Photophone or Movietone machines.

F B O has synchronized other specials, among them being "The Hit of the Show," "Gang War," "The Circus Kid," "Blockade" and "Taxi 13." "The Perfect Crime" was written by William Le Baron, and is based on Israel Zangwill's "The Big Bow Mystery." Clive Brook and Irene Rich head the cast.

Among the highlights promised in this first F B O "talkie" is an entire courtroom trial sequence, the action of which is synchronized with a verbal account of the attack of the prosecutor, the defense of his rival, the plea of the condemned boy, the verdict of found guilty of murder, and the shrieks of the newsboys calling the extras. Thrilling mystery effects are also promised.

Production Boom Looms With Over 50 Preparing to Start With Sound

IT is estimated that over fifty pictures will get under way next month or Hollywood and that sound of some sort will be injected into all of them. Revisions of production programs of practically all producing companies have been necessary and haste is being displayed now to get under way because of the new interest created by the "talkies."

Sound pictures will launch a production boom that has not before been surpassed and there is much confusion because of the new technique that must be applied. It is likely that many new faces will be seen in Hollywood recruited from the New York legitimate stage as actors and directors. Plans are being rushed with all haste and new names are being added to the lists daily.

MANAGERS ROUND TABLE CLUB
THE CLEARING HOUSE FOR BOX OFFICE PROBLEMS and THEATRE OPERATION

By Charles E. Lewis

Managing Director, Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., and Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Aboard Cruiser News

THE good ship NEWS set sail from New York on July 23rd, bound for points in the middle west. We dropped anchor at Wilkes Barre, Pa., and cruised around on foot in this busy little city where we found things theatrical in pretty good shape, notwithstanding the warm weather. . . . Set sail again and paused for just a few hours at Scranton, then on our way until Bloomsburg, Pa., where we again dropped anchor because we saw the front of the Capitol Theatre, and it had all the ear-marks of a corking theatre for so small a town. . . . and mighty glad we did stop because it gave us the opportunity of shaking hands with Manager Byron R. Linn, who pilots the Commerford houses in that town. . . . the Capitol is as neat a theatre as you will find anywhere and run as efficiently as any house on the Gay White Way. . . . it reminded us of Warner's Theatre because of the length and narrowness of construction. . . . Manager Linn told us some mighty interesting things which we will tell you about later. . . . and he knows what he's talking about because experience had been his teacher and from all appearances he was some pupil. . . . Full steam ahead into Sunbury which is getting all prepared for the arrival of the "talkies" very soon and expecting great things from it. . . . then on once more until dusk compelled us to drop anchor for the night in Lewistown. . . . another peppy town with some fine theatres. . . . and as in the other towns found a welcome on the mat for your skipper. . . . up early and set our course for Altoona, but luck was agin' us because the manager we called on was away. . . . and since we had to reach Pittsburgh by nightfall we did not linger . . . . and again full steam ahead arriving at this port late in the afternoon. Not much excitement at the smaller neighborhood houses but how the big downtowners were packing them in . . . . and the weather on the streets hot and stuffy . . . . Loew's-United Artists Penn Theatre had them packed into the lobby until after the last evening show started and they got their money's worth . . . .whoever said that only Broadway knows how to present a good show was all wrong . . . . in fact Broadway could pick up a few pointers right here . . .

Well . . . . the "crew" is tired but happy so "he" will turn in for some sleep . . . . More about Pittsburgh next week . . . . as well as some other ports we will visit between issues . . . . Midnight and all's well . . . . Good-night . . . .

Merchant Tie-Up Brings Profit

Tieing up with local merchants on a co-operative ticket proposition netted Manager Albert C. Oliver of the Capitol Theatre, Arlington, Mass., some extra business. We think he has the idea down to a science but we would rather let him describe it himself. Just drop him a line and he will send you all the "dope," and it's worth you while to do this. Besides it offers the opportunity of starting correspondence between members and that in itself will stimulate goodwill in the Club.

Puts "Atmosphere" in Ballyhoo

Frank P. Harpster, manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., used a novel street ballyhoo on "Across To Singapore" when he dressed up a six-footer as a Chinaman, with all the trimmings including the pigtail, and had him handing out cards on the streets telling the folks about the picture and the theatre. He also sent him to the leading hotels, department stores, etc., stirring up enough interest so that the box-office shouted its approval of the idea in business. There's an idea that could be utilized for dozens of different pictures and you must admit it is different. Try it yourself the first chance you get and we'll gamble that it digs up some business. Frank also tips us off to a coming tie-up on "Telling The World" which we are looking forward to publishing in the near future. Keep up the good work, we are watching you.

On Importance of "Little Things

Many managers of today believe that if they put over some "big" stunt, or if they erect an impressive out-door display, or if they do any other "big" thing around their theatre they have lived up to the idea that they are good managers.

No one will dispute the point. Whatever you do for your theatre and your patrons is a step nearer proper managership. But in most houses where business has been consistently good, where there is an air of satisfaction on the faces of the patrons and where everything goes along in smooth order, you will find that they have not overlooked the "little" things. Our own idea of some of these "little" things would be a smile and greeting from the cashier, a pleasant good-day from the doorman, a polite reply from an usher to a patron, and other little services such as serving ice water, helping patrons with their bundles or wraps and hundreds of other ways. It is surprising how long the memory of such things lingers, with the average theatregoer, long after he has forgotten about the show itself.

One of the most important factors in theatre-management today is Service and a man who is incapable of including it in his operation of a theatre will not last long.

Keep on doing those "big" things that we all delight in doing, either for ourselves or the people we work for. But don't forget that the "little" things are just as important.

Use Town's Name in Advertising

It has been suggested by many managers that wherever possible the name of the town or city be worked into the theatre's advertising. This is a mighty good suggestion because we have tried it many times. We cannot say with any particular success because who knows what percentage of business can be credited to any particular form of advertising? But it is eye-arresting to every local reader of your paper and they always like to see their town's name at the head of anything. Such captions as "The greatest show in Blankville"—"Blankville's theatrical event"—"The picture that has all Blankville roaring"—and many more like them will always brighten up your ad. Use such lines in bold type. Make them see it and then rest assured that they will read the rest of your ad.

Is Your Theatre Your Prison?

Unfortunately most managers today devote every moment of their time to their theatre, when they should be getting around and doing some visiting. Developing the habit of calling upon your brother exhibitors in neighboring towns. Sit down and talk things over and then let the other fellow come over to visit you. This is the only feasable way that you can find out how your own immediate surrounding communities are doing.

The other way is to follow closely the activities of the different theatre managers through the columns of the CLUB pages in the NEWS, week by week, and above all you must always keep in mind that a portion of these pages are at your disposal. If you have anything to say, whether it be exploitation, advertising or theatre operation, here is the logical medium through which you should express yourself.

George MacDonald up in New Hampshire writes in to say that he thought Whyte of Hartford was an old man. Why he should think so he failed to say, but he was agreeably surprised to see Whyte's picture on the CLUB page and now he knows different.

And that holds for you too. Let the rest of the world know what you look like. It is very interesting to study the photos of the various members which we published a short time ago. It is just as interesting as reading what they have to say for the benefit of others.

"All-Talkies" Demanded Says News Man

Let me tell about one particular town that I visited, where an exhibitor's rush to get an installation got him into a mess which he candidly told me may put him out of business. There are three theatres in this town all separately and independently operated. His house, however, was always the second run, chiefly because that was all he could get after his two "brother" exhibitors were through battling for pictures. He told me that he generally paid as "high" as ten dollars for a feature, and some were specials at that. Then he installed a talkie plant as a "fast one" on his opposition. Everything at first went great. He was able to get three synchronized pictures and the start was more than he ever anticipated. But then his troubles began. He found he was having trouble getting synchronized pictures, and his plant only did good business with them. Whenever he ran an ordinary feature, with a few acts and Movietone News, his business took a tail-dive. And now he was getting gray worrying where he would get pictures for next season, since his two opposition houses were after the big product regardless of talkie or synchronization. Yes, he said he could buy plenty of them away from the opposition but he would "lose his shirt" if he had to pay such prices as they were asking.

It is conceded that the industry was, and is, in a critical stage. If anyone doubts it just ask the exchanges how much product they have sold to date. Exhibitors and producers alike were wondering where it would all end, when lo and behold, there appeared on the movie horizon Al Jolson and "The Jazz Singer" and in it the producers and exhibitors saw the salvation of the industry. Something had happened. Something that was badly needed had happened and they all seemed to know it at the same time. Then came the mad rush for talkies, the producers announced fifty per cent or more of next year's pictures would be in sound. And the handwriting on the wall was plain. BUT, if talkies are to be the salvation of the business then the producers must recognize this fact and not merely use sound pictures as a means of pounding out higher rentals for mediocre pictures just because they have synchronized them. Such action on their part will only tend to retard progress and keep back that measure of perfection in talkies that approval and support by the exhibitors will stimulate.

The answer is plain. Good sound pictures MUST be forthcoming. Fair rentals must be asked, and paid. Equipment must be brought down in cost, to the level where the average small town theatre can afford one without risking his entire business.

Mr. Johnston was right when he said that the business was in a critical stage, but there seems to be a turn for the better providing producers and exhibitors alike will meet it in a fair and businesslike way.

Production at "U" Studio Reaches New Peak

Six Features and Seven Shorts in Filming; Four Other Films in Preparation and Set for Early Start

PRODUCTION activities at the Universal studio in Universal City have reached their highest peak for the year. Thirteen productions are in various stages of filming, and four additional features are being prepared for immediate launching into production.

Foremost among the features Universal has in work is "Show Boat," the special in which Laura La Plante and Joseph Schildkraut are playing under the direction of Harry Pollard. Two other important films on the Universal schedule that are now before the cameras are "The Last Warning," a mystery play starring Laura La Plante and directed by Paul Leni, and "The Girl on the Barge," a picturization of the story by Rupert Hughes, co-featuring Sally O'Neill and Jean Hersholt.

Ted Wells is working in a new western, "Born to the Saddle," under Josef Levigard's direction; William Cody is starring in "Eyes of the Underworld," which Leigh Jason is directing, and William Wyler is finishing "The Shakedown," with James Murray and Barbara Kent.

The features now being prepared and set for an early start are "The Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City," to be directed by William Craft; "The Play Goes On," to star Conrad Veidt, and to be directed by Paul Fejos; "Red Hot Speed," a new Reginald Denny vehicle which Joseph Henaberry will direct; and "It Can Be Done," a Glenn Tryon comedy, to be directed by Fred Newmeyer.

"The Collegians" and "Horace in Hollywood" are among the comedy series of short subjects in production. The first, starring George Lewis, is being directed by Nat Ross, while the latter is being made by Edward Luddy, with Arthur Lake in the featured role. "The Mystery Rider," a serial starring William Desmond, directed by Jack Nelson; "Riders of the Sierras," starring Edmund Cobb, directed by Ray Taylor; "Cowboy Pluck," starring Bob Curwood, directed by Walter Fabian, and a Laemmle novelty, directed by Jacques Rollens, are other short subjects that will soon be completed.

Directorial Assignments

F. Harmon Weight will direct "Hard Boiled Rose," new Warner Bros. film to star Myrna Loy. Robert Lord has completed the script. . . . Spencer Bennett is directing "Marked Money" for Pathe. He will next begin "The Fire Detective," serial. . . . Ray Enright will direct "Stolen Kisses," now being cast at the Warner studio. May McAvoy to star.

James Hall and Ben Lyon, actor aviators in "Hell's Angels," $2,000,000 war film produced by Howard Hughes for United Artists

Luther Reed Finishes Play

Luther Reed has completed the play upon which he has been working with William Le Baron and which has been approved by a local producer for an early presentation.

Lesley Mason Fox Titler

Malcolm Stuart Boylan has again evidenced his wisdom. He has added Lesley Mason to his staff of title writers at Fox Films.

Sign Contracts

Nancy Dover, Christie girl, has signed a long-term contract with the comedy producers; her first appearance will be with Bobby Vernon. . . . Lillian Ducey has signed with Tiffany-Stahl and is now writing the continuity of "The Devil's Apple Tree". . . . Vivian Moses, head of the story department of Paramount, last week signed new contract.

New Color Classic

"Maude Muller," the title of Whittier's poem, adorns a new color classic being directed by Howard Mitchell for Tiffany-Stahl with Priscilla Bonner in the lead. Others include William Dillon, Allan Sears and Elinor Vandeveer.

The Modern Method

Perhaps there's no finer way to scout out location sites than from an airplane. Reginald Barker and Captain Twitchell have just returned to the Tiffany-Stahl studio from an airplane hunt for locations in which to shoot scenes for "The Rainbow."

A Donn Byrne Novel

George Fitzmaurice will make "Changeling" as his next picture for First National. Dorothy Mackaill will play the leading role and the picture will be synchronized with a court-room sequence comprising a full-talking scene.

Night Club

A night club was constructed at the First National studio for important sequences of "Show Girl." Alice White and Donald Reed are entertainers in the show with Charles Delaney and Lee Moran among the patrons. More than 150 extras were used for this one scene. In this picture, Alfred Santell will direct himself as an actor.

Titling and Editing

Al Martin has just completed titling "The Albany Night Boat," Frederick and Fanny Hatton are busy now with the titling of "Beautiful But Dumb," and Sherman Kell has begun to edit "The Gun Runner." All are Tiffany-Stahl productions.

New Roach Comedies

New titles bestowed on Hal Roach comedies recently are "Is Everybody Happy?" Charley Chase comedy, "Early to Bed," laugh number for Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, and "School Begins," "Our Gang" comedy.

Don McElwaine, Author

Don McElwaine wrote "The Big Hop," Buck Jones' first picture as an actor-producer, which will have its premiere in a Broadway, New York, house if Buck's plans mature.

Production at Pathe

"Marked Money" was put into production at the Pathe studios on July 12.

Hollywood—Continued

"Singapore Sal" was started on July 16 by Director Howard Higgin.

It is expected that "Show Folks" will be finished within a week's time. "Craig's Wife" is now finished and "Celebrity," "Captain Swagger" and "Annapolis" are being edited.

New Burbank Productions

Four new pictures were placed into production at the First National studio last week. They were: "Outcast," "Scarlet Seas," "Do Your Duty" and "The Haunted House."

In addition to these, in various stages of cutting and editing are: "Oh Kay," "The Divine Lady," "Out of the Ruins," "The Night Watch," "Heart Trouble" and "The Glorious Trail."

Navy Department to Cooperate

Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur has promised complete cooperation on the part of the Navy Department in making "Dirigible," according to the Paramount West Coast studio. Wilbur's assurance of aid was given John Monk Saunders, who conferred with Navy Department officials.

Lloyd Remains at the Met

Harold Lloyd will produce his pictures at the Metropolitan studios for the next two years, at least, as William R. Fraser, general manager of the Lloyd Corporation, has concluded negotiations with Phil Ryan representing Metropolitan to retain the same production space Lloyd has used since he started out independently five years ago. All provisions have been made for the production of "sound" films should the bespectacled comedian deem it practicable to enter that field.

Harold Byron Columbia Scenarist

With the second group of pictures on the 1928-29 program at Columbia about to be launched in production, Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production for that company announces the signing of Harold Byron as scenario editor. In his new affiliation with Columbia, according to Cohn, Byron will begin immediately on the assignment of writers to "Runaway Girls," and two other productions.

Bess Meredyth Resumes Work

Bess Meredyth, wearing patches of adhesive tape as the result of a motor accident, is back at her desk at M-G-M working her typewriter overtime in order not to delay production of "The Woman of Affairs," for which she is writing the 'script.

"The Toilers" Shown

The distinction of being the first independent picture to be shown at United Artists Theatre in Los Angeles, was accorded Reginald Barker's "The Toilers," produced by Tiffany-Stahl. Its world premier was attended by fifty members of The Motion Picture Directors Association and representatives of every organization of prominence in the industry, including the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Wampas, the American Society of Cinematographers, the Writers, the Hollywood Association of Foreign Correspondents and a dozen other societies.

Added to Quirk Writing Staff

Katherine Albert, formerly feature writer on the staff of Pete Smith, director of publicity for M-G-M, has been appointed by Mark Larkin now western editor of the Quirk publications, as a feature and fiction writer.

Screen Newcomer

An independent motion picture unit has been organized by Harry D. Edwards, with Henry Falaise and an all star cast to appear in a story entitled "Yours to Command." The newcomer to the screen has heretofore been known as Henri, the Marquis de la Falaise, but since Gloria Swanson became his wife, and after spending much time in America, he has become Americanized and as plain Henry Falaise has signed a long-term contract with Edwards to appear in a series of productions.

Different Roles for Mary Philbin

It appears that Carl Laemmle, Universal's president, thought well of Mary Philbin's contribution to "Drums of Love," in which D. W. Griffith production she played a sophisticated role, for Laemmle has issued implicit instructions that more stories giving Mary opportunity to appear in worldly roles be purchased. "The Summer Shower," an original by Ilone Fulop, Hungarian authoress, is to be the first under the new classification set for Miss Philbin.

Born in Illinois and New York

Elizabeth Pickett, scenario and title writer—and director, was born in Chicago, Illinois and took a peculiar course to the motion picture industry as to becoming identified with it professionally. She went via the American Red Cross, in Washington, D. C., to Hollywood. A graduate of Wellesley College, with the class of 1918 and with an A. B. degree in liberal arts, she took up work as a historian with the Red Cross. She wrote "The History of Red Cross Nursing," and "The Primer of the American Red Cross."

While engaged in that work Miss Pickett became interested in the propaganda pictures the Red Cross were making. Her first experience was in the making of a one-reel picture entitled "In Florence Nightingale's Footsteps." It was a comparatively low hurdle from the Red Cross Bureau of Motion Pictures to the William Fox lot and since she took the jump, Miss Pickett has had more than her share of success. She has directed, edited and titled a variety of pictures. Among these she adapted and titled "Kentucky Pride," "Wings of the Storm," and "The Monkey Talks." She also wrote "Wolf Fangs," and "Navajo." Her most recent achievement was the story of "Red Skin," for Richard Dix.

Lucien Prival, although educated in Germany, was born in New York City, but he did begin his film career in Germany and first appeared in "Dio Kelptomanin." He acquired his stage experience while touring Germany with repertoire companies, but eventually young Prival and his family returned to New York.

His first picture engagement in America was in "Velvet Fingers," a Pathe serial. He was preparing to go back on the stage when he received a call to play in Al Rockett's production for first National, called "Puppets." In this he made a success and other engagements followed, including roles in "The Great Deception," "Just Another Blonde," and "High Hat."

Prival specializes in character roles, old men, abnormal and subnormal types, which he enjoys doing, although he is young and attractive in every day life. He is well informed and spends his spare time writing.

Recently Prival has played in Caddo productions and will appear in "Hell's Angels," and "The Mating Call."

Del Ruth Finishing "Noah"

A whim of fate brought Roy Del Ruth one of the choicest directorial opportunities of the year. It resulted from the unfortunate sudden illness of Michael Curtiz who was directing Warner Brothers' "Noah's Ark," but was compelled to abandon the task due to severe indisposition. Del Ruth picked up the threads where his predecessor left off.

Garnett's New Picture

Pathe-DeMille officials are so well pleased with Tay Garnett's first directorial effort, "Celebrity," that they have entrusted him with "The Spieler," which will feature Jacqueline Logan and Alan Hale. It is a circus story and will go into production before "The Flying Fool" because of William Boyd's engagement elsewhere.

Leads for Norse Saga

R. William Neill, now directing Technicolor's first feature length production, "The Thrall of Leif the Lucky," has selected a cast headed by Pauline Starke and LeRoy Mason. Except for these leading roles, all in the cast are six feet tall and of heavyweight proportions since the story is one of Viking days of a thousand years ago and Pauline Starke plays the only girl part.

No Statement

Joseph P. Kennedy, president F B O, arrived in town last Monday. Although besieged by reporters for statement as to proposed changes to be made he has up to date given out no news.

Cast for Villainess Role

Dorothy Revier will enact the role of "Milady de Winter" in the new Douglas Fairbanks production, for which the cast has been filled except for the role of the Queen.

William de Mille

William de Mille has perhaps succeeded more cleverly than anyone else in accurately transposing the work of famous authors to the screen.

De Mille brought the Leonard Merrick feeling into the picturization of "Conrad in Quest of His Youth." He transposed the Zona Gale tempo into his screen version of "Lulu Bett." He brought Barrie genuinely to the screen with "What Every Woman Knows."

De Mille's most recent experience is that of picturizing "Craig's Wife," the George Kelly play. The director lost none of the deftness of the Kelly touch in the motion picture version.

Key City Reports

New York City

TAKING into consideration the fact that it is the midsummer season, with vacations, beach resorts and a champion heavyweight fight acting as a counter-pull, there can be no real kick about business done along Broadway last week. Business was, in fact, very good, with the big Roxy leading the pack. The big Fox house took away almost a quarter of a million at the close of a second week's run on "The Street Angel (Fox), and is holding this picture for a third week. Other Fox specials will follow this one and the long looked for spurt on Roxy grosses is apparently here.

The Capitol also had a very good week's trade with "Forbidden Hours," (M-G-M), doing a much better business in this hot weather than it did before Old Sol started to get in its wallop. The Paramount also enjoyed continued prosperity, but, rather unusually, trailed the other two big houses. The feature at the Paramount was "Hot News" (Par.).

After showing at the Paramount to excellent business, "Warming Up" (Par), with sound effects, went into the Rivoli for a whirl—probably about two weeks. Business last week was fair, undoubtedly suffering from the big Paramount attendance. Another post-Paramount showing, "The Racket" (Par) at the Rialto, did about the same brand of business during its second week.

The talking picture, "Lights of New York" (WB), finished its three weeks' stay at the Strand to profitable returns, continuing to hold the new lease on life this veteran house took when it inaugurated a Vitaphone program. Consensus on this picture is that while not a polished product of sound studios, it has enough novelty to strongly get by as a good box office bet. The Cameo cashed in nicely with a couple of hunting pictures, "An Arctic Seal Hunt" and "Hunting Big Game in Africa."

It is well to record here that the Criterion is right on the very edge of celebrating the fifty-second week of the aviation special "Wings" (Par), and a right gratifying year's run it's been. Not many weeks in the entire year have been off, and Paramount has a right to shout out loud. True, this picture has received a lot of breaks on the big airplane flights during the year, and has cashed in somewhat on the tremendous amount of publicity—but the picture has real merit, too.

One new special came to town last week when Fox' "Lost in the Arctic," accompanied by Movietone, opened at the Gaiety. It is too early to get real dope on this one. Another Fox special, "The Red Dance," also with Movietone, continues at a very fair pace at the Globe. The Embassy, with "The Tempest" (UA) continues to moderately good trade, and Warner's, with the Vitaphoned "Lion and Mouse" (WB) showed very well for the week.

The Astor opened on Tuesday of the current week M-G-M's first sound picture, "White Shadows in the South Seas." Tell you something next week on this one.

Des Moines

AT the Des Moines theatre Esther Ralston's picture, "Half a Bride," though considered rather a week film, was well received and the matinees were crowded. The cool theatre attracted many on the warm days.

At the Capitol theatre strong competition was offered with Clara Bow in "Ladies of the Mob," and the stage show was also very good with Jay Mills as master of ceremonies for "Gems." Clara Bow is a good drawing card.

"The Warning" at the Strand theatre for the first half of the week was not considered as attractive as many of the Jack Holt films, but the film for the last helf, "Three-Ring Marriage," with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, was considered a very good business maker and did fine.

Tampa

ONCE last summer the refrigerating plant of the Tampa, which supplies the "manufactured weather" for it and the Franklin across the street, went out of commission and Monday of this past week history repeated itself. Sunday had opened up very good with "Telling the World" as the feature, but Monday no one was allowed to enter without being told of the failure of the cooling system and so the business was off.

The plant functioned properly again on Tuesday, but in spite of the fact that the picture was excellent the business was hardly up to average.

"Half a Bride" was the feature of the last half and it did nicely.

The Victory continued to pull the usual big business with the Vitaphone and Movietone. This week "State Street Sadie" was the feature, backed up by an excellent bill of Vitaphone acts and Movietone News.

The Franklin opened the week with "Prowlers of the Sea." This picture had special appeal to the Latin people and Sunday went very good. Monday, even though all were warned that it was warm inside, went over to better than the usual Monday business.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" and "Harold Teen" were the second runs of the week and both pictures did nicely, with the Shepherd pulling better than average. "The Man in the Rough" used Saturday only did average.

The Strand got away to a poor start with "The Scarlet Dove," which showed up only fair. "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" was well liked but couldn't pull 'em better than average. "Detectives" proved about the same, so the week went over a little under average.

Indianapolis

(Previous Week)

HOT weather cut heavily in box office receipts in Indianpolis last week. The movie houses had the most unsatisfactory week's business of the summer. It was quite a drop from the previous week which was bolstered by rainy weather. The heat was extreme every day last week.

Lyric vaudeville and picture house led the downtown business with Raymond Hitchcock appearing in person.

Loew's Palace bolstered business some with the installation of a new cooling system. John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Cossacks" was the feature, with Harry Fox's stage show, "Spices of 1928."

Rod La Rocque in "Hold 'Em Yale" at the Circle and Esther Ralston and Gary Cooper in "Half a Bride' at the Indiana were the Skouras-Publix house attractions. Business was not up to expectations in either house.

"The Lion and the Mouse," featuring Lionel Barrymore which was held the second week at the Apollo did fair business.

Neighborhood houses also felt the result of depressing heat.

Baltimore

ANOTHER scorching week which sent the mercury up into the hundreds with high humidity causing great discomfort, held patrons away from a number of the first-run moving picture theatres during the week beginning Monday, July 23.

The high spots for good business were at the refrigerated Loew's Century and Valencia and the fan-cooled Rivoli.

At the Century, "Half a Bride," starring Esther Ralston, was the feature film, with Ocean Blues with "Ted Claire and his orchestra, the Foster girls and other vaudeville headliners on the bill. The audience liked the stage attraction but could not stomach some of the absurdities in "Half a Bride." Especially some of those in the desert island sequences. But business was very good throughout the week.

At Loew's Valencia "Ramona" held forth with Dolores Del Rio for a very good business during its second week at that playhouse.

At the Rivoli, "State Street Sadie," featuring Conrad Nagel, Myrna Loy and William Russell, went into the first week after the theatre reopened Saturday previous, and with the sound, music and dialogue accompaniment it proved a fine drawing card. On the bill was also Movietone news and other sound acts. This reopening proves another inning for the talkies here.

"Quo Vadis," the First National reissued picture starring Emil Jannings, did a fairly good business at the Little Theatre.

"Hot News," starring Bebe Daniels, proved a fairly good drawing card at the Stanley, with a stage presentation act "It Might Happen," with Buddy Page, and his band and other vaudeville headliners on the bill. Bebe Daniels was very good in this, and it was liked by the people.

At the Keith-Albee New Garden "Bachelor's Paradise," co-featuring Sally O'Neil and Ralph Graves, proved a fairly good attraction, with six acts of Keith-Albee high-class vaudeville. Business there throughout the week could only be considered fair.

The same was true of the Keith-Albee Hippodrome, where five acts of Keith-Albee family time vaudeville with "Name the Woman," starring Anita Stewart, as the feature film.

Kansas City

(Previous Week)

ODDLY enough, a torrid week of weather failed to have hardly any decreasing effect upon attendance at first run houses in Kansas City, although a strong line-up of pictures probably was largely responsible for that fact.

At Loew's Midland "Ramona" played to exceptionally good crowds all week, the total attendance exceeding any weekly attendance for several previous weeks.

At the Newman Ramon Novarro in "Forbidden Hours" played to a normal summer attendance.

At the Pantages Barry Norton in "Fleetwing" drew houses which were fairly well crowded all week.

William Boyd in "The Cop" also had a profitable run at the Mainstreet, the attendance remaining up to the standard of the previous weeks thus far this summer.

"The Street of Forgotten Women" at the Capitol also played to a good attendance.

No special exploitation was used on the pictures, a large part of newspaper advertising being devoted to the cooling systems of the theatres.

Philadelphia

ANOTHER week of hot weather, with vacations in full swing, made deep inroads in box office receipts, although the downtown theatres tempted the crowds with the cool breezes blowing inside.

William Haines in "Telling the World" at the Stanley proved to be a good attraction, due in part to a striking publicity stunt which attracted widespread attention.

"The Fox, with "United States Smith" on the screen and "A Midsummer Syncopation Gambol," featuring Fred Rich and his Hotel Astor orchestra, with a number of more or less entertaining performers, had a fairly good week.

The Carman had a good week with one of the liveliest and most entertaining stage presentations of the season, entitled "Vacation Frolics," with thrills galore in the screen offering "Chicago After Midnight."

The "Last Moment" at the Arcadia is an unusual film and an experiment in a new field of expression, that of phychology, with only one subtitle. Business was only fair.

John Gilbert in "The Cossacks" completed a third and final week at the Stanton, with average results.

All the Equity Theatres hooked up with radio broadcasting stations and announced the returns of the Tunney-Heeney boxing contest. At several of the theatres arrangements were made for amplification through the use of the Vitaphone.

Seattle

THE last week was a moderately quiet one with the film houses—no outstanding attractions appeared to disturb the peace of the box office, and grosses were rather low as a result.

"Something Always Happens" was the attraction at the Seattle Theatre, key house, but it did not arouse particularly strong patronage. On the stage was the Publix unit, "Hula Blues," which had its entertaining and scenic sequences, but was a trifle long and draggy. Altogether a fair week but no better.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre "The Wheel of Chance" was the screen attraction. Barthelmess has been highly popular here, but his recent films have been decidedly mediocre and this one was no exception. It did not please the audiences and consequently did only a fair business. On the stage Fanchon-Marco's "Television" Idea was well received, but Hermie King and the Fifth Avenue Band again stopped the show and set the town talking with their specialties.

"After the Storm" at the Columbia Theatre was a mediocre film, and did not register very heavily at the box office. Jan Sofer and the new concert orchestra were well received, but business for the week was below par. The same might be said for "Three Sinners' at the United Artists Theatre, where business was just moderate, even at the 25-cent admission rate.

The Blue Mouse Theatre continued to play to pleasing houses all week, with "The Lion and the Mouse" in its fourth week on that screen. It was the end of the engagement, and the total month's run ran well up in the profit column for the box office, as has been the custom at this theatre all season.

"The Siren" was an average attraction at the Embassy Theatre, and played to the usual business.

The same holds good for "Drums of Love," which played second run at Universal's Winter Garden Theatre. This house is hovering between a first and second-run policy at 35 cents, and might possibly be better patronized if a definite policy was adopted and the show-going public appraised of the same.

The two vaudeville houses had a little battle of their own all week, with Universal getting the benefit. The Orpheum booked "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," and featured it on their screen. Pantages, who has purchased the Universal 1929 program output, cancelled a previously-booked picture, and rushed in a pre-release of "Home, James."

Laura LaPlante was "all over town" as a result, and Pantages got the break in patronage, due more to the stage attractions than anything else.

St. Louis

(Previous Week)

VITAPHONE'S first full length sound picture "Lights of New York" got away to a flying start at the Grand Central Theatre, Grand and Boulevard and Lucas avenue, and has been held over indefinitely.

Several good short length Vitaphone subjects helped to fill out a 100 per cent program of entertainment.

The St. Louis Theatre had a good week, considering weather conditions, etc., with "Alias the Deacon" as its screen feature. There was also a good comedy and choice bits from the news reels, etc.

The Missouri Theatre got its share of the patrons along St. Louis' Gay White Way with Bebe Daniels in "Hot News." Bebe has always been popular in St. Louis and went across big in this one. Frank Fay had a good stage show to hold his end of the program.

Down at Skouras Brothers Ambassador Theatre the screen feature was "Red Lips," a comedy of college life. Ed Lowry on the stage offered "Cameos." Business averaged well for the season.

Loew's State Theatre featured John Gilbert in "The Cossacks." Nat Nazzarro, Jr., had a frolic "Let 'Er Go" as his stage show.

"The Road to Ruin' a jazz-age film based on a story from the Los Angeles Juvenile Court was offered to men only at the Capitol.

Cleveland

AS between the melodrama and the comedy, local honors last week went to the heavies. Business, taken by and large, was just fair. Two pictures, however, stood out preeminently from a box office point of view in spite of continued heat and occasional showers, which added to the general humidity, instead of offering relief. The two outstanding successes were "The Lion and the Mouse" and "The Bellamy Trial."
